New Move Planned By Jett in Battle On Bandit Brigade

Will Draw on Traffic, Motorcycle and Mounted Force, and Put Men in Plain Clothes.

OFFICERS TRICKED, STATION IS ROBBED

"Dapper Bandit's" Relatives To Pay Losses in Effort To Lighten His Sentence, Poole States.

The police war on bandits Saturday brought forth the following new developments:

1. Acting Chief of Police E. L. Jett announced that he would immediately draw upon his force of traffic, motorcycle and mounted policemen, put them in plain clothes and throw them into the fight to quell bold highwaymen who have been operating on an extensive scale.

2. The chief pointed out that this action would weaken the enforcement of traffic laws, and appealed to the general public to report cases of reckless driving, speeding and other violations in the interest of maintaining safety.

3. Four men—three of whom are youths and the fourth a middle-aged man—were arrested late Saturday afternoon on suspicion of being implicated in recent raids and are held on blanket charges of suspicion without privilege of bond pending thorough questioning.

Will Repay Losses.

4. Detective A. Lamar Poole, whose excellent work in connection with Detective S. A. Smith and others was responsible for the recent capture of the "dapper bandit" trio, announced that he had been informed by Judge John S. Candler, attorney for W. M. Beckley, one of the three held, that Beckley's relatives in Florida had supplied him with sufficient money to repay losses in all robberies in which Beckley participated. He stated that he was further informed that Judge Candler intended to request the judge on whose calendar in Fulton superior court the case has been placed to accept this fact as a mitigating circumstance.

5. A clever youth who employed two distinctly new ruses in the bandit game, Saturday held up and robbed a filling station at West Peachtree place and Spring streets, locking employees in a wash room and escaping with loot of from $500 to $700. Just before raiding the station, the youth sent the "bandit squad" of police on a rush call to a distant spot to capture a "robber" reported to have been working at West Peachtree and Fourteenth streets. His movements have been traced by police and show that before the robbery he went to a pressing club on Spring street near the business district; left a new suit and hat there, changing into khaki trousers and old gray felt hat. He then proceeded to the scene of the robbery; hailed a taxicab and rode back to the pressing club; donned his freshly pressed outfit, and escaped.

The four bandit suspects arrested Saturday gave their names as William Benson, 16, Sam Rudisil, 19, both of 25 West Baker street, and Floyd Williams, 22, and C. H. Monroe, both of College Park.

Station Is Robbed.

The robbery of the filling station shortly after noon Saturday was perhaps the boldest undertaking in the series of robberies which has terrorized Atlanta merchants for many weeks, and followed on the heels of the hold-up Friday of two L. W. Rogers grocery stores. Descriptions furnished officers of the filling station bandit tally with descriptions of the Rogers store bandits.

The men now in custody are believed to be members of a gang responsible for the recent series of daring robberies, though they have not been definitely connected with any "stick-up job." Special officers and detectives are spreading a dragnet for others believed to know something of the robberies.

Police received a call to the filling station at West Peachtree and Fourteenth streets just a few minutes be-

BLAST OF DYNAMITE TRAPS 235 MINERS; 7 DEAD, 24 INJURED

Berlin, May 16.—An explosion of 4,000 pounds of dynamite trapped 235 miners in a mine shaft at Dorstfeld, near Dortmund, this afternoon. Seven bodies and 24 wounded men have been removed from the mine and the rescue work is progressing while the wives and children of the entombed men wait silently at the pit head.

The force of the explosion destroyed the pit machinery and so injured the works that rescue work is proving extremely difficult.

The dynamite was stored in a mine depot near the pit mouth, and the fumes of the burnt explosive rapidly descended into the pit and down into the lower works, where many of the miners are believed to have been asphyxiated.

AMERICA REQUESTS EUROPEAN POWERS SETTLE WAR DEBTS

France, Italy, Belgium, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia Formally Asked for Funding Proposals.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, May 16.—After more than three years of waiting, the United States government has initiated steps to obtain funding settlements from its foreign debtors. The powers to whom this nation made war or post-war loans have been acquainted with American opinion that some move should be made by them toward liquidation.

Although officials of this government insisted today that they held no desire to press unduly for payments, they feel, and France, Italy, Belgium, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia have been so advised, that the American government is entitled to have funding proposals submitted.

The other principal debtors, Jugo-Slavia, Esthonia, Latvia and Greece, are aware of the Washington view also, but it was not made clear tonight whether American diplomatic officials in those countries have been asked to carry settlement suggestions directly to them.

France Largest Debtor.

In addition to the diplomatic maneuvers made with respect to the debts generally, France has been informed by Ambassador Herrick that the American government would be pleased if a French commission would be sent here. Inasmuch as France is the largest debtor among those countries whose obligations remain unpaid, this phase of the general debt move was regarded as not without some significance. The French debt appeared to be the hub about which a gigantic debt wheel revolved.

Simultaneously with the disclosure of the move to develop action on the part of the foreign nations, an expression emanated from official sources that the American government could not permit a distinction to be made for prosecution of the world war, those for post-war relief unpaid bills or the sale of surplus supplies.

This was regarded as the answer to the several statements in European capitals in which mention was made and differences set down between the various kinds of loans. The American government, it was explained, cannot recognize any so-called political loan as being different from a loan covering the purchase of war supplies or for use in relief work.

Details Kept Secret.

While details of the government's move remained undisclosed there was evidence that the information given the foreign powers was tantamount to a circular note, reminding them that the American debt commission was created in February, 1922, for the purpose for negotiating funding settlements, and that only five nations had availed themselves of the privileges thereby extended. The treasury holds demand notes of all debtor nations save Great Britain, Finland, Poland, Hungary and Lithuania, to whom it gave financial assistance, A billion and a half dollars in interest has accrued on the demand notes.

Official comment on the steps ini-

Winner of Kentucky Derby and His Rider

FLYING EBONY

EARL SANDE

Flying Ebony, a 100 to 1 shot in the winter books, captured the 51st running of the rich Kentucky Derby Saturday, due to the masterful riding of Earl Sande, premier American jockey.

The race was run before the largest crowd that has ever witnessed the Derby, America's classic of the turf.

QUAKES MENACE EASTERN CITIES, SURVEY REVEALS

Eight Shocks Since September 30, 1924, Indicate Region Is in Grip of Geological Readjustment.

New York, May 16.—Earthquakes must be added to the risks of life in cities in eastern United States, is the conclusion of the Engineering Economic Foundation, of Boston, a survey of whose exhaustive studies, covering several years, will be published tomorrow by The New York Times.

Eight distinct shocks have been felt in this section of North America since September 30, 1924, indicating that this region is in the grip of a periodic readjustment of the earth's surface, in the opinion of Dr. Kirby F. Mather, professor at Harvard university.

Dr. Mather says that there have been earthquakes in this region "of number eight intensity," nearly equal to that of San Francisco in 1906, and there is no reason to believe there will not be others.

Probable Effects Studied.

The foundation has prepared a description of the probable effects of a number eight earthquake in the "made-ground" sections of cities like New York and Boston.

It says that houses, built poorly so as not to sway as a unit, probably would collapse; elevators and other stationary machines would be jammed; pipe lines of water, oil and gas will be liable to rupture, and fires break out; oil freed from reservoirs would add to the fire hazard and the population would suffer from shock, panic, death from fire and wounds, disease, exposure and famine.

Measures preparatory for such an emergency have occupied the special study of the foundation, which holds that public education is the only insurance against confusion and greatly increased death tolls in time of earthquake disaster.

75 Per Cent Saved By Foresight.

Dr. Thomas A. Jagger, one of the world's leading seismologists and a fellow of the foundation, who studied the results of the Tokio disaster of 1923 on the ground, estimates that at least 75 per cent of the loss could be eliminated by foresight and decision, such as is embodied in the foundation's program.

The foundation proposes to have earthquake maps prepared for each city of the northeastern area and to stimulate seismological research. Its staff also is working with such problems as how transportation could be carried on in an earthquake emergency, when subways and elevated roads may be put out of business.

The foundation's historical studies show that besides the San Francisco tremor of 1906, there have been destructive shocks in the United States and eastern Canada in recorded history, in the St. Lawrence valley in 1663; the Boston region in 1755; the lower Mississippi valley, centering

7 Boys, Frightened by Men, Are Believed Lost in Swamp

:: YOUTHS HAD BEEN ON CHURCH PICNIC ::

Tampa, Fla., March 16.—Routed from their church picnic by a band of men believed to have been drunken revelers, seven boys, ranging in age from 10 to 13, this morning are lost in an almost impenetrable swamp about 15 miles northeast of Plant City, according to telephone messages from that place. Organized bands of searchers have been formed to aid county officials in what is feared may be a fruitless hunt for the boys.

The boys' picnic, originally made up of eleven; four of whom managed to find their way back to Plant City, was staged Friday afternoon at Lake Thonotosassa, with John Branch, a Sunday school teacher, in charge. Branch owns property near this lake. The boys intended to spend Friday night at the lake and return home Saturday. Branch then left them, going to Plant City, telling the boys he would return for them the following afternoon.

According to the incoherent story told by the four boys who found their way back home, the party was attacked by a band of men, who, the boys said, apparently were under the influence of intoxicants. The boys fled into the deep woods where shortly they became separated and soon after lost. Two of the boys, who escaped the fate of their comrades, are Fred Knight and George Turner, Jr., both sons of prominent Plant City physicians.

On receipt of the news of the attack on the boys and their consequent separation from familiar country, Deputy Sheriff Abbott of Plant City issued a call for volunteers and set out for the lake with a posse of 20 men. A few hours later he telephoned Plant City for more men. Thirty automobiles loaded with armed men immediately followed the first searching party.

The land surrounding lake Thonotosassa is of treacherous morasses. It is feared the boys, frightened into a frenzy by the attack of the men Friday afternoon, rushed blindly into the swamp and there became enmeshed in the soft ground and thick undergrowth.

Guards have been posted on every road in or near Plant City. City and county officials have been asked to aid in the search.

MAN CONFESSES HE SHOT OFFICER

Body of Policeman Is Found With Bullet Holes Through Head and Heart Near Macon.

Macon, Ga., May 16.—John Howell, 28, who the police say is a rum runner, confessed tonight, according to the sheriff's office, to the killing of Harry (Tubby) Green, a deputy, whose body was found in the Ocmulgee river swamp early this morning.

The arrest followed an all-day investigation on the theory that a woman and rum runners figured in the case.

The sheriff's office found that a gun battle began this early morning in the fashionable residential district between Green and his enemies and continued through the Bay street underpass and on to the point where Green was killed.

The sheriff's office announced that four arrests have been made, one a woman. Confessions, it was said, had been obtained from Howell and a negro.

Green was found dead with a bullet wound in the head and one through the heart on a road leading into the Ocmulgee river swamp below Macon. The body was found by a passerby, who summoned the police. Green had been dead several hours and the body lying near an automobile which Green rented from an automobile rental agency last night shortly after 11 o'clock.

Green was married and leaves a large family. He was employed at the Macon postoffice before he was appointed Bibb county policeman.

HINDENBURG PLANS DUSSELDORF VISIT

New German President Is Determined To Make Trip Through Occupied Section of Rhineland.

BY ERIC KEYSER.

Berlin, May 16.—Notwithstanding the fact that he is still listed as a war criminal by the French government, President von Hindenburg has determined to visit the occupied Rhineland and thus enter the "lion's den" of German territory.

The president and field marshal has decided to make a tour to Dusseldorf in June. His visit may cause complications with the allies. Among the Germans, at least, it would be considered as a protest against the failure of the allies to evacuate the Ruhr and Cologne areas. It is recalled, moreover, that the late President Ebert was forbidden by the allies to enter the occupied territory and the Rhineland commission may also prohibit Hindenburg's visit.

It is assumed that such a prohibitory measure might be taken to prevent patriotic and anti-allied demonstrations among the German population and to avoid the possibilit of the French taking measures against Hindenburg's presence.

Announcement that the president would visit the Rhineland was made Friday. It followed numerous civic invitations that he come to that territory on the occasion of an anniversary celebration of the Rhineland's adherence to the reich. Under present plans, he would attend the meeting of the provincial parliament of the Rhineland.

BAPTISTS PLEASED AS MOB VIOLENCE SHOWS DECREASE

Social Service Report Deplores Activities of Foreign Rum Ships Breaking Laws of America.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Memphis, Tenn., May 16.—The battle for enforcement of the prohibition law is gradually turning in favor of the law-enforcement forces, the commission on social service of the Southern Baptist church said today in its annual report to the Southern Baptist convention. The report deplores the fact that friendly nations permit ships under their flags to break American laws by participating in the activities of rum row and urges the convention to send its greeting to prohibition forces in other countries.

International Peace.

The commission also urged that the convention through the commission be represented at a conference of church representatives in Washington in December to discuss the possibility of banning war and asks that it be accorded adequate financial support to do social work. The report covers obscene literature, race track gambling, divorces, child marriage and international peace.

"In spite of all the benefits, defiance of the law and persisted effort to break it down are widespread," says the report regarding prohibition.

Bootlegging Science.

"In some sections bootlegging has become a science and rum-running a profession. But more and more the officers of the law are grappling with the situation and steadily and surely the dragron of anarchy is being slain. The domestic sources of supplies for the illicit traffic has gradually diminished except as industrial alcohol is diverted to illegal uses. Thus the stock of the bootlegger is gradually being reduced, while he himself is more swiftly and certainly being dispatched to jail. The battle between the rum runners and the government has become fierce and determined with the score turning rapidly in recent months in favor of the government."

Rum Situation.

After reviewing the international aspect of the rum situation and calling attention to the fact that flags of friendly nations appear in Rum Row, the report says:

"Such a condition is a disgrace and ought to be ended. It seems that the department of state would be amply justified in making representations to all the friendly nations that the clearance of any ship loaded with liquor for contraband purposes would be considered an unfriendly act. Certainly the government out to put forth every effort by diplomatic correspondence to stop the source of supply as well as by its enforcement, efforts

Flying Ebony Wins Kentucky's Classic Under Sande's Ride

KENTUCKY CLASSIC SHOULD BE CALLED 'DARBY,' NOT DERBY

Louisville, May 16.—The momentous question of whether one should say "The Kentucky Derby" or "the Kentucky Darby" has been settled by The Times, it says today.

In a cable to the London Times, the Louisville Times inquired of the Earl of Derby whether he pronounced his name "Durbi" or "Darbi." The answer received today said: "The Earl of Derby pronounced his name 'Darbi'."

Therefore, since the race is named for the earl, those who went to Churchill Downs today witnessed the fifty-first running of the Kentucky "Darby."

SENATOR SPENCER, OF MISSOURI, DIES QUITE SUDDENLY

End Came to Solon in Washington Hospital After His Early Recovery Had Been Expected.

Washington, May 16.—Senator Selden P. Spencer, republican, of St. Louis, Mo., died suddenly here tonight at Walter Reed hospital.

The death of the senator, who was 63 years old, came as a shock, as he had been in good spirits today, and his early recovery had been expected. He was operated on about ten days ago for hernia.

Only the attending physician and a nurse were at the bedside when death came. At noon, his secretary said tonight, Mr. Spencer was well enough to dictate and sign some mail. He seemed in excellent spirits and joked frequently with his nurse. Physicians had expected he would be out of the hospital within a week.

Funeral arrangements will not be announced, it was said tonight, until relatives have had time to make definite plans. Burial probably will be in Missouri.

Senator Spencer was serving his second term in congress, having been elected in 1918 over Joseph W. Folk, democrat, by a majority of 35,000 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William J. Stone. He was reelected in 1920 by a majority of 121,000 over Breckinridge Long.

Chairman of Committee.

Senator Spencer was chairman of the privileges and elections committee, and took a prominent part in the Newberry and Mayfield investigations. The committee was planning to begin next week the counting of ballots in the contest over the seat of Senator Brookhart, of Iowa.

The Missouri senator came into the limelight in the latter days of the Teapot Dome oil investigation, when he was selected by the administration to present its views more forcefully in connection with the oil leases. He placed in the public lands committee's record a defense of the leases and signed a minority report as opposed to the Walsh majority, which drew considerable criticism on the senate floor.

Senator Spencer also was a mem-

MRS. BOWMAN SENT TO HOSPITAL

Doubt for Recovery of Widow Who Killed Man on Statham Street Expressed by Physicians.

Winder, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) So serious is the condition of Mrs. Jettie Bowman, confined in the Barrow county jail, following the killing by her Tuesday on the streets of Statham of Guy Thurman, that she was early today removed from the jail and placed in the Winder hospital. She has been practically in a state of coma since the killing, hardly giving utterance to an intelligible sentence, and refused to take nourishment.

Dr. W. L. Mathews, county physician, states that unless her condition shows improvement she cannot survive but a few days.

Thursday, May 28, is the date set by Judge W. W. Stark, of Commerce, judge of superior court, for a hearing before C. W. Parker, ordinary, for Mrs. Bowman on a charge of lunacy, made by her brothers.

A charge of first-degree murder has also been made against her by the Thurman family.

The shooting of Thurman by Mrs. Bowman, who used a pistol, followed the killing six months ago of the husband of Mrs. Bowman by Thurman, in her presence, and it is claimed the death of her husband unbalanced her mind.

Cochran's Little Black Colt Carves Name in Equine Hall of Fame by Winning $50,000 Derby.

MASTERFUL RIDING OF SANDE FEATURES

Event Marred by Downpour of Rain, Which Ruined Beautiful Gowns of Women Spectators.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Louisville, Ky., May 16.—Between a brisk shower that sprung up a few minutes before the start of the race and a terrific downpour that soaked thousands of spectators to the skin, Flying Ebony, a little horse, black as night, raced to immortal victory in the $50,000 Kentucky Derby today, defeating a field of 19 of the nation's finest three-year-olds.

The little black colt, owned by Clifford A. Cochran, of New York, and superbly ridden by Earl Sande, America's premier jockey, finished one and a half lengths ahead of Captain Hal, a Louisville-owned colt, stepping the mile and a quarter distance in 2:07 3-5.

Son of John came thundering back of Captain Hal, losing second place by a scant nose. Single Foot, trailing three lengths behind Son of John, finished fourth, a half length ahead of Step Along, in fifth place.

Bud Fisher's Colt Sixth.

Swope, owned by Bud Fisher, the famous cartoonist, was sixth, and Prince of Bourbon trailed in seventh. Then came Needle Gun and Kentucky Cardinal, the colt which G. Frank Croissant, youthful Chicago millionaire, recently purchased for $70,000, so that he might have a horse in America's greatest turf classic.

Boon Companion, finishing tenth, followed Kentucky Cardinal to the wire, with Broadway Jones in desperate pursuit. The overwhelmingly played favorite, Quatrain, winner of the Louisville Derby and New Orleans handicap, carrying a ton of money, struggled across the finish badly beaten and in twelfth place. After Quatrain came Almadel, Backbone, Sweeping Away, Elector, The Bat, Leo O. Cotner, Voltaic and Chief Uncas, floundering across the wire in the order named.

Paid $8.30 For $2.

Flying Ebony, coupled in the company with eight others, comprising the mutuel field, paid his backers $8.30 for each $2 invested on his chances. The place price was $3.80 and the show money $2.80. If Flying Ebony had not been included in the mutuel field, his odds undoubtedly would have reached 100 to 1.

Captain Hal rewarded his backers with $5.50 to place and $4.40 to show. A show ticket in the mutuels paid $5.50 on Son of John.

Flying Ebony, however, did pay 100 to 1 in the makeup of winter books.

Flying Ebony's victory marked the second consecutive year that the greatest honor that can come to horseflesh—the winning of the Kentucky Derby—was captured by a black colt, Black Gold, last year's winner, being

WOMAN ADMITS BUYING INFANT AT 'BABY FARM'

New York, May 16.—Official finding at an autopsy that an infant had died of a fractured skull and admission by a woman that she purchased a girl baby for $100 cash, increased interest today in the investigation of the baby home of Mrs. Helen Auguste Geisen-Volk, where 44 infants have died in 16 months.

Investigators have been informed that the baby whose skull was broken was in good health when placed in the baby home.

AMPHIBAN PLANES FOR DASH TO POLE ACCEPTED BY NAVY

Mitchel Field, N. Y., May 16.—Two Loening amphibian airplanes were tested successfully today and were officially accepted by the navy for the MacMillan expedition to the North Pole, which will start next month. Lieutenant Commander R. E. Byrd, who will command the navy unit on the Arctic dash, pronounced the tests satisfactory.

The planes were tested for weight carrying, maneuver ability, and speed. Each carried 2,200 pounds useful load, and attained a maximum speed of 122 miles an hour.

POLAND TRIUMPHS OVER DANZIG CITY IN MAIL DISPUTE

The Hague, May 16.—Poland triumphed over the free city of Danzig today in the mail box dispute, one of the most critical of international issues as viewed by the contending parties.

The world court here ruled that the national postoffice of Poland was entitled to erect mail boxes and distribute mail within the Danzig territory. Danzig, which obtained semi-independence from Poland in the peace treaty, had protested vigorously against the incursion of Polish mail boxes, declaring they usurped national rights and that Dantzig should have its own mail boxes.

BURGLAR STANDS WOMAN ON HEAD AND TAKES MONEY

Philadelphia, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Stood upon her head in a closet by a burglar after he gagged and bound her, Mrs. Elizabeth Tranchitelle was found early today by a hotel musician.

The burglar, who obtained a small amount of money, had partially suspended her from a clothes hook. She was not seriously injured.

In another section of the city, Mrs. Margaret Whitman, confronted by a burglar who struck at her with a piece of lead pipe, so belabored the man with a milk bottle that he fled.

Celebration Marks Opening Roswell-Atlanta Highway

With completion Thursday of the last stretch of the magnificent new concrete highway between Roswell and Atlanta, active preparations are being made for an elaborate celebration in connection wth the formal opening of the road, which will take place about the middle of June, the exact date to be made public later, according to Aldine Chambers, president of the North Fulton Improvement club, and Dr. G. T. Lyon, member of the board of the Roswell chamber of commerce.

Both organizations have joined hands to make the occasion one of wide public interest and all of Atlanta will be invited to participate.

The new concrete bridge over the Chattahoochee river at Roswell, which replaces the famous old covered wooden structure of ante-bellum days, will be dedicated at this time.

The ceremonies will include public speaking, patriotic music, features of historic interest, a tour through Roswell, visit to the old Bullock home and a mammoth barbecue for visiting city officials of Atlanta and Marietta, Fulton and Cobb county commissioners, state officials and representatives of the various civic club and fraternal organizations.

Notables Invited.

It is expected that United States Representative Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of former President Theodore Roosevelt, will speak, in view of the historic interest in the Bullock home, the residence of Roosevelt's mother, which is being turned into a public museum in memory of the deceased president.

The North Fulton club held a special meeting Wednesday at Sandy Springs to discuss plans for cooperating with the Roswell chamber in staging the event, and the following committee was appointed by President Chambers to work out details: Harry L. Brown, chairman; Frank N. Allen, James A. Mabry, J. Frank Burdette, Nesbit Hardeman and E. S. Hildebrand.

The officers of the newly-organized Roswell chamber of commerce are: Colonel H. M. Broadwell, president; H. I. Weaver, mayor of Roswell, vice president; C. C. Foster, secretary, and C. P. Vaughn, treasurer.

A final public meeting prior to the opening of the highway, will be held at the Roswell auditorium Tuesday night, June 9.

Beautiful Highway.

It is expected that the opening of this new highway, which is said to be the finest tourist road in the south, will attract thousands of visitors to Roswell and will form the first link of a new Atlanta-Asheville route. Stretching through 18 miles of beautiful wooded country north of Atlanta, the drive itself will be one of the most picturesque around this part of the country. The scenery along the Chattahoochee is remarkably beautiful and is said to rival that of the Palisades along the Hudson. Roswell itself is replete with scenes of historic interest, and with the opening of the new highway promises to become a mecca for Atlanta people and visitors to this city second only to Stone Mountain.

Early Registrations For Kindergartens Of Atlanta Urged

Children who are to attend kindergartens of the city schools should have their names registered on May 19, it was announced Saturday at the office of the city superintendent of schools. Parents of children are requested to visit the attendance department of the city schools on that date and register names of children between 5 1-2 and 6 years for the 1925-1926 term.

EXECUTIVES LAUD AIR FIELD WORK

Mayor Walter A. Sims, Governor Clifford Walker and other city and state officials visited Candler field Saturday and inspected the work of completing that field for a landing site for aviators and were highly pleased with the improvements that have been made, according to their expressions.

The mayor and governor were taken for a flight over the city Saturday morning by Pilot Beeler Blevins, who has established flying headquarters at the field.

"I have taken several flights, but I enjoyed my flying trip Saturday more than any I have ever taken," Mayor Sims said. "We ran into a cloud about a half mile up and I had the experience of riding through a rainstorm, although fair weather prevailed far underneath."

The work of preparing the field for a commercial aviation landing field is rapidly being finished. When the work is completed Atlanta will have its first landing field ready for commercial service.

Mayor Sims was enthusiastic Saturday over the prospects of Atlanta becoming an aviation center.

"We are, of course, just at the beginning of aviation development, and I feel that Georgia should make every effort to provide adequate landing fields and stations to take care of the heavy air traffic which is bound to come in the near future. A little farsightedness now on the part of the city and state will pay mighty big dividends later," said the mayor.

Pilot Blevens has been operating a commercial aviation crew here for several months and as soon as the new field is finished will establish permanent headquarters there. He is now in temporary headquarters, but when the field is finished he will establish a model plant for housing his ships and for furnishing any kind of air transportation needed in this section.

Shriners To Plan New Home Monday At Lyric Theater

A movement to build a Shrine temple in Atlanta will be formally launched by members of Yaarab temple at a meeting at 8 o'clock Monday night at the Lyric theater. It is expected that at this meeting Illustrious Potentate Charles Bowen will be authorized to proceed with the project.

"We expect to put up a building to fill every need of Yaarab temple members as well as other divisions of the order, with an auditorium large enough to accommodate up to 10,000 persons," said Mr. Bowen. The assembly hall will be large enough to take care of both winter and summer opera crowds and any other gathering which may convene in Atlanta.

"We hope to have separate quarters for each organization of the temple, with shower baths, lockers and other conveniences. A special hall for the two bands and chanters to practice in and for the purpose of holding drill practice will be provided."

It is the plan of the temple to erect the new mosque on the property now owned by the order at Peachtree and Kimball streets just opposite the Georgian Terrace hotel and within four blocks of the Atlanta Biltmore.

Proposed New Chamber of Commerce Home

Representing an investment of approximately $1,000,000, the new home to be erected this fall by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, 12 stories in height, will be one of the most modern buildings of its kind in the world. It will contain every facility for the transaction of the community's business, will be equipped in many respects as a club for members and visitors, and will be designed to house numerous bureaus and organizations whose work is allied with that of the Chamber of Commerce. The new structure will be erected on the southeast cornerr of Pryor street and Auburn avenue on the site now occupied by the six-story building of the Chamber of Commerce. On the street level seven-story buildings will be constructed and a lobby entrance to the main building. The second floor will be used as a public dining room and for private dining rooms, while the executive offices will be located on the third floor. The fourth to eleventh floors will be used for office space, 16 offices located on each floor. The twelfth floor will be used as an auditorium and assembly room. A special committee will visit cities of the north and east to inspect similar buildings before final plans are adopted. Work on the new building will be started this fall, according to the plans.

Columbia Seminary Is Given Annuity Fund by Mrs. Bryan

. Announcement was made at commencement exercises recently at Columbia seminary, Columbia, S. C., of an annuity gift of an apartment house valued at $50,000 made by Mrs. T. C. Bryan, of Columbia, this fund to be added to the small endowment of Columbia, according to Dr. Richard T. Gillespie, president, who has just returned to seminary headquarters in Atlanta, after taking part in the commencement exercises.

"This gift shows a magnificent spirit," said Dr. Gillespie. "Although Columbia is losing the seminary, the splendid people there are willing to contribute to its maintenance. It is hoped that Georgians will show the same spirit of generosity, and that a large enough fund will be subscribed in the state-wide campaign now going on in Georgia to insure maintaining the seminary on the scale its importance warrants." A scholarship of $2,128 also was announced—the gift of Edward Bishop McEachern, in memory of his brother, Peter C. McEachern, a former deacon in the Kentrye Presbyterian church, Pee Dee Presbytery, and a resident of Hamer, S. C., until his death in 1901.

Particular significance attached to the graduating exercises at Columbia seminary this year because of the fact the new class entering in September will graduate in the new Columbia in Atlanta on the site recently given by Atlanta and Decatur citizens. This class, the first to graduate in Atlanta, will be the "Centennial class," as the 100th anniversary of Columbia will be celebrated in 1928 in the new buildings in Atlanta.

Special Arrangements.

The board of directors, meeting in session in Columbia during commencement week, appointed a special committee to prepare a centennial program worthy of the one hundredth anniversary of the seminary—an event which promises to be the most conspicuous event in the history of the southern Presbyterian church. Already twelve young men have registered for entrance in the fall.

Many friends of the class and college were present, some coming from distant states, among these being Dr. J. A. Bryan, of Birmingham; Dr. J. Reavis, of Nashville, Dr. L. O. McCutchen, of the China mission field. Degrees were conferred by the vice president of the board, Rev. Alexander Sprunt, D. D., of Charleston. The presidents of the board; J. T. T. Brantley, of Blackshear, Ga., presented each graduate with a copy of the "Fishers of Men" New Testament, the gift of R. E. McGill, of Richmond. Other members of the board who were present are: D. W. Robinson, Columbia, S. C., Rev. D. M. Douglas, D. D., Clinton, S. C.; Rev. W. A. Hafner, Gaffney, S. C., Rev. E. L. Hill, D. D., Athens, Ga.; Rev. F. K. Sims, D. D., Dalton, Ga.; Rev. A. L. Pattersno, D. D., Savannah, Ga; Rev. S. E. Hodges, D. D., Anniston, Ala.; Rev. W. J. Harrison, D. D., St. Petersburg, Fla.; Rev. L. E. McNair, D. D., Jacksonville, Fla.

The state wide campaign undertaken for an endowment fund of not less than $250,000 to insure its maintenance after being moved to Atlanta is well under way, it was stated at headquarters at 17 Poplar street, in Atlanta, with Georgia cities co-operating in a large way, and more than a dozen cities already dated up for active campaigns. These campaigns will be conducted by a local committee working with the city manager who is sent out from headquarters in Atlanta. The movement was instituted by the Synod of Georgia, and will include every Presbyterian church and communicant in its program over the state.

Active city campaigns now are in progress in Valdosta, Albany and Waycross (in addition to field work being done in the smaller churches) and other cities who have accepted speaking dates are as follows: Bainbridge, May 22; Quitman, May 23; Thomasville, June 19; Brunswick, July 10. Rome, Marietta, Savannah, Augusta, and Athens have accepted dates to be announced later.

Forestry Association To Hold Annual Meet In Waycross Monday

Waycross, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) The annual meeting of the Georgia forestry association will be held in Waycross Monday, May 18, according to an announcement made by Bonnell H. Stone, of Blairsville, president.

The meeting comes to Waycross this year at the invitation of the Waycross Chamber of Commerce, supported by the Kiwanis club. It is planned to have a one-day meeting this year, with sessions in the morning, afternoon and evening. The complete program for the conference has not been announced.

It is understood that United States forest service experts will attend he meeting and will construct instructive field trips. Forest fires will be shown following one of the business sessions. A trip will be made into the Okefenokee swamp on Tuesday.

All citizens organizations, industries and civic clubs in the state are urged to send representatives.

Members of the executive committee, besides President Stone, are: H. G. Spar, Atlanta; C. H. Harman, Atlanta; H. L. Kayton, Savannah; T. H. McKey, Valdosta; O. T. McIntosh, Savannah; Miss Alice Baxter, Atlanta; Mrs. Clifford Walker, Atlanta; Mrs. M. E. Judd, Dalton; Mrs. R. O. Orr, Athens, and Mrs. M. T. Jones, of Savannah.

Getting Up Nights Makes You Old Before Your Time

Dangerous Prostate Trouble Saps Vigor and Vitality—Often Mistaken for Kidney Ailment.

New Treatment Stops Symptoms Often in 24 Hours.

$1.00 PACKAGE FREE

According to statistics 65% of all men sooner or later are started on the road to premature age by prostate and bladder trouble.

One of the commonest symptoms of this dangerous, but little understood, ailment is the necessity of getting up nights. Other indications are, burning sensation of organs, dull ache at the base of the spine and in the small of the back, pains in the groin and legs. These symptoms are often attributed to kidney ailments, and it is obvious that the wrong kind of treatment or neglect is almost certain to lead to a dangerous and delicate condition, which may eventually necessitate a surgical operation.

But now, thanks to a new scientific specific, the symptoms, pains and troubles of prostate disorders can frequently be checked within a few hours.

This remarkable new treatment, which seemingly banishes prostate and bladder symptoms in the most stubborn and advanced cases is known as Walker's Prostate Specific. It has now been used by over 150,000 men in all parts of America, and remarkable statements as to quick results, elimination of symptoms, increasing of pep, vigor and vitality and health are daily being received.

In fact, I am so confident that Walker's Prostate Specific will succeed where all other treatments have failed, that I will gladly send any reader of this paper a complete $1.00 treatment absolutely free, prepaid and under plain wrapper. If it cures you, you can repay the favor by telling your friends and other sufferers. That is all I ask. You are not under the slightest obligation, and this treatment never costs you anything, now or at any other time.

To take advantage of this special introductory offer and stop the ravages of prostate and bladder trouble, simply put your name and address on the coupon below and send to me by the first mail—or your name and address on a postal card will do. Write me today—every hour you delay simply means running unnecessary dangers.

Fulton Girls Showing Way In Canning Farm Products

Down at the city market a little booth was opened Saturday. Some dozen pretty little farmer girls stood behind it. On a row of shelves stood jars of apple marmalade, canned peaches, pickles, apple butter, huckleberry and blackberry jam, mustard relish and mustard pickles. Over a stove some of the girls pulled from an oven a plate of crisp biscuits. In show cases were samples of cake. Nearby were pats of butter.

It was a little, unpretentious booth but it marked the practical consummation of a plan for Georgia to feed herself which ultimately will be carried out. It marked a small, but important, step toward utilizing vegetables and fruits grown on Georgia farms and gardens for the tables of the consumers in Georgia cities.

Girls Take Lead.

The booth was opened for the first time Saturday by the Girls' Canning club of Fulton county, under the direction of Miss Lucy Wood, home demonstration agent and with the cooperation of the Atlanta Woman's club headed by Mrs. Norman Sharpe and various Atlanta merchants who furnished materials and furniture. Space for the booth was allotted by W. L. Ewing, market master.

Establishment of a booth in the city market will mean the establishment in Atlanta of a clearing house for the sale of the best products of the canning clubs, not only of Fulton county but of all Georgia according to the plans outlined by Miss Wood. All the receipts are used in furtherance of the canning club work.

"We hope to interest the consumers of Atlanta in the work of our club and we will demonstrate the practical advantages of the work of these clubs in this booth," Miss Wood said. "We believe it will mean great things for the canning club work in the state as well as in Fulton county."

"Sampled" Products.

Those who ate some of the products canned by the girls pronounced them absolutely perfect. The booth is to be operated by various groups from the rural schools of Fulton county and will be open every Saturday.

"We have 150 girls in this work in Fulton county in 15 schools," Miss Wood declared. "Our special work Saturday in the way of demonstration was in baking biscuits. Next Saturday a different group of girls will give a demonstration of cake making. The following Saturday will give demonstrations of the actual canning work and later will give demonstrations in butter making. All of the demonstrations will be based on the training given the girls in the rural schools under the direction of the home demonstration work carried on throughout the state under the direction of the State College of Agriculture at Athens."

Miss Wood said the best samples of work from the canning clubs in other counties will be sent to Atlanta and placed on sale in the canning club booth at the city market.

"Establishment of the booth will be a great thing for the demonstration work, for the girls engaged in this work and we believe the public will be pleased with the high quality of the products we will offer here for sale," Miss Wood concluded.

Chief of Disabled Veterans To Address Meeting Here

National Commander Frank J. Irwin, of Washington, will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the fourth annual convention of the Georgia department of disabled American veterans of the world war, which convenes in Atlanta Tuesday, May 19, and lasting through Wednesday. Approximately 300 veterans from all sections of the state will be in attendance. A. Harbort, Jr., of Atlanta, is state commander.

Besides National Commander Irwin, others who will address the convention will be Mayor Walter A. Sims, of Atlanta; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta; State Commander Harbort; Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, Athens; William E. Tate, past commander of the department of North Carolina; Commander William A. Simpson, of the Atlanta Argonne Post No. 1, of the American Legion, and many others.

The first day of the convention will be taken up with the registration of state department officers, and a meeting of the state officers and executive committee to be held at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, following a meeting of the Woodrow Wilson Chapter No. 1.

Besides State Commander Harbort, the Georgia department is composed of the following officers: Roy Lytle, senior vice commander, Tifton; J. C. Willie, junior vice commander, Athens; H. F. Gunther, treasurer, Monticello; Harley R. Lee, adjutant, Atlanta; J. N. Finch, chaplain, Atlanta; Jesse R. Farr, hairman of executive committee, Lavonia; Frank E. Mitchell, Athens; Nolan J. Hale, Atlanta; J. P. Ellis, Monticello; J. H. Peacock, Dublin; Walter Emory, La Grange; Robert M. Dinsmore, Atlanta, and Paul Rafferty, of Athens.

Governor Clifford Walker and General Douglas A. McArthur, commander of the Fourth Corps area of the United States army, have been invited to be guests at the convention.

Many of the delegates who will be in the city attending the national convention of the War Mothers' Service Star Legion, which will last practically the entire week, will be in attendance at the disabled veterans' convention, it is said.

Officials of the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau will bid for the 1926 national convention to be held in this city, it was stated by Fred J. Paxon, president. The Atlanta delegates to the national convention which convenes in Omaha, Neb., in June, will go with instructions to vote in a unit for the selection of Atlanta at the next convention city, it is said.

Railway Men Meet At Ansley Hotel In Bi-Monthly Parley

The bi-monthly meeting of the Southern and Southwestern Railway club will be held in Atlanta on the roof garden of the Ansley hotel Thursday.

More than 100 members of the club, which is made up of officials of the mechanical and maintenance of way departments of the various railroads in the south, and the supply men who sell equipment to these departments, are expected to be in attendance at the meeting.

The meeting will be called to order at 10 o'clock Thursday morning by President J. F. Sheahan, mechanical engineer of the A., B. & A. railroad, Atlanta.

C. J. McPherson, manager of the automotive car division of the J. G. Brill company, will read a paper on "Self Propelled Passenger Motor Cars."

WALRAVEN COMPANY OFFERS TIME SAVERS

What electricity has been harnessed to do and the vast time and labor saver it has been in recent years perhaps is nowhere more forcefully emphasized than in the big plant of the Walraven company, 36-38 West Alabama street, Atlanta. This company, one of the largest in the entire south and known throughout the nation by countless users of electric and automatic devices, carries an immense stock from which to select and one complete in every detail.

The Walraven company is the home of the famous Syntron electric hammer, the Brown & Sharpe automatic gear cutters, milling machines, grinders and similar machines and devices; Hendy lathes and shapers; Bullard boring mills and vertical turrett lathes; Monarch lathes; J. E. Snyder & Sons drilling machines; Whipp shapers and universal wood workers; Van Dorn electric drills and grinders, and scores of other nationally-known electric products—known for their time and labor-saving features and conveniences.

Outstanding, if one is able to select from equally useful electrical and automatic machines, is the Syntron hammer, the only one of its kind on the market, it is claimed. Users say it will do the work in 30 minutes that the old-fashioned and less modern means for drilling would require five hours to do, thus adding a material saving in addition to time and worry. And in this modern era what is more valuable than time, ask Walraven firm officials. Literature describing and setting out advantages claimed for this hammer may be had for the mere asking at Walraven's, and out-of-town persons who are interested may have it mailed to them upon request.

Mill supplies and machinery supplies of every kind and description known to and used by machine workers and milling men may be had at Walraven's, supported by the guarantee of the firm, which has increased its business by leaps and bounds through its dealings with the public in the past few years. Demonstrations of all devices carried in stock, for use either of mill men or others who operate machinery, will be cheerfully given upon demand.

From Walraven's stock the user of machinery, particularly those interested in machines and apparatus for saving labor, time, worries and desiring the best possible values for money paid out, may obtain whatever is needed in such materials as are outlined above.

AMELL WILL ADDRESS ATLANTES' LUNCHEON

L. P. Amell, manager of the Thiel Detective Service, will speak on the subject, "Detectives and Their Work," at a luncheon at the Atlantes club Tuesday at the Henry Grady hotel.

O. J. Coe will entertain with some character monologues. An attendance prize will be awarded by Leonard Jacobus, of the program committee. D. J. Meyerhardt will preside.

DR. MONCRIEF SPEAKS AT PEACHTREE ARCADE

Dr. A. J. Moncrief, pastor of Decatur Baptist church, will speak at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Peachtree Arcade service on the text, "Wells Without Water."

A special musical program has been arranged for the service which will be featured by quartet songs by Mrs. W. H. Bowen, contralto; Miss Ruth Spence, soprano; Ed Sheppe, tenor, and A. M. Fincher, bass.

Attend Mammoth Vaudeville, Auditorium, May 22.

319 Students in All Schools On Tech Commencement List; Exercises To Begin on June 7

Dr. Alderman of Virginia University To Deliver Commencement Address at Graduation.

More than 300 candidates for graduation will take part this year in the Georgia School of Technology exercises on June 7 and 8. Dr. Edward A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, will deliver the commencement address, while on the Sunday before graduation Dr. W. W. Memminger, of All Saints Episcopal church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon.

Previous to the regular collegiate exercises a number of commencement affairs have been arranged by the seniors, including the reception to seniors by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech.

In securing Dr. Alderman for the commencement address the administration at Georgia Tech believe they are bringing to Atlanta one of the biggest men in the educational circles of the south. Dr. Alderman last year came into considerable national prominence by the delivery of his Woodrow Wilson speech in the United States congress.

Candidates To Assemble.

Sunday morning, June 7, the 319 candidates for graduation will assemble at the All Saints Episcopal church at the corner of North Avenue and West Peachtree where Dr. Memminger will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. This service is at 11 o'clock.

The exercises of Monday, June 8, will take place on the college campus in front of the Carnegie library. The Georgia Tech band will furnish the music. Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, will offer the invocation.

Following the commencement address by Dr. Alderman, the senior class orator, Herbert Hutton, of Savannah, will represent the class of 1925. The secretary of the faculty will read the list of prize winners.

Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, confers the degrees, delivers the certificates and announces the commissions in the reserve officers' corps.

The closing address to graduate will be made by ex-Governor Nat E. Harris, chairman of the board of trustees of the Georgia School of Technology.

Senior social events for commencement week are: Senior banquet at Hotel Biltmore, June 3; junior prom in Georgia Tech gymnasium, June 4; Senior hop in Georgia Tech gymnasium, June 5; President Brittain gives the senior reception at his home Friday afternoon; Sophomore-American dance at the Georgia Tech gymnasium, June 6; Monday night following the graduation at noon the Pan-Hellenic dance will be held at the Georgia Tech gymnasium.

Names of Graduates.

Candidates for graduation are as follows:

GAS WARFARE HEAD ON VISIT TO POSTS OF ARMY IN CITY

Major General Amos Fries, chief of the U. S. army chemical warfare service, visited Atlanta and Fort McPherson Saturday and delivered an address at a meeting of the officers reserve at the fort.

General Fries left for Fort Benning, Columbus, late Friday afternoon. He is in Georgia in connection with experiments being conducted at the Georgia experiment station in Griffin to combat the boll weevil, the chemical warfare service having been interested for the past year in trying to produce compounds that will enable the farmer to fight the boll weevil more effectively.

He will probably visit the experiment station in Griffin before leaving the state.

CARSON TO MANAGE HUB STYLE SHOP

D. H. Carson has recently been appointed manager of The Hub, popular credit clothiers, of Whitehall street. Mr. Carson has been with this company years, having been stationed in Winston-Salem, N. C., for the three years prior to his being transferred here. The Winston-Salem store under Mr. Carson's management took first prize for the store showing the greatest percentage of gain in both sales and collections, his store showing a larger increase than any other store in this chain.

D. H. CARSON, MGR.

In connection with Mr. Carson's assumption of the management, announcement is made of the complete remodelling of the Hub. New decorations have been added and new fixtures installed for the convenience of Hub patrons.

Mr. Carson states that their relations with customers are strictly confidential, each customer having a private booth in which to make their credit arrangements. An invitation has been extended to every one to visit this newly remodelled, friendly credit store.

Special Features Planned for Week At Lakewood Park

Special features have been planned for Lakewood Park during the coming week and the first of the special events will take place Sunday afternoon, when Clint Barber's band will play from 3 o'clock until after 5 o'clock. Sunday night at 7 o'clock two free moving pictures will be shown.

A free dance will be held Monday night from 8 o'clock until 11 o'clock in the dancing pavilion. Barber's All-American Jazz orchestra has been secured to play for the dancers Monday night.

There will be a big free-for-all old-time square dance Friday night at 8 o'clock and some special numbers have been planned for the square dance.

Free moving pictures will be shown every night startng at 8 o'clock and the dance hall opens up every night at 8 o'clock and remains open until 11 o'clock. Free dances are given every night in connection with the regular dance.

Honored Guest At Mother Party Praises Hosts

Characterizing her visit to the Howard theater Thursday as the special guest of The Constitution as "one of the sweetest parties" she had ever enjoyed, Mrs. M. A. Ledbetter, 5 Anniston avenue, 78-year-old winner of The Constitution contest for reporting the largest number of living children which was conducted preceding the special "Mother's Day" party last Monday, wrote a letter of appreciation to The Constitution and Howard theater which was received Saturday.

"I want to thank The Constitution and the Howard theater for one of the sweetest events in my life," Mrs. Ledbetter wrote.

The Constitution in cooperation with the Howard theater gave a special "Mother's Day" performance at 9:30 o'clock Monday, May 11, to which all the mothers of Atlanta more than 40 years old were invited. More than 3,000 mothers accepted the invitation and enjoyed the special program arranged which included a presentation of "Charley's Aunt," the feature picture for the week and a prologue.

Mrs. Ledbetter, as winner of the contest, was given a special theater party Thursday afternoon which was attended by several of her children and grandchildren. She expressed appreciation of the many courtesies extended the party by Manager Howard Kingsmore, of the Howard theater, and the staff of the theater.

Following is her letter to The Constitution:

"Let me thank you for one of my sweetest parties, the most enjoyable event of my 78 years, through the kindness of The Constitution and the Howard theater. The old-time melodies played by the Old Home Town String band were as thrilling as of old. 'Mother O Mine' added just a tear drop which was laughed away by 'Charley's Aunt.'

"The Old Home Town String band made my foot pat and I was blessed through them with my favorite, 'Sleep, Baby, Sleep.' All of my 11 children are musicians and I feel very much honored for your kindness, the one old mother with 11 of my own, 37 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren. Now let me wish you 'the son of a wonderful mother,' many more than 78 years and please accept thanks of me and mine for the enjoyment of a perfect day."

THREE DOZEN FEATURES

All Carefully Prepared and Admitted on Account of Merit.

All kinds of "features" are offered in various ways to the public. The circus attracts crowds by its special features. Motion picture houses offer new features to attract patronage. Merchants bring out special features in their advertising. Newspapers print special feature articles. So the word "feature" must be well understood.

Ordinarily a dictionary consists of a vocabulary, with more or less interesting appendix matter. It remained for the New Universities Dictionary to introduce a wealth of special features, that are of intense interest to everybody. In addition to its greatly enlarged vocabulary, it has dozens of educational features—more than thirty-six in all.

Among the exclusive features are contributions from the foremost authorities in leading universities, and an entire section devoted to everyday errors in speaking and writing. Also there are dictionaries of a dozen and more popular sports and pastimes, including radio and aviation. All of these features were carefully prepared and admitted only on account of unusual merit.

Such a complete dictionary of this nature has never before been published and it now is being offered to readers of this newspaper on the well-known coupon plan. Clip and present your coupon today.—(adv.)

The Kind of a Car That Becomes Your Hobby

A car that you delight to drive personally. This New Franklin Touring doesn't look like the ordinary open car. It is smarter, finer, more advanced in design, as if it were made to order.

Every line suggests power, speed and style. The low-slung chassis adds both to the rakish appearance and to comfort and safety. And every detail of fitting and finish gives color to the sport atmosphere which this car creates.

It has the kind of power you want, the kind of riding ease you look forward to, the kind of economy you are surprised and glad to get. Something more than just a means of transportation.

Also SEDAN · SPORT SEDAN · SPORT RUNABOUT COUPÉ · CABRIOLET · ENCLOSED-DRIVE LIMOUSINE

Franklin Series 11 is ready for the road, completely equipped with appropriate accessories, spare tire and cover—all included in the catalog price. Only tax and freight are extra.

Darrow and Malone Services Are Accepted for Defense Of Teacher of Evolution

Freedom of Teaching and Learning Involved in Tennessee Test Suit, Declares Leading Counsel.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 16.—Offer of Clarence Darrow, of Chicago, and of Dudley Field Malone, of New York, nationally known trial lawyers, to aid in the defense of J. T. Scopes, teacher in the Tennessee public schools at Dayton, who is charged with a violation of the recently enacted law forbidding the teaching of any theory of evolution, was accepted today by Dr. John R. Neal, leading counsel for the defendant.

In the telegram of acceptance, Dr. Neal emphasizes that the trial of Professor Scopes involves a broader question than a mere test case, making an issue of whether the Darwin theory of evolution is true or not true, the attorney contending that freedom of teaching and freedom of learning being the principle involved.

Telegram of Acceptance.

"Clarence Darrow and Dudley Field Malone,

"New York City."

"Your joint telegram, proffering your services in the anti-evolution test case just received. Our efforts to have declared unconstitutional the law making it a criminal offense to teach in the public schools the Darwin theory of evolution, is not solely a fight in behalf of any theory of evolution.

"The question is not whether evolution is true or untrue, but involves the freedom of teaching. Or, what is more important, the freedom of learning. As we see it, the great question is whether the Tennessee legislature has the power to prevent the young minds of Tennessee from knowing what has been thought and said by the world's greatest scientists and thus prevent them from forming their own judgment in regard to questions of life and science.

"We regard equally un-American and therefore unconstitutional any attempt to limit the human mind in its inquiry after the truth.

"On account of your preeminent ability and your great aid and varied services in battling for human freedom, I am sure Professor Scopes will welcome your assistance in his defense."

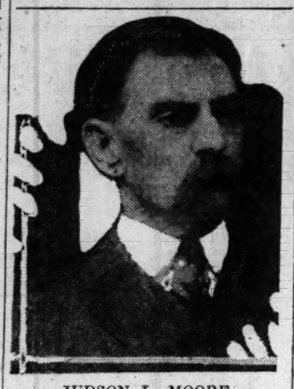
Entry of the nationally known attorneys into the Scopes trial, which will be held during the first week in August at Dayton, a small Tennessee town, is regarded here as the opening move in a drama that will be national in interest.

Dr. Neal stated that in event the act is not declared unconstitutional in the Scopes case, prosecutions would be started against most of the faculty members of the University of Tennessee and every instructor of science in the high schools of the state, since all of the text books of science, used in the university and in the high schools, contain a theory of creation not in accord with the Biblical account.

The object of the prosecutions, according to Dr. Neal, will cause the repeal of the recent act, in event it is not declared unconstitutional.

SINGERS TO HONOR JUDSON L. MOORE

Winder, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) A special song service and tribute will be held at Winder Sunday afternoon, May 17, in honor of Professor



JUDSON L. MOORE.

Judson L. Moore, one of the most prominent and highly respected citizens of Barrow county, whose home is at Bethlehem.

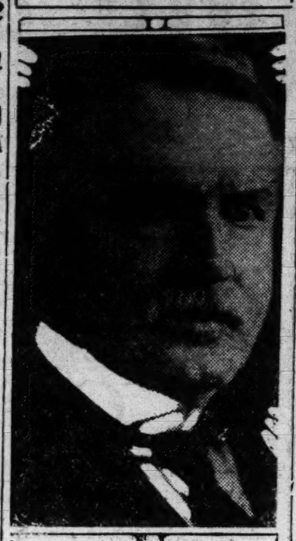
Professor Moore has taught classes in singing in this state and in other southern states for the last 50 years, beginning in this line of work in 1886. Though his life's work has carried him into all parts of this state and the entire south, he has always lived at Bethlehem, near which place he was born, in that section of this county which was formerly a part of Walton county.

During his career when he took an active part in teaching music and singing, he wrote a number of songs and edited 30 different song books, which have been largely used in all parts of the country. More than a million copies of his songs have been sold. He is the author of "Wandering Child Come Home," "That Story Did Me Good," and "Sweeping Through the Gates," the last named song being widely popular at the time it first came out, and being a favorite religious song at present. It has been used by leading evangelists in all parts of the country. He has studied under and with many of the country's leading composers and singers, and is well trained in the theories and practice of music.

At this service tribute will be paid Professor Moore not only in song but several who have been associated with him will speak.

The service will be held in the high school auditorium beginning at 2 o'clock and is sponsored by the Barrow county singing convention of which R. W. Haynie is president and John B. Williams, secretary.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF MISSOURI SOLON



SENATOR SELDEN P. SPENCER.

SENATOR SPENCER DIES SUDDENLY

ber of the appropriations, judiciary and claims committees of the senate. He was a mild reservationist in the Versailles treaty fight in the early days of his first term.

Senator Spencer engaged in a controversy with President Wilson in October, 1919, when he contended that the war-time president at the eighth plenary session of the peace conference on May 31, 1919, had promised American military aid to Rumania and Serbia in the event of invasion of those countries. The declaration repeatedly was denied and finally resulting in producing the official stenographic records of Mr. Wilson's remarks at the peace conference to refute the interpretation placed upon them by Mr. Spencer.

BAPTISTS PLEASED AT MOB DECREASE

to intercept the supply and to keep it from reaching our shores."

Mob Violence Decreases.

The report expresses great "satisfaction" over the decrease of mob violence. "We must not rest until every vestige of mob violence is removed from the face of our land," it says.

Regarding child labor, the report says that the Baptists should see that wise and proper legislation is enacted. It asserts that the situation can be controlled by either states or federal legislation.

Rejoicing over the death of race track legislation in Missouri and Arkansas, which the report says indicates "clearly that there is a tremendous combine to promote race track gambling," the document refers "again to the heroic fight which is being made to uproot and overthrow the evil in Kentucky led by Dr. M. P. Hunt." It adds that "the organized forces of righteousness in Kentucky are entitled to the full sympathy and moral support of such forces in all of our states until they accomplish their worthy objective."

"Race track gambling," says the report, "is one of the most vicious of all forms of gambling and is to be utterly resisted wherever it would advance and utterly destroyed wherever it exists."

Divorce Evil Rapped.

The "divorce evil" has reached a point that is "positively alarming" in some cities, says the report. It calls on the church to rally to the defense of the home.

Child marriage is dealt with in a section of the report, ten things that the commission believes would aid in stopping it being recommended. These are a reasonable and enforceable minimum age; require five days advance notice of intention to marry; put all "Gretna Greens" out of existence; through state cooperation, discourage hasty marriages across state lines; learn to know the work of the clerks who issue marriage licenses; abolish the fee system of paying license clerks; strengthen the laws regarding proof of age; substitute better evidence of age for affidavits; require both applicants to appear in person when obtaining a license and harmonize the state laws regarding the minimum ages.

Important Changes.

Important changes in the department of evangelism of the home mission board today were adopted by the convention before bringing to a close the 70th annual meeting.

A virtual reestablishment of the department, urged through Dr. Len G. Broughton, Jacksonville, its chairman, will result in the board electing at its next annual meeting a superintendent of evangelism, who will be charged with the conduct of the department of evangelism in its entirety.

The superintendent's salary, the convention decided, shall be equal to that allowed any general secretary of the convention boards.

System of Financing.

A system of financing estimated to reorganize the evangelistic department included provisions that the department be made self-supporting, in so far as possible, with additional necessary finances to be furnished by the mission board.

The memorial to religious liberty at Washington is practically completed, the convention was told, and bids are now ready for the completion of the interior. The memorial was erected as a joint project of the northern and southern conventions.

Benefits in the amount of $126,961.35 were paid out last year to 1,085 beneficiaries of the relief and annuity board, Dr. William Lunsford, Dallas, Texas, reported. A minimum of $400,000 is expected this year, it was reported, and with that amount the board would insure receipt of $100,000 from John D. Rockefeller, whose gift is made contingent upon raising the other amount.

The theory of evolution focused the convention's attention twice today—smouldered in resolutions on two occasions which sought to record a different attitude from that embodied in the convention's declaration of faith—only to die when the convention would have no more of it.

Objection Ruled Out of Order.

The Rev. Allen H. Autry, Little Rock, Ark., would have deleted from the statement on science and religion a sentence to which there was objection, but President McDaniel ruled him out of order. The chair ruled that in order for the statement to be put before the convention, it would have to move to reconsider the entire statement. This, the convention showed, it did not care to do.

Again, in the afternoon, it was resolved to repeal the entire statement on science and religion, it being pointed out that it was not a part of the convention's declaration of faith and message. The resolution was admitted to a vote, but was tabled by a decisive vote.

Sunday messengers to the convention will hear two of its most noted members—Dr. George W. Truett, Dallas, and Dr. M. E. Dodd, Nashville. The convention will be formally closed with a program in the evening, at which home and foreign missionaries will be heard.

QUAKES MENACE EASTERN CITIES

at New Madrid, Mo., in 1811; at Charleston, S. C., in 1886.

Eight Shocks In Year.

Eight considerable shocks have marked the recent seismic revival in the country east of the Mississippi, as follows: On September 30, 1924; January 7, February 28, March 7, March 20, April 24, April 27 and May 2. That of February 28 was felt distinctly in New York city, the first since 1914.

A seismological map shows that the earthquake "zones" of this region to be Long Island sound, the Connecticut valley, the Maine coast from Boston to the Bay of Fundy, and the St. Lawrence valley. All these have been active in the recent disturbance.

The foundation has made public the opinions of leading scientists on the earthquake danger in the northeastern area, these agreeing that there is no basis for assuming the immunity of this section from earthquakes of destructive intensity. "We have been lulled into what is, perhaps, a sense of false security," says Professor A. K. Knopf, of the geology department of Yale university.

9 PERSONS HURT IN 3 ACCIDENTS

Nine people suffering from injuries ranging from a fractured skull to slight bruises were the victims of three automobile accidents Saturday in Atlanta.

Among the most seriously injured were Mrs. J. S. Aldert, 60 years of age, Anderson, S. C., internal injuries; her four and a half-year-old granddaughter, Elizabeth Han, fractured skull, and Grady Walker, of East Linden street, broken leg.

Mrs. Aldert and her granddaughter were injured when the car in which they were riding, driven by Mrs. James Ragan, of 95 Gaston street, collided with an automobile driven by J. H. Bush, of 285 South Pryor street, at the intersection of Andrews drive and Pace's Ferry road, according to police. In Bush's car there was also C. B. Cole, of Buford. Bush's leg was mashed in the collision, while Cole escaped with slight bruises. Mrs. Ragan escaped with slight injury.

Grady Walker suffered a broken leg when a truck driven by Wilbur Jackson, of 153 1-2 Linden street, in which he was riding, collided with an automobile driven by Dr. Lee Bivins, of 314 North Boulevard, Saturday afternoon at Colquitt and Sinclair avenues. Charges of reckless driving were made against Dr. Bivins and Jackson. Call Officers J. G. Bowman and C. E. Ford investigated the accident.

R. B. Hinton, 10 years old, of 102 Campbellton road, was bruised and scratched when knocked down by an automobile driven by J. R. Mulkey, of 84 Marietta street, on Lee street at Campbellton road. The accident was reported to Call Officer N. P. Barker by Mulkey, who stated it was unavoidable, and that the boy declined to go to a hospital for treatment.

NEW MOVE PLANNED BY JETT IN BATTLE

fore noon Saturday. While the officers were rushing to the scene of the supposed hold-up, the bandit struck swiftly at the Spring street station and was away safely before the manager could get out of the rest room and give the alarm.

Goes to Pressing Club.

The police have learned that immediately after he had rifled the cash register, the bandit hailed a passing taxi and came to a pressing club at 264 Spring street, where he had previously left a natty gray suit to be pressed and along with it a new straw hat. On leaving the suit he had changed into khaki trousers and went to the scene of the robbery in shirt sleeves. When he returned to the pressing club, he put on the freshly-pressed gray suit and new hat and walked out, his appearance completely altered.

The driver of the taxi who picked the bandit up reported that he had ridden a "fare" from the scene of the robbery to the pressing club, the actions of the man arousing his suspicion. The police immediately went to the pressing club, where the proprietor is said to have disclosed the trick by which the efficient robber changed his appearance a few moments after the robbery.

The police were in possession of a detailed description of the youth and were confident that his arrest would be effected immediately. He is described as having a scar over one eye evidently the result of a knife cut.

F. B. Stephens, manager of the Standard Oil station; S. W. Baughn, his assistant, and a negro helper were locked in a small room by the robber, after which he took the contents of the cash register and disappeared.

Ahead of Collector.

By timing his attack carefully, the bandit beat the Standard Oil company's collector to the filling station by just five minutes. Police reserves searched the neighborhood carefully, but found no trace of the bandit.

Will Repay Losses.

The move to have Beckley pay back all the money secured in raids in which he participated was disclosed by Detective Poole, who worked up the case against the three "dapper bandits" a few weeks ago and who has been following it was unceasing interest. He stated that Judge Candler had informed him that Beckley's people in Florida had supplied him with funds to return all stolen sums and that he planned on Monday to ask Fulton county courts to look upon this as an extenuating circumstance.

Beckley was arrested with Roy McWhorter, of Atlanta, and Pauline Partain, their woman aide, and all have confessed to participation in recent robberies of filling stations and drug stores. McWhorter has begged to be allowed to "plead guilty" and get it over with, while the girl maintains a scornful attitude toward both Beckley and McWhorter, whom she charges with "squealing."

Loot, including a large quantity of morphine sulphate, was secured by store and house burglars, according to reports made to the police early Saturday morning.

List of Burglaries.

The complete list of places visited and the property stolen follows:

Carnegie Drug company, 116 Spring street, 875 quarter-grain morphine sulphate tablets, 97 half-grain tablets.

Glaze Soda company, 151 Spring street, a large quantity of cigars, tobacco and candy. The burglars made a meal off sandwiches at the soda fountain.

Elite Electric company, 331 South Pryor street, a quantity of tools and electric supplies.

Home of J. R. Green, 309 Windsor street, clothing and jewelry.

Steal Electric Iron.

Home of H. P. Stalnaker, 314 East Fair street, electric iron.

Home of Miss A. Anderson, on West King street, $10.

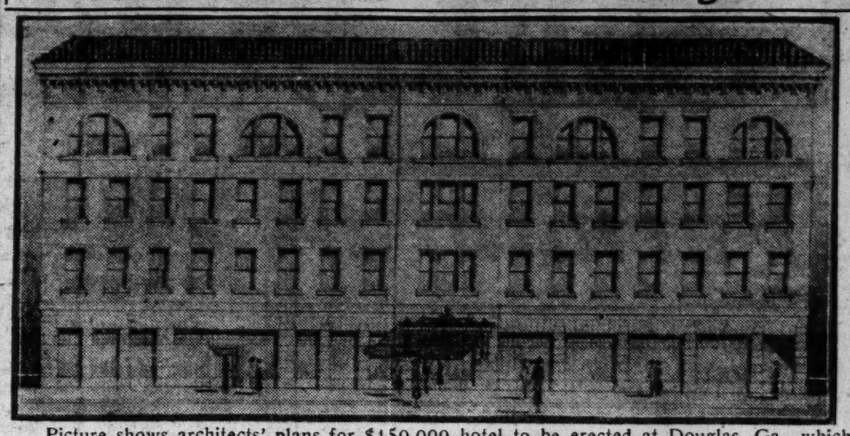
Home of M. Griffin, 2 Lansing street, dresses and other clothing.

Home of Mrs. Richard Schwab, 128 Briarcliff road, over $200 worth of women's wearing apparel.

'FATTY' ARBUCKLE FINALLY WEDDED TO FILM ACTRESS

Pasadena, Cal., May 16.—In the presence of a large company of guests, many of them prominent in the motion picture world, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, former film comedian, and Doris Deane, film actress, were married shortly after 9 o'clock tonight at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles R. Dibble, in San Marino, a suburb. Judge Hugh J. Cranford, of the Los Angeles county superior court, officiated.

Modern Hotel Planned for Douglas



Picture shows architects' plans for $150,000 hotel to be erected at Douglas, Ga., which will contain 60 rooms, with bath to each room; five large display rooms, two dining rooms and four stores, which have already been leased. Daniel & Beutell, of Atlanta, are the architects; John R. Slater and J. C. Brewer, of Douglas, are the owners of the hotel and the contract for the erection of the building has been let to R. N. McEachren, of Douglas. The hotel will be located in the heart of town facing the two main streets. Douglas is a town of 5,000 people and growing rapidly, due to its location on two main highways and being in the center of the tobacco belt.

Four Orchestra Directors To Lead Music at Benefit

Four of Atlanta's foremost musical directors, whose orchestras have brought pleasures to thousands of Atlanta people every day will have charge of the big special musical program which will be one of the features of the big super-vaudeville show to be given at 10 o'clock on the night of May 22 at the Auditorium for the benefit of the firemen's relief fund.

For the big vaudeville program of more than one dozen professional acts the musical accompaniments will be directed by Frank Turner, musical director of Loew's Grand theater orchestra and Harry Leppert, director of the Forsyth orchestra. Two big overtures will be played during the program by a massed orchestra of 150 musicians obtained from 10 Atlanta orchestras. One of the overtures will be directed by Enrico Leide, of the Metropolitan orchestra and the other by Alex Keese, of the Howard orchestra.

Will Buy Tickets.

All musicians who participate in the musical program are members of the American Federation of Musicians and all will pay their way to the benefit performance. The members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will handle the scenery for the performance. All persons connected with the benefit will buy tickets to the show.

Manager Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand, who initiated the movement to give the benefit and Manager Monte Seemon, of the Forsyth theater, will have direct supervision of the vaudeville performance. They have selected more than a dozen acts out of a list of nearly 50 offered and will present these on the program which will include all the acts at Loew's Grand and the Forsyth.

One of the interesting features of the program will be a series of improvised acts which the performers will give which are different from the regular acts they present in the theaters. The National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., is participating in the program 100 per cent.

Manager James stated Saturday that the plans have reached such a stage now that a virtual guarantee can be given that Atlanta will be given one of the biggest and best performances of any kind ever seen here when the benefit show is presented. He declared that more than $5 worth of amusement will be offered for a single $1 ticket and that the purpose of the theatrical managers' committee is to see that the show is fast and snappy.

Fund Grows Steadily.

Contributions to the firemen's fund continued to roll in Saturday and with the receipts of the benefit show it is expected that the fund will run well over the $20,000 mark before the campaign is finished.

Subscriptions amounting to $179.50 were received Saturday which added to the previously reported total of $13,876.50, brought the total up to $14,031.

AMERICA REQUESTS SETTLEMENT OF DEBTS

tiated at the state department upon suggestions from treasury and debt commission officials was rare, it was clearly indicated, but that the American government was sincerely anxious to reduce the debt questions to a purely business basis. In other words, the official view was that the notes held should be converted into definite term obligations with fixed dates, rates and payments, however small the latter might be.

Definite View of U. S.

The secrecy thrown about the advices to the foreign nations prevented public knowledge of the methods employed. In the case of some of the powers, indications were that the American view had been transmitted in definite words while with respect to others it appeared that the advices amounted to little more than reiteration by American envoys that the American commission awaited any communication the debtor government desired to make. Rumania, however, has had a direct note from the state department.

No government has been recognized in Russia and Armenia and no mention was made in official statements of Liberia, which country owes the United States less than $35,000.

The American government repeatedly has taken the stand heretofore that it would not press for collection of the debts. From time to time gestures have been made by foreign powers, but these so often have availed nothing that it is apparent now the administration has decided on a change in policy. Officials explained, however, that even now it is not the thought of the government to force payment.

The responsible authorities have waited long in the hope that the debtor powers would make funding proposals voluntarily, but thus far none has been forthcoming.

Increasing pressure has been brought to bear on the administration, especially from congressional quarters, in favor of a positive stand by the nations who owe money to the United States. Various senate and house leaders have spoken frankly the opinion that delay should not be tolerated longer and the argument also has been advanced that this government could not properly await disentanglement of European affairs before renewing its suggestion that funding settlements were in order.

If paid today, the debts of the nine circularized governments to Washington would amount to $7,100,978,695, and the total is increasing daily as the interest column mounts.

The treasury's balance sheet, as of today, shows these figures:

These calculations do not include Armenia, which owes $14,959,479 but which has no government recognized by Washington, of Liberia, whose total indebtedness to the United States is less than $35,000. Russia owes about $200,000,000.

3 BETTER HOMES WILL CLOSE TODAY

Crowds visiting the Better Homes today are expected to swell the week's total attendance to a point exceeding the 18,000 visitors which made Atlanta's attendance record last year, one of the largest in the country. The homes are located as follows: Home No. 1, at 844 Forrest road; Home No. 2, at 159 Pulliam street and Home No. 3, at 248 Currier street.

In every other way has Atlanta's Better Homes week exceeded the expectations of the committee of over 500 men, women and children, who have worked for months to make this an epochal week. The threatening weather, which earlier in the week made attendance difficult, has but served to increase the later crowds. Today will be the last opportunity offered our citizens to view these displays, which are said to have done so much in an educational way to help Atlantans on the way toward better homes of their own.

After today these homes, which this week have seemed so complete, and so typically a real abode of happiness, will disappear as exhibits, some lucky people buying them and in some cases the furnishings with them, or the furnishings separately, will have them for their very own.

For Better Home No. 1 Professor J. H. Smith, furnished the lot on which the Minter Homes firm built the home, according to plans used by Better Homes committee, and adapted from the Architects' Small House Bureau, by Thornton Marye, Atlanta architect.

The small four-room colonial cottage at 248 Currier street, adapted for negroes from Architects' Small House Service plans by Thornton Marye and the Atlanta committee, and built by W. C. Carson, for the committee, has attracted delighted comments fromt white citizens as well as negroes during the week, since it represents the best thought for a home for $3,000.

The apartment at 159 Pulliam street, borrowed this week by the committee from Mrs. G. L. Wentworth, is also for rent to some family appreciating a model home. The furnishings for all these homes are so perfectly adapted to the homes that the committee will be gratified if the new owners purchase them with the house. This is made easy by the fact that each article in all three homes is listed as to price and source by the little green guide books, which are given out to each visitor to the homes.

Each home is completely equipped to live in, even to the food in the larders. Every article possibly required is to be found in the living rooms, bedrooms, dining rooms, nurseries and kitchens.

A vegetable garden already growing—a car in the garage, and foliage and growing flowers make these homes complete. The large number of offers already received by the owners, show Atlanta's appreciation of this privilege.

REPRIEVE IS SOUGHT FOR GERALD CHAPMAN

Hartford, Conn., May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—A reprieve will be sought of Governor Trumbull next week for Gerald Chapman, under sentence of death for the murder of a New Britain policeman, his assistant counsel, Nathan O. Friedman, announced today. The stay would be pending a decision by the supreme court of errors of an appeal on Chapman's conviction. Chapman's appeal will not be considered until October with the posibility of a decision late in October or in November. June 25 had been fixed by Judge Newell Jennings as the date for Chapman's execution.

CATHOLIC SISTER DIES AT AUGUSTA

Augusta, Ga., May 16.—Sister May Joseph Heath, a member of the order of Sisters of Mercy, and one of the teaching staff of St. Mary's academy here, died tonight. The funeral will be held at Savannah Monday morning.

TAX EXEMPTION LAW IS SOUGHT

Baxley, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Fourteen years ago the advocates of prohibition used Appling county's position at the head of the legislative roll call to launch the famous "Tippins bill," beginning the great drouth which now covers the country. Not since that time has Appling pioneered important legislation, but now along with most of Georgia her people realize that Florida is monopolizing the limelight and receiving the visible supply of loose capital and floating population because of her magnificent tax-exemption gesture of invitation to the world at large.

As a result comes this resolution adopted here by the county chamber of commerce which opens the fight for a similar gesture from Georgia.

"It being apparent that our neighbor state, Florida, is receiving at this time a veritable flood of new people and new capital which combination is bringing about substantial development at a rate never before equalled in another state; and it being further clearly apparent from the testimony of hundreds of visitors to Florida who pass through our own county that this sudden influx of men and money from every state, including our own, is due to the definite and fixed policy of Florida against the imposition of inheritance and income taxes which penalize the initiative of the successful individual; therefore, be it resolved:

"That the Appling county Chamber of Commerce, an organization of farmers and business men representing a county of tremendous potentialities, the development of which is barely begun, and imperatively demands outside capital and new people, hereby urgently requests that the legislature of Georgia submit to the people, a constitutional amendment based on the Florida example; and, further, that J. W. Johnson, representative of Appling county therein, use the county's alphabetical priority to get such a bill before the house as No. 1 of the 1925 calendar."

This resolution was unanimously adopted and signed by C. A. Whittaker, president, a former Floridian but originally from Nebraska and now a banker in Appling.

Oil heat is here and Nokol brought it

The day of oil heat is here. Nokol brought it. The success of automatic oil heating for the home dates from the day 7 years ago when the first Nokol was installed.

Here two Nokols are shown, one installed in a steam boiler, and the other in a water heater.

The leadership of Nokol, established at that time has never been challenged. Of approximately 75,000 automatic oil burners installed in the United States, by 150 manufacturers, 22,000 are Nokols.

Nokol leadership has been maintained by the principles of oil combustion the first Nokol laid down. In 7 years not one fundamental change in these principles has been necessary.

The success of automatic oil heating for homes dates from the day the Nokol combustion chamber was perfected. It is radically different from any other method of burning oil. In it oil burns with a clean, sootless, odorless flame.

Its operating cost is less than that of coal. It is also to the best of our knowledge less than that of any other oil burner, regardless of the grade of fuel used. Nokol efficiency makes possible the use of good fuel at the lowest cost.

To make certain you will have your Nokol for Fall, act now. Call for one of our engineers. Or send the coupon.

13 Teachers' Institutes To Be Held in Districts Of Georgia This Summer

Date Set for Twelve of Thirteen Schools Is From June 15 to July 14; Other Session Later.

Thirteen regional institutes for teachers will be held during the summer vacation period in Georgia this year. Twelve of these will be at the 12 district A. & M. schools, continuing from June 15 to July 1, while the 13th, at Ellijay, will open July 1 and close July 31.

J. O. Martin, state supervisor, in speaking of these institutes recently, pointed out that all teachers in the state school system who have not completed the 11th grade, and high school graduates who anticipate teaching next year, will find this work especially helpful and are urged to attend. He recommends that all county school superintendents call teachers of these classifications in their county for a conference and discuss with them the importance of their attending one of these institutes.

"It is useless," said Mr. Martin, "to talk about getting better teachers. There are none to get. We must take those in service and give them better training."

Six Day Classes.

Classroom work at each of the institutes will begin on time the first day and continue six days during each week, without interruption, Mr. Martin declared.

Three hours of credit will be given for satisfactory work, toward professionalizing elementary certificates, provided at least 104 recitations are taken by the student, with a minimum of four recitations each day the school is in session.

Teachers attending these summer schools are requested to take with them copies of the state-adopted texts for use in the courses which they intend pursuing. They should also make application to the principals of the A. & M. schools at once.

In addition to the regular faculty at each of the 13 summer schools, a corps of special itinerant lecturers have been secured. These lecturers include George Godard, J. O. Martin, Miss Caro Lane, I. S. Smith, Miss Annie Jane Simpson, M. L. Duggan, Miss S. M. Duggan, R. D. Webb, Dr. Abercrombie and Dr. Jett Bowden, of the state health department; P. F. Brown, E. A. Pound, S. V. Lanford, J. P. Faulkner and others.

Location of Schools.

The location of the different schools with their respective faculties, is as follows:

Statesboro—Mrs. F. D. Sockinger, Miss Lula Smith, R. M. Monts, Jack Lance, Miss Louise Enloe, R. E. Rountree.

Tifton—Miss Ida Durrence, George Roach, Miss Dora Ennis, L. M. Wilson, Walter, McMichael.

Americus—Miss Sarah Cobb, J. F. Lambert, Miss Annie Greer, Mrs. J. C. Hinson, J. C. Dukes, Miss Martha Wheatley.

Carrollton—Mrs. H. R. Adams, R. O. Powell, Mrs. A. H. Foster, John Holt, Van Fletcher.

Monroe—Miss Marjorie Thomas, Roy Drunkenmiller, Miss Irene Dockins, Miss Maud King, L. F. Herring.

Barnesville—Miss Mae Woodward, J. P. Cash, Miss Mamie L. Pitts, Miss Josie McAdams, J. M. Starr.

Powder Springs—Miss Lucile Peek, W. V. Lanier, Mrs. V. H. Letfwich, A. N. Swain, Miss Annie Brumby.

Madison—Miss Del Rey Adams, J. H. Purks, J. D. Nash, Miss Elizabeth Ballard, R. W. Haynie.

Clarkesville—Mrs. Ola Jones, E. L. Adams, Bruce Ray, Mrs. R. D. Osterhout, E. N. Reynolds.

Granite Hill—Miss Eylau Anderson, Miss Lillian Asbury, Mrs. E. J. Forrester, Miss Nannilee Saunders, Ernest Anderson.

Douglas—Miss Mattie Lively, G. E. Usher, Miss Ruth Bolton, Mrs. W. T. Wood, John Harris.

Cochran—Mrs. J. A. Stump, Mrs. J. O. Coleman, Mrs. T. E. Jago, Miss Ethel Miller, Paul Ellison.

Ellijay (July 1 to July 31)—Miss Lula Bragg, Mrs. O. J. Holliman, W. P. Lunsford, W. P. Martin, Miss Mattie George McGee, W. E. Bryan.

Atlanta Author Completes Work After Many Years

One of the most fascinating books to come from the publishers in recent years is "The History of Famous Songs and Poems," by Henry E. Harman, of Atlanta. The book is published by the Industrial Press Publishing company of Atlanta and is a valuable acquisition to the library of anyone with pretensions to culture.

The dedication, written by the author, best expresses the exquisite sentiment which adds so charming an atmosphere to the entire work. It is dedicated "To all who love the melody of old songs, who find inspiration in the stray note of the long-ago, and who live over again the glory of Love's Young Dream, coming as an echo out of the past."

Such old songs as "Lead Kindly Light," "Dixie," "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "The Star-Spangled Banner," "Maryland, My Maryland," "The Bivouac of the Dead," "The Conquered Banner," "Old Oaken Bucket," "Rock Me to Sleep," "The Rain Song," "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Jes' A-Wearyin' for You," "Auld Lang Syne," and a score of others form the subjects of chapters, telling the story of their authorship and the circumstances of their birth.

Speaking of Frank L. Stanton, Georgia's poet laureate and beloved singer of the simple songs of the south, Mr. Harman says:

"Stanton's poems impress one like the low whispers of lovers in a darkened room, the minor note-call of a bird to its mate in the gathering summer twilight, the last merry tones in the voices of children before they fall into blissful sleep—these songs of tenderness which murmur like the voice of waves upon the white-sanded shores of the soul."

From cover to cover the book is packed with interest for the lover of poetry. Many of the finest poems of the English language are given, with the details of their writing.

Mr. Harman worked on the preparation of this volume for many years and its publication marks the completion of a genuine work of love for him. He is one of the best known literary men of Atlanta. Among his other published works the following books of verse:

"In Peaceful Valley," "Gates of Twilight," "Dreams of Yesterday," "In Love's Domain," "A Bar of Song," "Yuletide and You," "Songs of Florida Shores" and "Collected Poems."

Two of the best known of Mr. Harman's prose works are "Idle Dreams of an Idle Day" and "The Window of Souls." The latter is a collection of three stories, while the first named is a story of yachting in Florida waters.

Musical Clinic Test Winners Named After Series of Elimination Clinics

Photograph by J. T. Holloway, Staff Photographer.

Four scholarship winners in the Musical Clinics conducted by Professor Wesley Peacock and Arthur Codington under the sponsorship of The Constitution and the Atlanta Woman's club. Left to right: Florrie N. Wallis, 313 East Cambridge avenue, College Park, age 13; W. J. Deal, Oglethorpe university, age 17; Margery White, 125 Ansley street, Decatur, age 14, and Louise Irwin MacIntyre, 39 West Sixteenth street, age 10.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Displaying natural musical talent which is declared to be so remarkable that it is closely akin to genius, four Atlanta children Saturday were named as winners of four free musical scholarships given in connection with the musical clinics conducted by Professor Wesley Peacock and Arthur Codington, under sponsorship of The Constitution and the Atlanta Woman's club.

Piano scholarships were awarded to the following:

Florrie N. Wallis, 313 E. Cambridge avenue, College Park, age 13.

Louise Irwin MacIntyre, 39 W. Sixteenth street, age 10.

Margery White, 125 Ansley street, Decatur, aged 14.

A violin scholarship was awarded to W. J. Deal, Oglethorpe university student, age 17.

These scholarships were offered by the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, through George F. Lindner, director, and Mrs. Valeska De La Fuente, well-known local music teacher. The conservatory gives a piano and violin scholarship covering the summer term and Mrs. De La Fuente gives two piano scholarships of six weeks each with the possibility of further extension if the pupil proves diligent and painstaking.

Result of Clinics.

The clinics were held last week at the Woman's club but it became necessary to arrange a final elimination clinic when it was discovered that, out of the 150 and more children who had taken the test, fully one-third had ranked so high that it was not possible to select the scholarship winners without further eliminations.

This final test, limited to those who had ranked as "superior" or "very superior," was held on Thursday night last. As in the first clinics, the Seashore psychological tests were used, by means of special phonograph records, and special physical examinations were made by Mr. Codington.

Originally only three scholarships were offered, but when the two psychologists found that the four children named were so closely bunched in their musical gifts that it was practically impossible to pick any three as the leaders, Mrs. De La Fuente, who had offered one scholarship, generously consented to make her contribution two, although her class is already practically filled to its capacity.

Winners Are Praised.

In commenting upon the records made by the winners and others taking part in the final elimination tests for those grading as very superior and superior in the earlier tests, Professor Wesley Peacock and Arthur Codington, who have conducted the clinic, said:

"In grading these final records, the percentages made by the winners are so amazingly high that they seem to indicate a very remarkable natural talent close akin to genius. Musicians attending the tests have commented on their difficulty. Comparisons should hardly be drawn between the winners, as all showed highly superior natural gifts evenly distributed in each of the six elements of musical talent, but each showed some special superiority that might be mentioned. Miss Wallis in 50 most difficult trials for music memory made only one error, and only two errors in judging intensity of tones; in judging pitch up to 1-200th of a tone she made only two errors. Miss Wallis plays by ear almost any piece she hears, but has only taken three months of music lessons in her life, that being about two years ago. Little Miss MacIntyre also exhibited marvelous talent, especially for one only 10 years of age, her records in all branches never falling below 98 per cent in rank. She made 100 per cent with only one error in the difficult tests for time. Miss White made only one error on time and only two in music memory, also grading 100 per cent in both of these branches. Mr. Deal, while a student at Oglethorpe playing in the orchestra, has pursued study of the violin. In time he also made only one mistake, and in the difficult intensity tests, giving ability for expression so necessary in a violinist, he made but one error, grading 100 per cent in these branches. It is doubtful whether records such as these have been made anywhere in the country."

Others Show Talent.

Others making very high records in the final elimination tests are as follows: Nodas Kakis, Harold Ungar, Jeanne Haslett, Madeline Banton, Billy Bob Plage, Maxwell Gallienne, Frances Stone, David E. Warner, Carlyn Marie Strauss, Mary Spratlin, Helen Lewis, Aileen M. Stephens, Gene Lee, Frances Chosewood, Julianna Cocking, Irving Lipshitz, Sam Seitz, Willie Mae Goswick, Jean Nutting, Nick Chotas, Henry N. Wise, Eloise Duncan, Frances Hopkins, Alice Gray Harrison, Kathleen Bowen.

An interesting result of the tests has been the proof that certain physical indications of musical talent in the ear and forehead tally 80 or 90 per cent with the Seashore tests, and other indications show special kinds of talent, so that Mr. Codington merely from an observational analysis was able to write down the names of probable winners, which when compared with the scientific percentages later calculated, were found to be 70 to 90 per cent correct.

Mr. Codington, who formulated originally the plan for the clinics, will later publish a series of articles illustrated with photographs showing discoveries made through the tests, and will collaborate with Professor Peacock in several articles for scientific magazines.

CHICAGO OPENS NEW $75,000,000 RAILROAD STATION

Chicago, May 16.—Chicago's new $75,000,000 union railroad terminal will be opened tonight at midnight, central standard time.

There will be no formality. Ticket sellers, check room attendants, baggage men, and concessionaries will simply bundle up their tickets, time tables, baggage checks, and other paraphernalia and transfer them to the new structure across the street. Hundreds of waiting passengers will be asked to move to the spacious new waiting room.

Construction of the new terminal was begun in 1914, halted by the war, but resumed in 1920 when Joshua D'Esposito, chief engineer in charge, returned to Chicago after serving in the United States Shipping Board service. Finishing touches remain to be completed, and the formal dedication will take place in June.

MINING MERGER WHICH INVOLVES MILLIONS EFFECTED

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 16.—One of the largest mergers in the history of the western mining industry, involving 4,306 acres of mineral lands in the heart of the famous Park City district, the producer of over $225,000,000 in gold, silver and lead, was announced here today.

The corporations concerned are the Park, Utah Mining company, the Park City Mining and Smelting company, the Ontario Silver Mining company and the Daly Mining company, the properties of which have paid $31,095,136 in dividends and produced in excess of $125,000,000 in metallic wealth during the last half century of mining activity.

The proposed consolidation is undertaken to insure more economical operation, improved marketing facilities, eliminate some of the vexatious tax burdens and utilize favorable contracts held by the companies interested.

Huge Switchboard Installed at Offices Of Power Company

A private telephone switchboard, larger than that used in any except the larger cities of Georgia and the largest private board in Georgia has just been installed by the Georgia Railway and Power company, it was announced Saturday.

With eight operators at present the private exchange handles an average of nearly 7,000 calls each day and the equipment is sufficient for enough additional operators to handle at least twice that number if it should become necessary.

NEGRO MEDICAL BODY PLANS ATLANTA MEET

The Georgia State Medical association (colored) will hold its annual convention in Atlanta this week.

This will be the largest convention the association has ever had, according to reports of the general secretary, Dr. C. Waymond Reeves, of Atlanta. Several specialists of both races will appear on the scientific program.

Wednesday night at the first Congregational church addresses of welcome will be read. A letter from Mayor Sims will be read by the general secretary, welcoming the delegates to Atlanta. Bishop J. S. Flipper, Dr. H. R. Butler, A. F. Herndon and other noted men will appear on this program.

AID OF PHYSICIANS SOUGHT BY CITY

The city health department has requested every physician of Atlanta to send in his or her name to the department to be placed on the regular mailing list of practicing physicians, it was announced at the department Saturday by Henry C. Martin.

The department is seeking to have physicians make regular reports of certain kinds of diseases and pamphlets relating to reporting of these diseases will be distributed. Those who have not received cards from the department relative to this are requested to call the city laboratory, Walnut 4463, and leave their names and addresses.

STATE MAY INSURE HIGHWAY WORKERS

State highway department employees are covered by the workmen's compensation act, George M. Napier, attorney general, ruled in an opinion rendered Saturday on the request of the highway board.

Employees injured in line of duty will receive compensation on a scale fixed by the Georgia Industrial commission, if the board adopts the system. The board has hesitated in establishing compensation because it was not sure of its authority in the matter.

UNDERCLASSMEN WIN IN EMORY CONTESTS

Emory University, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) — Underclassmen were doubly victorious here tonight when the freshmen took the freshman-sophomore declamation contest, and the juniors won the junior-senior oratorical contest.

Wallace Alston, of Atlanta, delivering "The New South" by Henry Grady, won the first event, while Audrey Dickley, of Huntsville, Ala., making an address called "Great Memorials" took the latter event. Alston is a freshman and Dickey is a junior.

Judges were G. W. Glausier, superintendent of public schools of Decatur; Dr. W. G. Harry, of the department of English of Georgia Tech, and H. O. Smith, of Boys' High school faculty.

Acting Dean J. Gordon Stipe, of the university, presided.

SEVEN STUDENTS JOIN HONOR FRAT AT EMORY DINNER

Seven junior students today are members of the W. C. S., senior honorary society of Emory university, having completed initiation Saturday night at the Capital City club, where a banquet, attended by many alumni members of the chapter, was held.

D. V. S. is considered the highest honor in the power of the school of liberal arts of the university to bestow, and election is a stamp of approval of those going out on those who are to follow. It is said to be the passing of the toga from one group of leaders in student activities to another.

One Atlantan, Henry Johnson Miller, is among the seven selected by who are to follow. It is said to be the senior members of the society from the class of 1926. Scholarship weighs three-tenths in the selection of a member. Other points considered are his "love for outdoor sports and athletics, courage, generosity, kindness and high moral character."

It is the purpose of the society to offer invitations to the "seven most representative men of each class to promote a loyalty to the university" and to aid in building up a great university for the education of young southerners.

Just before the end of the year the seven senior members of the society tender invitations to only seven members of the junior class. And this means that about one out of 50 students can hope to receive the honor.

Other members of the society in the class of 1926 are Robert Louis Fagan, of Fort Valley; George Mills Hill, Jr., of Sylvania; Arthur Gordon Logan, of Gainesville; James Quillian Maxwell, of Hogansville; George Kerry Smith, of Carrollton, and Hampton Harwell Stovall, of Medison.

Members in the class of 1925, who selected the new members of the society are Emmett Collins, Atlanta; Marshall Wiggins, Atlanta; Willis Warnell, Cairo; Paul Spurlin, Oakland, Fla.; Robert Edmondson, Jr., Rome; Henry Scott, Murray, Ky., and William Peterson, Emory University.

DR. ERNEST BOWDEN AND MISS BAXTER TO MARRY IN JULY

The marriage of Dr. Ernest John Bowden, pastor of the Liberal Christian church, and Miss Romona Weaver Baxter, former member of the Lyric Players, will take place in July in Syracuse, N. Y., Dr. Bowden announced Saturday upon his return to Atlanta from Boston, Mass.

Miss Baxter is the daughter of Mrs. Blanche E. Baxter, of Syracuse, and met Dr. Bowden while attending the Liberal Christian church here. Dr. Bowden is interested in drama, and is a member of the Little Theater Guild. He returned Saturday from Boston, where he attended the centennial of the American and British Unitarian associations.

A Children's Paradise
--The South's Finest Playgrounds Open June 1st at Avondale Estates

EVERY precious ounce of this sturdy little frame is vibrant with energy — his whole being charged with joy of life in the great outdoors. On the road to robust manhood—sure of his glorious heritage of health and happiness.

No soot and dust to worry him, no hard cobblestones and asphalt to tire his feet, no busy streets fraught with traffic dangers to threaten his happy existence.

He's living as a child should live—and as children will live in Avondale Estates, where every provision has been made for their health and happiness.

Best-Equipped Playgrounds in the South

Avondale is a perfect home for childhood—and on June 1st the first six and a half acres of completely-equipped playground space will open.

Set in a grove of majestic trees, with abundant shade—this fairyland for the youngsters will have every safe and wholesome aid to play that can be secured or imagined. Here will be a playground park as fine and thoroughly furnished as can be found south of New York City.

Merry-go-rounds, slides in sizes for all young ages, see-saws, swings—literally dozens of them—an ocean wave on which thirty tots can ride, horizontal bars, parallel bars, wading pools and sand pits—everything, in fact, that could possibly be desired or provided.

Permanent Equipment

The various devices are all-steel, the working parts are ball-bearing, and mounted on solid foundations—permanent, so they will always be available for the children of Avondale. The equipment, the first of its kind to be erected in Atlanta, is of the same high standard found in the larger eastern cities.

For the children growing up and the grown-ups, too, equal provision has been made. The large Venetian swimming pool will open June 1st; the Forest Hills golf course, with splendid greens and fairways, now being played upon, lies adjacent. A large lake for boating and fishing; the Avondale stables, where fine-gaited saddle horses or ponies for the children may be secured; tennis courts, athletic fields of every description—all these things will be available to the residents of this soon-to-be city of 15,000.

A Very Small Cash Payment and $25 or $30 a Month
Buys Your Lot

It takes no great outlay of money to own a home or homesite in Avondale Estates, for a very small cash payment and only $25 or $30 a month—less than a dollar a day!—buys a beautiful homesite, 60 by 200 feet or more, in this magnificent new $5,000,000 suburban city. The cash payment is only 15% of the purchase price of the lot, the balance being paid in 60 equal monthly installments. When the lot is paid for, we will assume responsibility for financing and building your home, designed according to your own desires.

Every lot is terraced and landscaped by noted scenic architects, shade trees and shrubbery, fruit trees and vines—and this without charge to you. The growth of the foliage and trees alone will double the value of your lot in two or three years' time.

Sales at Avondale Estates to date have broken all records for residential property in Atlanta's history. As more homes are built, as more and more citizens take up their residence here, where hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been expended for elaborate improvements and beautification, values are bound to rise with amazing rapidity.

Call on us at our new downtown offices, on Peachtree Street, in the Aragon block. See the lifelike model of the property and visualize Avondale's marvelous features. We will gladly motor you to the property in one of our private cars.

Everything Young Hearts Desire

Every piece of equipment in Avondale playgrounds will be of the finest quality—absolutely indestructible and entirely safe for play by the youngest of the children. Metal throughout, the swings, slides, merry-go-rounds and all other devices are made for permanency and smooth operation. No item of quality or variety has been overlooked.

One pleasing feature will be the wading pools for the tiniest tots, where they, with entire safety, can enjoy this wholesome play.

Only 12 of 80 Ships Left Upon Rum Row After 10-Day Siege

Dozen Newspaper Men Taken on Inspection of Results Accomplished by Dry Navy Blockade.

MOST OF VESSELS HAVE GONE HOME

Little or No Liquor Is Getting Ashore Now From Nantucket Light to Atlantic City.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, May 16.—Only 12 ships, manned by dejected crews, remain of more than 80 rum row floating liquor warehouses, after 10 days of the coast guard's blockade of the Atlantic coast.

This figure is official. The rum sellers were checked up in an inspection cruise of a dozen newspaper men and reporters of press associations, which was completed today. For four days, Lieutenant Commander Stephen S. Yeandle, aide to the coast guard's commandant, Rear Admiral Billard, and who is known as the official's "ears and eyes" on the blockade front, cruised the Atlantic waters from Nantucket light on the north to Atlantic City on the south with the newspaper observers aboard the coast guard cutter Pequot.

Little Liquor Getting Ashore.

The inspection cruise, probably the most comprehensive ever made of the mid-Atlantic rum area, which Commander Yeandle termed the national shame, revealedt hat little, if any, contraband liquor is getting ashore through New York, Long Island, New England or New Jersey channels. Through these channels, up to May 5, the day the coast guard offensive got under way, flowed the greatest flood of liquor that the government has had to contend against, the coast guard officials admitted.

The inspectors did a thorough job. All the erstwhile rum bases were visited and the number of remaining "rummies"—the name given the contraband carriers by the guardsmen—checked up. The newspapermen looked at the ocean end of the gigantic rum-running "industry" in its every phase.

Ten days ago the coast guard had 38 whisky-selling ships charted on the notorious New York-New Jersey row, extending from a point south of Fire Ireland to Atlantic City.

Number Much Diminished.

At dusk Friday night the investigators found seven ships there. With the blockade's start, there were 30 "rummies" in the Montauk point and Nantucket light sectors. The observers aboard the Pequot found five ships in their place, one of them the French steamer Pellegrini, battered veteran of many liquor-selling crusades on "the row."

The inspection tour did not include

HOT SESSION SEEN FOR CITY COUNCIL

Selection of Purchasing Agent and School Education Ordinance To Lead Debate.

Election of a city purchasing agent and renewal of a fight by Councilman John A. White and others to repeal an ordinance providing for an election June 10 to decide whether or not the board of education shall be abolished and administration of schools restored to a councilmanic committee will be chief features of the meeting of council scheduled for Monday, it was learned Saturday at the city hall. Heated arguments are expected on both matters.

Two candidates are seeking the post as city purchasing agent. W. P. Price, who has filled the position several years, is seeking reelection by council, while Walter E. Vance, former warrant clerk in the office of former governor Thomas W. Hardwick, is an applicant.

It is expected that a spirited fight will develop over the election of a purchasing agent as both candidates apparently have formidable support.

Councilman White is expected to renew his fight for the repeal of the ordinance calling the special election to settle the school administration question. He will be joined in his resolution of repeal by Councilmen Horace Russell, of the Ninth ward; Harry York, Sixth ward, and Aldermen J. R. Bachman, Twelfth, and Oscar Williamson, Ninth ward.

In discussing the proposal to call off the school election Mayor Sims stated Saturday he felt the board of education would approve a move to change the administration of the school finances which would take this work from the board and turn it over to other hands.

Another feature of the Monday meeting will be the presentation of a resolution drawn by the tax committee creating a special investigator who will check over the tax digest with a list of school patrons to determine whether or not the patrons are paying their share of taxation.

No other business of outstanding importance is expected to come up at the Monday session, according to statements of members of council made Saturday.

I. C. C. WILL PROBE FINANCIAL CRASH OF ST. PAUL ROAD

Congress Also May Investigate Causes Leading to Receivership for Great Northwestern Railroad.

Washington, May 16.—The financial collapse of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, which was followed by a series of somewhat disturbing rumors as to what led up to this receivership, is to be investigated by the interstate commerce commission.

Furthermore, it probably will be investigated by congress, also, as Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin, has announced his intention of asking for such an inquiry when congress meets. Many of his constituents in Wisconsin lost large sums through the decline and collapse of this important road which traversed the state, and Lenroot wants the truth known.

The interstate commerce commission announced Saturday that:

Scope of Investigation.

"The commission will inquire into the history, management, financial and other operating accounts and practices of the St. Paul in order to determine the manner and methods in which the business of the company has been conducted, with a view to making a report in such order as may be appropriate."

Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota, who also wants a congressional inquiry, believes that big financial interests wrecked the road and he has criticized the federal reserve board for not endeavoring to prevent a crash. It should have been possible to refinance the bonds which came due this year, Shipstead said.

Debts Are Half Billion.

The road's unpaid obligations approximated one-half billion dollars. One criticism was that the road did not make sufficient effort to obtain loans from the government to tide over the pinch. Another is that through a system of interlocking subsidiaries, the road paid extravagant prices for rolling stock, repairs and supplies, and thus diverted the revenues of the road into subsidiary corporations controlled by insiders who got the profits, while the St. Paul stockholders went without dividends and bondholders without their money when it came due. Unwise extensions of the road through unproductive territory also were blamed as one of the contributing causes.

But St. Paul officials and other railroad men attributed the difficulties to the agricultural depression, the diversion of transcontinental tonnage through the Panama canal, and rate reductions on agricultural commodities, which formed a large proportion of the freight carried.

View of 50 Railroads.

This view was set forth in a brief filed with the interstate commerce commission by 50 western roads asking for higher freight rates.

HardLuckHits Driver of Auto In 2 Counties

George Pope Wrecks Car in Fulton and Finds Home Raided in DeKalb.

George Pope, of 951 East North avenue, Saturday afternoon decided that he had his full share when his automobile crashed into a telephone pole and was confiscated with a small quantity of liquor; when he found his home was raided and a cache of moonshine destroyed—when he was arrested in DeKalb county for violation of the prohibition law and at the same time laid himself liable to similar charges in Fulton county together with charges of reckless driving and speeding.

Pope's misfortunes began shortly after noon Saturday as he was driving on Edgewood avenue. A motorcycle cop decided he was going too fast for the safety of pedestrians and offered chase. Pope was going east in Edgewood avenue when Motorcycle Officer P. H. Jones, sped after him, the pursuit ending just at the Fulton-DeKalb county line when Pope lost control of the car and crashed into a telephone pole, badly damaging the car, and receiving bruises about the body.

When the car crashed into the pole, Pope fled into DeKalb county out of the jurisdiction of his pursuer. The car and liquor were taken to police headquarters.

When Pope arrived at his home in Decatur he found that Sheriff J. A. McCurdy and another county officer were paying him a visit and had located a keg and a jar of liquor in the residence. Pope arrived just in time of be placed under arrest by DeKalb officers on charges of violation of the prohibition laws. He was released on $1,500 bond pending hearing in DeKalb county.

And when he comes inside the city limits of Atlanta he is subject to arrest on charges of speeding and Every Reference To Establishing Art Museum in Atlanta Is Enthusiastically Received.

BY RALPH T. JONES

Marked by a brilliancy exceeding even that of the first Atlanta exhibit of one year ago, the second annual showing by the Grand Central Art Galleries of New York was formally opened with a banquet and gallery tour at the Biltmore hotel Saturday night.

Present at the banquet were four hundred leaders of Atlanta cultural life, with a score of the most distinguished painters and sculptors from all parts of the country present as honor guests. Brief speeches at the close of the dinner were marked by the enthusiasm which greeted every reference to the proposed art museum for Atlanta, and the occasion reached its climax when former Governor John M. Slaton, in the principal speech, declared that the need of an art gallery presented the opportunity to some Atlantan of the necessary means to immortalize his name.

Haverty Presides.

J. J. Haverty, chairman of the art committee of the chamber of commerce, under whose auspices these annual exhibits are brought to Atlanta, presided, and in a delightful vein introduced the visiting artists to Atlanta and presented the speakers of the evening.

Mayor Walter A. Sims, voicing a welcome to the distinguished visitors, pledged every assistance in his power towards immediate construction of a permanent museum of art for Atlanta.

Hobart Nichols, noted American artist, was the first to speak, paying a tribute in his talk to the artistic enthusiasm of Atlanta and to the natural beauties of Georgia and the south. He was followed by Violet Oakley, famous woman artist known all over the world for her great mural paintings. Miss Oakley gave a most cultured talk, and concluded with a wonderful tribute to the immortal genius of John Singer Sargent, who recently died in London.

Paul Daugherty, famous painter of marines, spoke next, describing how all the great artists of history have sprung from peoples who were permeated with artistic understanding and knowledge and he predicted that the tremendous popular interest of America today, in all things beautiful and artistic, presaged the dawn of another renaissance, coming to the world through artistic development of this country.

Frederick Ballard Williams recalled his presence in Atlanta for the exhibition one year ago and told his audience that he doubted if Atlanta realized how far-reaching in effect the wonderful success of that exhibition had been. "Atlanta did a thing

RIFFIAN OFFENSIVE HALTED BY FRENCH

Troops Advance After Clash With Tribesmen and Free Outposts Held by Rebels.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Paris, May 16.—An official war ministry communique dealing with the Moroccan situation says:

"After General Colombat's forces took the heights of Bilbane, they advanced over the Oued-Aculey line and freed two outposts. General Freydenberg's column today stopped a violent counter offensive against its position.

The French troops had a hot fight cleaning out the Riffians who had surrounded the garrison. The rescuers, however, were aided by a half dozen members of the garrison who still were able to fight after two weeks of continuous day and night resistance to the tribesmen.

Captain Duboin and one other French officer and fifty Senegalese held the blockhouse under constant fire, with food and blocks of ice to be used as water being dropped for them from French airplanes.

Both officers had been wounded and only six of their men were able to continue fighting when the rescuers reached them today.

General Freydenberg's forces are facing a growing menace by the con-

The Life of a New Yorker

As Told In the Diary of PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Sunday, May 10. — Heard the chiming of bells while still abed and thought of the faithful all over the world answering that call to worship and especially my own people in the Flemish lowlands donning their stiff Sunday cloth and the women their lace caps to look their best. Me thought I heard again the voices of our famous pulpit preachers, exhorting the crowds and felt a touch of melancholy or "Heimweh;" a natural and I believe universal feeling for the most homesick person I ever encountered was an American marine officer on leave in Paris.

Then for a brisk walk in the park with my dog. In the afternoon a pleasant drive through the country and along the Hudson river and the little trees reminded me of Holland. From a distance they looked like children's toys mirrored in the placid water, as if waiting for some beautiful ceremony.

In the evening to hear the Artists' choir at the Manhattan Opera and heard Rafael Diaz give some selections and saw Madame Novello, the mother of the motion picture star, conducting. Below in a box sat Grand Duke Boris of Russia and his wife whom I had the honor to tell of the Hindenburg election. Thence to Madame Novello's studio to congratulate her on the performance and fell to talking with sundry artists about the political events of the day. One Pole particularly exasperated me by his display of hatred against the Germans. So late to bed.

Monday, May 11.—Up to the first streaks of dawn and at my task of analyzing the German election, which was no easy matter, most of the newspapers only guessing at the meaning of it all.

My morning constitutional performed, off to the seething maelstrom of Manhattan for a chat with the printer and saw H. L. Gates there, the popular writer, with whom I repaired to a nearby "maison de rafraichissement" and hear him expound views on the press in England and America.

In the afternoon to Lia Rosen, the famous Austrian actress where a crowd of young intellectuals had foregathered who conversed in a Babel of languages, some of them absolutely strange and foreign to me.

In the evening to dinner with Pascal Merrimee, the French writer who is visiting America, and felt amused over his sincere desire to talk English, which he claims is nothing but "French spoken through the nose."

So home and after reading a chapter from Floyd Dell's "Mad Ideal" fell to sleep dreaming of Judy and her bourgeois foster parents.

Tuesday, May 12.—After doing my duty by the press went to Ellis Island to watch the reception of immigrants. My prejudices wholly vanished as I saw the sympathetic and kindly way in which the officials treated the newcomers. When I ventured to direct some of the helpless newcomers I unwittingly let myself in for a good deal of trouble, inasmuch as they clung to me for hours and asked more questions than a battalion of professors could answer.

In the afternoon a driving rain and for a chat with Dr. Levine, the member of the old Russian duma, who related his conversation with the czar after the 1905 rebellion in Petrograd. Realizing I was hearing an episode in world history I was silent and impressed with the terrible drama that has been Russia's for the past twenty years or so. At the Hotel Waldorf I ran into Norman McIntosh, the Canadian writer with whom I journeyed to Quebec two years ago on newspaper business, and we recalled the time our train was stalled for ten days, a bridge ahead and another behind having been washed away on the Nova Scotia coast. With the Canadian to a gathering at the studio of Madame Eleanore Browne, the writer of short stories, and thence home for a study on "Traces of Civilization in the United States." And for all I learned from the book America may be still inhabited by wild savages, for Morpheus, the god of sleep, mercifully closed my eyes.

* * * * *

Wednesday, May 13.—The postman with a letter from the south of France telling the news that the Abbe of Mios, with whom I spent a few days of convalescence during the war, had died. So in the subway my mind traveled faster than the coach and hovered in the Midi forests.

Read in the daily press that Edna Ferber's "So Big" had won the Pulitzer prize for literature and how Miss Ferber had donated the money to an organization for sick and disabled writers. And I could not help wondering as to when some philanthropic institution will award a prize to people who need it.

So at work all day on a study of European newspapers and read with surprise a translation of an article by myself in a German daily. So with swelled head to luncheon and with a bottle of Italian wine more egotistical and vainglorious than that patriot Andrew Gump, late candidate for the presidency.

In the evening devoured Camille Flammarion's "Haunted Houses" and was so nervous from the dreadful stories related therein that I feared to turn off the light.

* * * * *

Thursday, May 14.—Early on the go and with my wife to select curtains in a downtown store which earned me the appellation of "homme absolument san gout," which signifies that I have not the least bit of taste. But acquiesced in the situation to the best of my ability and nature, longing for the hour of luncheon.

In the afternoon to meet a former German minister, Dr. Oskar Cohen, who beat the air with his fists as he talked about the presidential election in his country.

In the evening to a meeting at Cooper's Union, where the chief rabbi of Russia spoke about his experiences in escaping from the bolsheviks. So late home and did not stop pounding my typewriter till the world was bathed in the light of a new day.

* * * * *

Friday, May 15.—The sleep of exhaustion till 3 o'clock. A visit to the printer. To the theater to see "What Price Glory?" and later to a supper club to spend some hard-earned money with a heavy heart, but I hope a gay enough face.

* * * * *

Saturday, May 16.—From early morning till late at night writing for the public print and somewhat doubtful as to the future of French politics, with the return of Joseph Caillaux and Briand. And thought how the whole change must affect the old "Tiger" Clemenceau, who was all for putting Caillaux up against the wall and shooting him at one time. And recalling my visit to "Monsieur Georges" at his little villa in Brittany, I felt that age must have mellowed his sentiments somewhat and that he is no longer the ardent firebrand of war days.

For a stroll in the park, but cut short by a shower and read a few chapters in a "History of the Civil War" and marveled at the generalship of the southerners, which was made much clearer by a profusion of maps and campaign sketches. So to sleep after this little excursion in history.

ROADS AND TAXES LEADING SUBJECTS FOR LEGISLATORS

Georgia Assemblymen Indicate 3 Leading Topics at Session Will Be Roads, Schools, Taxes.

Dublin, Ga., May 16.—Support of a state bond issue for paving Georgia roads, as well as favoring the proposed highway from "coast to capital," will be given by Representative J. M. Peacock, of Laurens county, at the next session of the Georgia general assembly, he declares in a statement to the Associated Press. The Laurens member in the house also is in favor of abolishing the interitance tax.

Asserting that he is unable at the present to say whether he will introduce more than one or two measures, both local bills, in the coming session. Representative Peacock, speaking of the proposed measure for a bond issue, said:

"In my opinion this expenditure should be derived from the gasoline tag tax, and all of the money received from this tax should be used only for one purpose, and that should be on the roads altogether.

"I am in favor of the abolishment of the so-called inheritance tax. There are several laws that should be amended, and other things too numerous to mention."

WANTS HIGHWAY BODY REORGANIZED.

Sylvester, Ga., May 16.—Representative C. W. Hillhouse, one of Worth county's two members in the house at the coming sessions of the general assembly, is of the opinion that the state highway department should be reorganized, and that all state departments and bureaus should be operated on a more economical basis, in a statement made to the Associated Press.

Regarding the reorganization of the highway department, Mr. Hillhouse said:

"The state highway department should be reorganized, and so organized that there would be cut out so much overhead expense. It should be provided where more of the funds

LIFE-TIME SAVINGS OF COUPLE STOLEN AS THEY SAIL HOME

New York, May 16.—The savings of a lifetime, hoarded for their return to Poland, their homeland, were stolen from an aged couple in third-class quarters on the liner Paris, by two thieves just before the liner sailed for Europe today.

Ignatious Worozyniec and his wife, both 75 years of age, of King's Park, L. I., sailed without a money belt containing $2,500 in gold which they [illegible] for the home-going. A man they knew only as "Joe," who had [illegible] and helped them buy tickets and get passports, and a fake customs inspector who insisted on seeing how much gold they had, managed to get the belt away from the bewildered old couple.

Georgia Industry Forges to Front As Mills Increase

LEADERS OF U. C. V. WILL BE HONORED BY SPECIAL COINS

General James A. Thomas and Others To Get Coins at Special Program at Reunion.

The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth coins issued by the United States under an act of congress authorizing mintage of five million silver half-dollars in memory of the valor of the soldiers of the south, will be presented by the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association to heads of the four Confederate organizations at the reunion of Veterans at Dallas next week it was announced here Saturday.

Coin No. 5 in the order of issuance from the mint will go to General James A. Thomas, of Dublin, Ga., commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans. Coin No. 6 will go to Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, president-general of the Confederated Southern Memorial Associations. Coin No. 7 will go to Mrs. Frank Harrold, of Americus, Ga., president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Coin No. 8 will go to D. S. Etheridge, of Chattanooga, commander-in-chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Ahead of these coins in the order of issuance from the mint are only four others, which have been reserved by the association for presentation to high officials of the government of the United States.

Presentation of the coins at Dallas will take place a tthe welcome exercises to be held at 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, the opening day of the reunion.

One thousand Confederate Memorial coin workers for two days have been actively canvassing the business firms and organizations of Atlanta in the effort to live up to the predictions of Governor Walker, Mayor Sims, Clark Howell, ex-Governor Harris and others, when on Friday they affirmtd that with the enthusiasm aroused Atlanta would far surpass the goal of 200,000 coins.

Reports of division chairmen, vice chairmen, colonels and captains to Alfred C. Newell, city chairman, indicate that coins are being sold to firms with headquarters in Atlanta—not only by the hundreds, but by the thousands. Many organizations with their headquarters in Atlanta are buying the coin certificates to send to all other employees scattered over the country. The Askcraft-Wilkinscon company subscribed for 500 coins late Saturday and many other firms are purchasing large numbers.

A Virginia insurance company has challenged Georgia companies by making a requisition for a coin to present as a gift to every one of its thousands of policyholders. Several division leaders have already reported to Mr. Newell that business organizations in Atlanta have asked for several thousand coin certificates for employees.

Girl Autoist Fined, Held In $300 Bond

Miss Dorothy Barnes' Case Will Be Considered by Grand Jury.

Miss Dorothy Barnes, 17, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Barnes, of 788 Piedmont avenue, was fined $75 and costs and held in $300 bond, when she appeared Saturday afternoon before Recorder Murphy Calloway in answer to charges of reckless driving, in connection with an automobile crash April 27, between the car in which she was riding and a light sedan.

Recorder Calloway bound her over to the grand jury charged with assault with intent to murder, as the result of the injuries suffered by the three occupants of the sedan.

In commenting on the case, Recorder Calloway stated that there did not appear to be any justification for the defendant. "Human life is getting to be too cheap through the reckless operation of automobiles," he said, "and while this is a regrettable affair, I must discharge my duty."

Attorney Fred Schlimper represented the prosecution, and the defendant was represented by Attorneys Hughes, Roberts and Paul Johnson.

The prosecuting attorney asked Recorder Calloway to treat the case as a city offense and not to send it to the state courts.

Witnesses for the prosecution, among whom were three negroes, testified that Miss Barnes failed to stop following the crash, while the defendant and Miss Helen Jackson and W. D. McCormack, who were occupants of her car, stated that Miss Barnes stopped.

The accident occurred at the corner

Remarkable Growth in State Factories Shown During 1924 in Annual Commerce Report.

TEXTILE UNITS LEAD INCREASE

Wide Variety of Mills Is Remarkable Part of Empire State Report, Commissioner Declares.

Remarkable growth in industry in Georgia during the year 1924 is shown in the annual report of the state commissioner of commerce and labor, which is now in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution at an early date.

Hal M. Stanley, commissioner, in giving out advance figures from his report on Saturday, drew attention to the healthy increase in industry and the splendid promise for future development in the state. There are now 192 textile mills operating in Georgia, representing a total investment of $82,531,030, and their products during 1924 were valued at $254,119,910. These products included sheetings, ducks, drills, denims, khaki, towels, ticking, laprobes, bed spreads, tire fabrics, hose, knit underwear, twine, sash cord, thread and many kinds of woolen goods.

Georgia's industrial development is remarkable for the wide variety of manufacturing plants located in the state, Mr. Stanley pointed out, and, with additional plants constantly commencing operations, the future prosperity of the state in this respect is assured, he said.

Among figures cited in the report, showing the remarkable growth and disclosing the wonderful opportunities for successful operation of many varieties of manufacturing plants in Georgia, were the following:

Textile Mills Lead.

Cotton and silk mills, 151; woolen mills, 3; mills that knit and spin, 7; mills that knit, 31; total, 192 mills. The capital in each class was as follows: Cotton and silk mills, $167,096,542; woolen mills, $2,128,508; mills that knit and spin, $5,153,007; mills that knit, $3,987,484; total capital, $178,365,801. The amount of money invested in lands and buildings and equipment is as follows: Cotton and silk mills, $73,680,271; woolen mills, $1,462,760; mills that spin and knit, $3,525,678; mills that knit, $3,856,321; total, $82,531,030. The manufactured products of the textile mills of this state are of various kinds of cloth, such a sheetings, ducks, drills, denims, khaki, towels, ticking, laprobes, bed spreads, tire fabrics, hose, knit underwear twine, sash cord, thread and many kinds of

CURRY MUST HANG RULES GOVERNOR

Walker Turns Down Plea for Clemency for Toombs Man Found Guilty at Four Trials.

Lee Curry, sentenced to hang on May 21, at Lyons, for the murder of Burleigh Phillips in February, 1920, must pay the extreme penalty, as the result of a decision of Governor Clifford Walker Saturday not to interfere with the sentence of the lower courts.

Governor Walker did not write a decision on the case but informed Attorney Enoch J. Giles, for the defendant, at Lyons, that he had declined to grant executive clemency to Curry. It was reported that the governor would issue a statement Monday regarding the case, which was heard before the chief executive Friday when final plea was made for the life of the Toombs county man.

Curry, the son of a wealthy farmer, was convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of Burleigh Phillips, near Lyons, in February, 1920. He has been tried on five different occasions, four trials resulting in the defendant being convicted, and one a mistrial. The case has been before the Georgia supreme court on four occasions, being reversed three times, and affirmed a few weeks ago.

When attorneys saw hope of Curry being spared the hangman's noose diminishing, they took their case to the Georgia prison commission where they asked for life imprisonment on the grounds of insanity at the time of the murder and for a while preceding the crime. The prison commission refused to recommend life imprisonment, but upheld the lower courts.

As a last resort the fate of Curry was carried to the governor by his attorneys, supplemented by the aged father of the defendant, J. C. Curry, and Representative Ernest Wimberly, of Toombs county. They pleaded for life imprisonment for Curry.

Unification Defeat Seen By Opponents of Proposal

(The following article opposing the proposed unification of the north and south branches of the Methodist church is published at the request of a member of the Society for the Preservation of the Methodist church, south.—Ed.)

BY W. L. PIERCE.

"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad," was never better illustrated than in the present effort of the unificationists to turn southern Methodism, lock, stock and barrel over to the tender mercies of the nameless, constitutionless, hodge-podge organization they seek to form. Last July at general conference in Chattanooga, it looked as if the M. E. church, south, was greased for the swallowing, and loud cheering and throwing of hats into the air was the order of the day among the unificationists. If ever a steam roller was well oiled, manned and under full head of steam, that at Chattanooga roller was.

A monkey wrench seems to have ben thrown into the machinery. That it has not run true to form, is not the fault of the program of the unificationist, but of its execution. The program left the "common people" out of the calculation, hence the lamentation from the camp of unificationist; lamentation, signed but mostly unsigned—the writers preferring darkness rather than light. Somebody has stirred the membership of the church and from ocean to ocean they are speaking.

The Dallas (Texas) Morning News of May 8 reports Bishop Mouzon in a lecture at Kirby hall, Dallas, as characterizing as "damnable," "The Association to Preserve Southern Methodism," an association formed by ministers and laymen from all over the south, and sponsored by five bishops of the church. The same speaker I judge would characterize the organization known as "Friends of Unification," and of which he was for a time the executive head, as a "heavenly organization," and any one reading many of the articles published by authority of said "Friends" would be impressed that the writers were trying to live up to that title, for in most of these articles they have forgotten fact. They assume for themselves all the virtues, infallible wisdom, a monopoly of the ear of the Lord. They seem to think loyalty will die, yes, die very soon, with them.

Overlooked Facts, Claim.

Judging from the further utterances of the bishop in his Dallas speech, the unificationists had overlooked some facts that are troubling them sorely right now.

Listen to the wail of lamentation in Bishop Mouzon's Dallas lecture: "Methodism split in 1844 over a Georgia bishop and if it were not for the Georgia bishops today unification would sweep the south." Bishop Mouzon was not dealing in compliments and he did not so intend that remark,—the fact is he was mad, and the three Georgia bishops with two other bishops, from Virginia, were the innocent cause of his wrath.

Look at the facts and you may excuse his anger on ground of righteous indignation. The west—and especially Texas, was counted on to furnish a good large part of the vote necessary to turn southern Methodism into the merger.

What the west and Texas did not give, the border conferences would certainly supply, as the movement was originally begun to take care of the border.

Behold, the western district conferences have elected delegates to annual conference to vote against the pet scheme of the unification brethren. The Pacific conference will have enough votes against the plan to defeat it by a constitutional vote. Hardly has the noise of the far western explosion died out, before Arizona sent the news of like action, making sure enough votes there to defeat the plan.

New Mexico conference, under the care of one of these Georgia bishops, has elected in two out of four districts enough lay delegates to furnish a majority against the plan in that conference.

Conferences Oppose.

Northwest Texas conference under the leadership of Bishop Dickey, is turning from this plan; and four districts, Clarendon, Vernon, Stamford and Amarillo district conferences have already elected delegates against the plan. Others will do likewise.

Central Texas conference, one of the largest conferences in the church and probably the largest in the west, is on the march toward rejection. Corsicana, Weatherford, Gatesville, Georgetown, Cisco and Waco districts have elected by decision to vote a solid lay delegation against it.

Not only these conferences have opened their eyes, but North Texas conference under leadership of Bishop John M. Moore, one of the leaders of unification forces, have joined the sister conferences in Texas and out of nine districts in the conference, five of them, Sulphur Spring, Greenville, Paris, McKinney and Decatur districts, have elected enough delegates together with the clerical vote to defeat by a majority in this western conference.

I have written at length concerning thgse western conferences that our people might know. I have written facts, not speculations or guesses.

South Against Plan.

When we turn to the central south, much of what has taken place is of too recent publication to need much comment. Baltimore, the border conference, exploded a big gun in unificationist camp from which they have not yet recovered and on which they have expended their effort to explain in vain. The only explanation is lack of votes, as this is a battle of ballots.

On May 14 the Andalusia district conference in the Alabama annual conference elected a solid delegation to the annual conference against the proposed plan of unification, the vote being nearly or quite unanimous.

In the North Alabama conference 72 lay delegates have been elected to the annual conference by nine district conferences and all of the delegates elected are opposed to the plan of unification. Not one lay delegate favoring it has been elected.

In the Alabama conference four district conferences have been held. Thirty-two lay delegates have been elected to the annual conference, all of whom are against the plan of unification. Not one delegate favorable to the plan has been elected thus far.

Results Pointed Out.

In both the Alabama conferences 104 lay delegates have been elected up to date and all are opposed to the plan of unification, not one being favorable to it.

Virginia and West Virginia in their district conferences are just coming into action. Farmville, Eastern Shore and Bleckley districts have recently expressed themselves by overwhelming majorities and sent solid delegations against the plan.

In South Georgia conference, Bishop Ainsworth by his magnificent leadership has turned certain victory for unification into overwhelming defeat. Church after church by vote of their membership have declared against the scheme. Defeat is conceded by their leaders and the Georgia bishops keep the scheme from "sweeping the south." St. Luke, Columbus, whose pastor was a member of Chattanooga conference and a leader in the ranks of unificationist, after his church had voted, said from the pulpit, "I know when I am whipped. The issue is lost, let's forget it and get back to work for the church."

In North Georgia conference a detailed account of the towns and churches who have voted against the plan would require too much space. So far as published reports reveal, or private advices to this office show, not a single church conference has yet indorsed the plan by vote of the membership.

Because of certain things that have been written about Blue Ridge church and the eagerness of the church at that point to rush into the arms of the Northern Methodist church, the report in the daily press this week is refreshing. From time to time the proponents of unification have asserted that altar against altar was continued because of the hard-headed and hard-hearted action of the leaders. "Give them a chance and they will show you," but the vote in Blue Ridge last Sunday doesn't sustain their high and lofty claim, as the church by large majority rejected the plan, and elected delegates accordingly.

3 NEGROES JAILED IN JAMES KILLING

Sol Oliver, negro, Saturday afternoon was lodged in Fulton county jail on charges of murder growing out of the killing, on January 7, of Fred James, manager of the top department of the Ford Motor company. Charles Walton and Grady Slaughter, both negroes, were jailed in connection with the case after James' lifeless body was found in Loew's alley.

Oliver was arrested at Bartlett's Ferry, Ala., where he and several score other negro laborers were working on the construction of a bridge. When the officers arrived several of the workmen deserted their posts and ran, according to the report of Lee Whatley and J. E. Rolander, deputy sheriffs, and Marvin Baker, special investigator from Solicitor John Boykin's office, who made the arrest.

The trio will be placed on trial during the week of May 25, it was announced from the office of the solicitor general.

James was found with a deep gash in his head and a bloody ax nearby. The case proved to be one of the most baffling in the annals of the department. Fulton county grand jury Tuesday will be asked to return indictments in the case.

Stewart Avenue School Is Leading In Attendance

Stewart Avenue school led the schools of Atlanta in attendance during the week, according to figures made public Saturday by census and attendance department of the office of superintendent of schools. The schools leading ranked as follows: Stewart Avenue, 98.4 per cent; State school, 98.1 per cent; Atlanta Training school, 97.3 per cent; William A. Bass Junior High school, 96.9 per cent; Ormewood school, 96.1 per cent; Boys' High school, 96.1 per cent.

BIG SUCCESS SEEN FOR A. M. E. CONCERT

The advance sale of tickets for the third annual musical concert which will be given at the city auditorium-armory under the auspices of the Holmes institute today at 3:30 o'clock indicates the largest attendance in the history of the concerts, stated Rev. B. R. Holmes, president.

The program has been carefully arranged to suit the music lovers of the city. The program will be featured by plantation melodies and negro spirituals which were sung by the colored people in ante-bellum days, and always thrilled the hearts of the white people of the south.

More than 50 students of the Holmes institute will sing special selections.

Big Bethel A. M. E. church choir which is well known in the city and has sung before many white audiences and the leading colored church choirs of the city will render selections. Mayor Walter A. Sims will deliver the principal address followed by Colonel Virgil L. Moore, Oscar Mills, Judge O. H. Pucket and others.

The proceeds from the entertainment will go for the new building fund of the institute, one of the leading colored institutions in the city which is doing uplift work among the colored people.

RED MEN TO HOLD CONCLAVE WEDNESDAY

The Atlanta District School of Instruction, Improved Order of Red Men, will hold its spring convention at the wigwam on Central avenue Wednesday evening, it is announced by John C. Cook, district sachem.

A business session will begin at 8 o'clock, which will include reading of reports from the tribes in the city of Atlanta. Several prominent Atlanta Red Men will speak, among whom will be Thomas H. Jeffries, ordinary and past great sachem of Georgia; James L. Mayson, city attorney and past great sachem of Georgia; Attorney Walter C. Hendrix, senator-elect and a past great sachem of Georgia. Following the business session a degree contest will be held, with several local tribes' crack drill teams competing, which conclude the exercises.

HEARING ON FREIGHT RATES SET FOR MAY 21

An important hearing on freight rates applying on shipments of cement will be conducted at the Atlanta Biltmore beginning Thursday, May 21, before Examiner John T. Money, of the interstate commerce commission.

Leading cement manufacturers of the United States and representatives of the various railroads in this section will be represented at the hearing, which is expected to require several days.

Friends of Unification Outline Proposed Plan

(At the request of Friends of Unification, a society favoring unification of the north and south branches of the Methodist churches, the following plan of unification is published by The Constitution.—Ed.)

The Friends of Unification publish herewith the proposed plan, suggesting that every reader clip it and file it where it can be constantly consulted. The plan is the one now being considered and was adopted in May, 1924, by the Northern Methodist General Conference and in July, 1924, by the Southern Methodist General Conference:

Transmittal.

We, the commissioners on the unification of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, holding that these two churches are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose, and in polity, and desiring that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world, do hereby propose and transmit to our respective general conferences the following plan of unification and recommend its adoption by the two churches by the processes which they respectively require:

ARTICLE I.
Declaration of Union.

The Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall be united in one church with two jurisdictions under a constitution with a general conference and two jurisdicitonal conferences.

ARTICLE II.
Name.

The name of the church shall be ——. (Name to be selected by the first general conference of the united church.)

ARTICLE III.
Jurisdictions.

Section 1. Jurisdiction No. 1 shall comprise all the churches, annual conferences, mission conferences and missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal church and any other such conferences and missions as may hereafter be organized by its jurisdictional conference with the approval of the general conference.

Section 2. Jurisdiction No. 2 shall comprise all the churches, annual conferences, mission conferences and missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and any other such conferences and missions as may hereafter be organized by its jurisdictional conference and the approval of the general conference.

ARTICLE IV.
Composition of General and Jurisdictional Conferences.

The general conference and the jurisdictional conferences shall be composed of the same delegates. Said delegates shall be elected by and from the annual conferences, provided said general and jurisdictional conferences shall have not more than one ministerial delegates for every forty-five members of each annual conference and not less than one ministerial delegate for every 120 members of each annual conference and an equal number of lay delegates, chosen according to the regulations of each of the two jurisdictions; but for a fraction of two-thirds or more of the number fixed by the general conference as the ratio of representation an annual conference shall be entitled to an additional ministerial and an additional lay delegate, and provided further that each annual conference shall be entitled to at least one ministerial and one lay delegate.

ARTICLE V.
The General Conference.
Section 1. Voting.

Every vote in the general conference shall be by jurisdictions and all require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective.

Section 2. Powers.

Subject to the limitations and restrictions of the constitution, the general conference shall have full legislative power over all matters distinctively connectional, and in the exercise of said power shall have authority as follows:

1. To define and fix the conditions, privileges and duties of church membership.

2. To define and fix the qualifications and duties of elders, deacons, local preachers, exhorters and deaconesses.

3. To make provision for such organization of the work of the united church outside the United States as may promptly consummate the unity of Episcopal Methodism in foreign lands.

4. To define and fix the powers, duties and privileges of the episcopacy; to fix the number of bishops to be elected by the respective jurisdictional conferences and to provide in harmony with the historic practice of Episcopal Methodist for their consecration as bishops of the whole church.

5. To alter and change the hymnal and ritual of the church and to regulate all matters relating to the form and mode of worship, subject to the limitations of the first restrictive rule.

6. To provide for a judicial system and for a method of judicial procedure for the church, except as herein otherwise provided.

7. To govern any and all enterprises and activities which may be agreed upon as being of a connectional character.

8. To provide for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charge, districts, annual conferences, mission conferences and mission in the United States from one jurisdiction to the other, provided that no transfer shall be made without the consent of the member, preacher, church, pastoral charge, district, annual conference, mission conference, or mission that it is proposed to transfer.

Section 3. Restrictive Rules.

In making rules and regulations for the church the general conference shall be under the following limitations and restrictions:

1. The general conference shall not revoke, alter or change our articles of religion or establish any new standards or rules of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine.

2. The general conference shall not change or alter any part of rule of our government so as to do away episcopacy or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency.

3. The general conference shall not revoke or change the general rules of the united societies.

4. The general conference shall not do away the privileges of our ministers or preachers of trial by a committee and of an appeal; neither shall they do away the privileges of our members of trial before the church or by a committee and of an apneal.

5. They shall not appropriate the produce of the publishing house or of the chartered fund to any purpose other than for the benefit of the traveling, superannmerary, superannuated and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and children.

ARTICLE VI.
Bishops.

The bishops of the two churches as at present constituted shall be the bishops of the united church without further action.

Immediately after the union shall have been consummated the bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendence of the work of the church.

A bishop may be assigned to administer in any part of the church, provided that when he is assigned to administer within the jurisdiction other than that by which he was elected it shall be with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the jurisdiction involved.

ARTICLE VII.
Presidency of he General Conference.

The bishops shall select by a majority vote of the bishops of each jurisdiction one or more of their number from each jurisdiction to preside at the session of the general conference.

ARTICLE VIII.
Jurisdictional Conferences.

Each jurisdiction shall have a jurisdictional conference possessing the full powers of the general conference of the church now constituting such jurisdiction, except such powers as are herein vested in the general conference or which may hereafter from time to time be legally delegated to the general conference by the jurisdictional conferences.

Each jurisdictional conference shall meet quadrennially where the general conference is to assemble and immediately prior to its assembling and when desirable may meet during the session of the general conference and may meet at such other times and places as it may determine.

ARTICLE IX.
The Judicial Council.

1. The general conference shall at its first session provide a judicial council, to be composed of an equal number of members elected by each jurisdictional conference, and the judicial council shall provide its own methods of procedure.

2. The judicial council shall be authorized to review upon appeal of one-fifth of the members of the general conference or of either jurisdictional conference or on the appeal of a majority of the bishops on constitutional grounds the acts of the general conference and of the jurisdictional conferences; to hear and to determine all other appeals and matters coming to it in the course of legal procedure.

3. The judicial council shall have the right on its own motion, subject to such rules and regulations as shall be determined by the general conference, to review the legislative acts of the general conference or of either jurisdictional conference and to pass on the constitutionality of said acts.

4. The judicial council shall also have power to arrest an action of a connectional board or other connectional body when such action is brought before it by appeal by one-fifth of the members of said body present and voting or by a majority of the bishops.

5. All decisions of the judicial council shall be made by a majority of the total membership of the council.

ARTICLE X.
Amendments.

The general conference shall at its first session provide in harmony with the existing procedure of the two churches a method of amending the constitution, and until such method shall have been adopted amendments shall be effected through the process now prevailing in the churches respectively.

ARTICLE XI.
Schedule.

In all matters not specifically set forth in these articles and until the general conference by legal process shall otherwise ordain, the rules of government in the disciplines of the respective churches shall be of full force and effect and binding upon the jurisdictions respectively.

Recommendation.

We recommend that financial support of the Colored Methodist Episcopal church be continued by the jurisdiction with which it is historically related and to such an extent as that jurisdiction may deem wise.

For commission of Methodist Episcopal church:
WILLIAM F. McDOWELL, Chairman.
A. W. HARRIS, Secretary.

For commission of Methodist Episcopal Church, South:
EDWIN D. MOUZON, Chairman.
H. H. SHERMAN, Secretary.

Falls Headlong Into Well, Then Climbs to Safety

Ashburn, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) An unusual occurrence took place one morning this week at Double Run. A young woman, 19 years old, weakened by several weeks' fever, was lying alone on her bed, and suffering from thirst she decided to go to the well and get a drink of fresh water.

In trying to draw a bucket of water she fell head-foremost into the well, which was 17 feet deep and had 7 feet, 4 inches of water in it.

She states she hit the bottom of the well and then came to the top, where she managed to get a foothold and climbed out of the well. She had been missed and a search was being made for her, and the searchers was very much surprised when she walked into their midst soaking with water and covered with mud.

PROTECTION FOR BIRDS STRESSED BY WARDEN

Intended primarily as an appeal to the farmers of Georgia to arouse interest in the protection of birds of the state, the Georgia Department of Game and Fish, recently has prepared a 50-page booklet entitled "Birds of Georgia Farms." It is now in the hands of the printer and will come from the press in a few days. Copies may be secured from any of the county game wardens or will be sent free upon application to the game and fish department in the state capitol, according to Peter S. Twitty, commissioner.

The book calls attention to the fact that there are 66 known varieties of Georgia birds that consume boll weevils in large quantities and, while it treats fully of the game birds of the state, is devoted mainly to the non game birds as the greatest enemies of insect pests. The value of these birds as allies of the farmers in their constant war on the various insects which destroy annually millions of dollars of the crops, is clearly pointed out.

ROSE MAE ASHBY TO SPEAK TODAY

Rose Mae Ashby, Ps. D., has returned from an extended trip west, visiting the Unity School of Practical Christianity, and will speak Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. Her subject will be "Practical Truths Taught at Unity."

Your Chance for an Ocean Front Lot!

LONG ISLAND, owned by St. Simon-Long Island Company is reached by the wonderful highway extending across the marshes from the city of Brunswick to St. Simon's and is the most beautiful island, with the broadest beach, on the South Atlantic. It has been subdivided in residence lots of ample dimensions, 60 by 120 feet and up.

The County has just completed the road to Long Island Beach, this beach being five miles long and unsurpassed on this coast. The Company has recently begun the development of the first zone, has sold 170 lots in this zone to a desirable class of people in Brunswick and various Georgia cities, and will expend approximately 60 per cent of the total selling price of all lots in the further development of the same area.

We are offering until June 1st beautiful interior lots at from $400 to $700, at $100 cash and $15 per month, 7 per cent deferred payments. These lots range only 150 to 1,000 feet from the Ocean and have some decided advantages over Ocean front lots.

Bitter Warfare of Words And Religious Ideas Looms For Presbyterian Conference

General Assembly of Church Is Scheduled To Convene at Columbus, Ohio, on May 21.

New York, May 16.—A bitter warfare or words and opposing religious ideas seems likely to break over the Presbyterian general assembly when it convenes at Columbus, Ohio, on May 21.

While reports from Columbus tell of moves for repression of the conflict between modernists and fundamentalists by early delegates, the First Presbyterian church of New York has prepared a memorial to be presented to the assembly which scarcely can come before that body without bringing after it a heated struggle.

The memorial is a lengthy document recounting the services of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, the Baptist preacher who filled the pulpit at the First church for six years only to be forced out in the end by the fundamentalist legion within the Presbyterian assembly.

Publicly Denounced.

"The First Presbyterian church has had to endure the odium of being publicly denounced as disloyal and rebellious," the memorial relates, "but has preferred, in accordance with the principles of the gospel, to refrain from any attempt to repel such accusations and thus supply fuel for the fires of controversy. It has, however, responded with utmost frankness to every inquiry made by constituted authority."

The memorial then outlines the cir- to the church, the success he enjoyed, to the church, thes uccess he enjoyed, the prestige he gained for the church and expresses the church's regret at his enforced resignation.

Then come the words which may bring the leaders of the fundamentalist and modernist factions leaping to their feet to refute or approve them.

"We respectfully submit that there should be some recognition of the Christian courtesy and forbearance which Dr. Fosdick has displayed in sacrificing his own comfort and peace in order to help the church to rally its forces and continue its work.

Trying Period.

"Throughout this trying period the First Presbyterian church has uttered no resentful word. It recognized the fact that the storm which it has weathered is simply an incident in the world-wide conflict between forces which tend to reaction, division and mutual distrust among evangelical Christians on the one hand, and on the other forces which make for freedom and tolerance and union. It regrets the ill will and unseemly strife that have been engendered, but it believes that it has been standing for some of the finest things in the Presbyterian church of the past and in the Presbyterian church of the future.

"We respectfully ask this general assembly, by some appropriate action, to vindicate the loyalty and good faith of a church which for more than two centuries has been a mother of churches and a staunch supporter of the principles at the heart of our communion."

Question of Return

With the publication of the memorial, the First Presbyterian church gave out two letters exchanged between itself and Dr. Fosdick in which he urged that the question of his return to the pulpit which he relinquished March 1, last, be not made a subject of discussion at the coming assembly. He said he did not believe it ever would be possible for him to return to the church on Fifth avenue.

"We should have failed to express the mind of our congregation," the reply of the church says, "if we had not continued to use every right endeavor for a restoration of this cherished relationship. You may be assured, however, that whatever representations are made to the assembly will be on broad and not personal grounds."

A Test Every Man Past 40 Should Make

Medical authorities agree that 65 per cent of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Aches in feet, legs and back, frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains are some of the signs—and now a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably interesting Free Book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 20,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their health and vigor—and to restore the prostate gland to its proper functioning. Send immediately for this book. If you will mail your request to The Electro Thermal company, 332-B, Macy building, Steubenville, Ohio—the concern that is distributing this book for the author—it will be sent to you absolutely free, without obligation. Simply send name and address. But don't delay, for the edition of this book is limited.—(adv.)

ART LEAGUE PLANS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Aid of 400 southern artists, eligible by birth or by residence for the Southern States Art league, has been asked in the 1925-26 campaign for membership, to be inaugurated by the new president, Ellsworth Woodward, of New Orleans, La., and the board of directors elected at the annual meeting in Atlanta last month.

James Chillman, of Houston, Texas, and Mrs. J. C. Bradford, of Nashville, Tenn., are vice presidents. Directors include A. C. Ford and Mrs. Edgar O. Lovett, of Houston, where the 1926 exhibition and convention will be held, in the museum of the Houston Art league; Mrs. Samuel Inman, of Atlanta; Miss Rosa Lee, of Memphis; Mrs. Lucius Mansfield, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn.; Miss Caroline Swaffield, of Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. E. Pettigrew Verner, of Charleston, S. C.

Mr. Woodward has appointed Miss Ethel Hutson, of New Orleans, La., as secretary-treasurer, and the headquarters will be in that city at 7321 Panola street.

Miss Florence McIntyre, of Memphis, Tenn., was chosen delegate for the annual convention of the American Federation of Arts in Cleveland, Ohio, May 13, 14 and 15.

With the beginning of the new fiscal year, officers elected in the 1925 convention are planning to carry out the plans then made to extend the influence of this organization, to unite the efforts of local art clubs and state associations for the furtherance of art in the south. The league at present has 91 members, of which eight are associations, one is an institute, and 82 are individuals.

There are three classes of membership—active members, who must be practicing artists; sustaining members, who are connoisseurs, and others interested in art from a civic or other standpoint, and patrons, who are the larger donors. The goal of the league is to increase its membership to 1,000 and to secure at least one patron from each of the 13 states represented in the league.

Civil War Relics To Be Displayed To Aid Coin Sale

Ante-bellum mementoes Monday will advertise the fact that Confederate memorial coins can be bought at the Charles R. Robison Furniture company, 17 East Henter street, it was announced Saturday. One of the large display windows will contain several legal documents and newspaper sections almost a hundred years old. One news item tells of the progress of the war between the states at an interesting period.

Charles Stilwell Robison, president of the furniture concern, is the owner of the documents and also is captain of a team to sell the coins. He will devote all space possible to advertising the sale of the coins, and has arranged to devote much of his time to the work. He is a native of Floyd county, Georgia, and his forefathers, who originally came from New York state and were familiar with the meteropolis when it was New Amsterdam, were active in Confederate service in the civil war and in the colonial south.

Chief among displays will be a newspaper published in Marion, Ala., July 17, 1863; a bill of sale for a negro slave girl named "Elizabeth," and a receipt for taxes on salary paid by Robison's grandfather, Charles H. Stillwell.

Efforts of Alexander Stephens, president of the Confederacy, to negotiate concerning the conduct of the war are recounted in the newspaper, which is marked in black-faced type, "By Telegraph." Advertisements for lost and runaway slaves and other features also are included in the columns of the historic sheet.

On May 31, 1849, W. T. Menefee paid to Thomas Atkins $620 for a negro girl named "Elizabeth," according to a stained old time-yellowed receipt, which also will be included in the display. And on February 29, 1864, when the fortunes of war were resting heavily on the Confederacy, Charles Stillwell paid $24 as a salary tax in order to aid in the conduct of the war. This was done at Rome, Ga., and D. M. McCurry signed the receipt, also in the display.

Other documents will be a deed to a plot of Georgia land, with a diagram attached together with a large wax seal of the state.

Harry Burns Heads Peachtree Terrace Civic Association

Major Harry L. Burns was elected president of the Peachtree Terrace Civic and Political association at a meeting Friday at Mrs. Daisy Mann's home, 31 Buena Vista avenue. W. F. Walters was elected vice president and J. D. Reynolds, secretary-treasurer. The next meeting will be held June 5.

Improvements in roads and sidewalks in Peachtree Terrace were among the subjects discussed.

CENTRAL PROMOTES J. Y. BRUCE, OF ATHENS

The increasing importance of Atlanta as a railroad and commercial center is indicated by the appointment of J. Y. Bruce to the newly-created position of commercial agent here for the Central of Georgia. Mr. Bruce was promoted from the position of commercial agent at Athens and will begin his new duties Monday. He will join the force in the office of F. E. Ellis, division freight agent, and will add his efforts to those of E. E. Fuller, who for some time past has been commercial agent at Atlanta.

J. Y. BRUCE.

Mr. Bruce has been in the service of the Central of Georgia railway for the past 18 years, having started in local agency work at Rome, Georgia. He was freight service agent at Macon, from which place he was promoted to commercial agent at Athens, where he has been for the past three years.

Two Women Held On 'Dope' Charge Under Big Bonds

Miss Jack LaMar, of 515 North Boulevard, and Mrs. H. H. Hartley, of 112 Forrest avenue, Saturday afternoon were held to the federal grand jury for alleged violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law. Bonds were set at $500 and $750, respectively, by United States Commissioner Joseph Abbott.

Miss LaMar was arrested Friday night along with Mrs. Margie Christian and Miss Thelma Aper, who will be given hearings this week, when officers confiscated morphine valued at $500. City Detectives L. H. Satterfield and W. D. McGee and Federal Narcotic Officer P. A. Williams conducted the raid.

Memorial Services Will Be Held Today For 33 Gray Heroes

Confederate veterans, who died at the Old Soldiers' home during the past year, will be honored with annual memorial services at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of the home. Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, will conduct the services for the 33 veterans. The public is invited to attend.

Hollywood's location is one that could not be improved. It has every requisite for unhampered expansion. It has a rich, intensely productive back country. It is in the heart of what will always be the tropical playground of America. Its broad, deep harbor, the finest between New York and Panama, will soon witness the flags of all nations flying from peaks of the world's heaviest draught vessels. Its wholesale and retail commercial houses are established on a year around business routine. Its many miles of palm shaded, paved and illuminated streets are built for serious business traffic. Its complete public utilities are rated on a yearly (not a seasonal) basis, and its civic organization is that of a steady going, rapidly progressing, serious-minded community, with all the recreational facilities of land and sea at immediate hand. Hollywood is 17 miles north of Miami and 50 miles south of Palm Beach. On the Florida East Coast Railway, the Dixie Highway, Inland waterways and on the tidewater of the boundless, blue Atlantic.

Olympic Games Considered As Pagan Ritual by Members Of Parliament of Holland

Belief They Are Work of Heathens Is Responsible for Defeat of Appropriation for Games.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

"They are pagan rituals, the work of heathens," shouted some excited members of the Dutch parliament in the heat of debate the other day. The reference was not, as some may imagine, to a Babylonian revel of the type for which Gomorrah paid by being wiped off the face of the earth, but the accusation hurled across the floor of the old "Binnenhof" (Holland's Westminster) had to do with nothing less than the world-famous Olympic games.

And it was but natural, while entertaining such ideas about the great international sporting event, that the Dutch solons should promptly defeat a measure whereby the government was to appropriate one million florins from the public funds for the staging of the 1928 Olympiad in the capital city of Amsterdam.

Brave Derision of World.

Of course, there were also supporters of the bill. There were even some warning voices. "Should the measure be defeated, you will incur the amused contempt of the whole world," objected one legislator. But the bill went down. And the ruling political groups in the kingdom of the Netherlands do not care a rap for the possibility of the world's contempt. In fact, they would glory in it. They have nothing in common with the world and they will have nothing to do with such things as boxing, wrestling, riding, racing, running, fencing nor any other kind of sports. Sport belongs in a category of worldly events which have no value for eternity, in the conception of the majority of Dutch legislators. The youth of Holland is urged to attend church and catechism instead of running to football matches and sundry affairs of that kind which guide their feet "onto the broad path that leadeth to destruction."

The present government of Holland, composed of members of the anti-revolutionary party, takes life seriously. They have been in control for about a quarter century, and their efforts to capture the reigns of government were marked by some of the bitterest and fiercest political struggles of a lifetime. Imbued by their leaders, Green Van Prinsterer and Dr. Abraham Kuyper, with the ideal that they were the spiritual descendants of the people of Israel, chosen from before the foundation of the world to be a select and separate nation, they have battled for their convictions through many years of defeat to win their first parliamentary victory in 1901.

History of Group.

Before the world can bestow its "amused contempt" on the action of the Dutch parliament, something ought to be known about the policies and history of a political-religious group which condemned the Olympic games as samples of pagan and heathenish ritual (In Dutch, heathenish and pagan are expressed by one identical word—heidensch).

The anti-revolutionary party was formed by Dr. Kuyper from members of a new Protestant denomination founded in 1880. At that time, Dr. Kuyper, a minister in the state church, began the battle against modernism. Hopelessly outnumbered in the synod, he led a secession of fundamentalists, who formed their own churches and which have grown almost as strong in numbers as the old Reformed Church which they left.

Other fundamentalists left Holland altogether in those turbulent days and emigrated to America or South Africa, where they became the backbone of the nationalist Boer element under Paul Kruger.

But those who stayed were organized by Dr. Kuyper, the God-given leader," into a political party, in addition to being organized in the religious field. The first item on the program of the new party was recognition and support by the state for the "schools with the Bible." Curiously enough, these Calvinist secessionists gained the political support of the Roman Catholic church, which also wanted denominational schools and state for support of them. The Catholics organized in a political party under the scholarly priest, Dr. Schaapman, and by a closely-allied campaign the two parties succeeded in gaining a majority in the Dutch second chamber in 1901, which made Dr. Kuyper chief of a coalition cabinet.

The political battle of that year was fought on the Calvinist leader's famous manifesto, known as the "Antithesis." He called upon his fellow citizens to draw the line of distinction and to be governed in their balloting solely by the motto: "For or against Christ."

Denominational schools were among the first reforms instituted by the new government. Building restrictions against the secessionist churches and Catholic congregations were also withdrawn. Of course, the anti-revolutionaries have till this day a considerable body of supporters in the old Reformed Church. For not all fundamentalist left that body in 1880, many stayed rather than leave the field, and the "Church of the Fathers" to the modernist heretics.

Gifted with a tremendous organizing ability and an eloquence that has seldom been surpassed in a country of eloquent preachers, Dr. Kuyper appealed to the Calvinists of his country through a book written at the time of the break with the Reformed Church, which had the significant title, "Out of the House of Bondage." When challenged by his opponents, he flung his manifesto, "We Calvinists," in the face of the modernist opposition, thereby rallying every orthodox believer in or outside the Reformed Church to his political banners.

Founded Free University.

He founded the Free University of Amsterdam, where the ministers for his new churches were trained in theology and where young men pursuing other studies would not be contaminated with the "modernist poison of the state universities." "The Standard" became the official organ of the new party and Dr. Kuyper, its energetic and fiery editor. He brought about a religious transformation in the country and appealed to the historic imagination of the Hollanders by constantly comparing the modern era with the days of the religious wars and the Spanish inquisition in the Netherlands.

In the communal elections, the anti-revolutionaries often go it alone. Their municipal program consists of the introduction of the bluest of blue laws. Fairs and public celebrations have been singled out for abolishment and a good Calvinist will not walk through a street where, in fair-days, a cake-walk, merry-go-round or shooting gallery is attracting the worldly ones. He will not play billiards or cards, but curiously enough he is not the staunch supporter of prohibition or local option as would be expected of him. Prohibition seems to be more in the line of socialist reforms, so far as Holland is concerned.

The party's name, anti-revolutionary, is enough evidence of its intense patriotic character. Its loyalty to the reigning house is characterized by the slogan: "God, Netherlands and Orange, an Indestructible Bond."

SECOND ART EXHIBIT FORMALLY OPENED

then," he said, "which has been talked about with unbounded admiration in scores of cities."

F. Luis Mora compared an art museum to be a lovely, restful old mansion and said that such a place ought to be a temple of beauty where men and women may go for rest for their souls when they wish to retire for a space from the hysteria of modern life. "Teach the children and the youth to love beauty and you create a temple to eternal peace," he said.

Governor Slaton then delivered his eloquent address on behalf of an art museum for Atlanta. He concluded by recalling how Andrew Carnegie, the steel king, had turned in later life, when he desired to erect a monument to his memory, to culture and had established labraries where all could commune with the greater minds of mankind. J. Pierpont Morgan desired to be remembered, he said, not as the banker and money changer, but as the lover of art and the worshipper of beauty. He had gathered together a marvellous art collection, said Governor Slaton, and had left it at his death to the Metropolitan Museum of Art to be the heritage of all who might look and understand.

There was no doubt, said Governor Slaton, that Atlanta would quickly provide the additional $250,000, which with the $50,000 already raised by the art association of Atlanta, would build the museum.

Dudley Watson Speaks.

Mr. Haverty then introduced all the visiting artists in turn and finally called on Dudley Crafts Watson, who not only is a famous artist, but also probably the best-known lecturer on art in America today, to conclude the program. Mr. Watson spoke briefly, telling of the need for the development of an artistic consciousness, a sense of the symphony of place, design and proportions, among all the people. From such a training, he said, would spring the artists who are to bring the great renaissance of art to America.

America has produced, said Mr. Watson, 5,000 world-famous artists and is the only country in the world today which could gather together a collection of recent paintings and sculpture by her own artists comparable with the collection now in Atlanta.

The dinner guests then were carried on a tour of the galleries, which are located on the arcade and mezzanine floors of the hotel and the exhibition was declared formally open to continue for two weeks.

Fine Collection.

The exhibit brought here this year is the greatest collection of the works of modern American artists ever gathered together, is immeasurably finer even than the excellent exhibition of 1924. There are 300 paintings and 150 pieces of sculpture included, and there is hardly a painter or sculptor of note in America unrepresented. Popular interest last night probably centered in the two paintings from the brush of the late John Singer Sargent, and in "Memories," a delightful conception of Augustus Lukeman, the new sculptor engaged to complete the Confederate memorial at Stone Mountain.

Lectures and other items of entertainment will be given each day during the exhibition, which will continue for two weeks. The galleries will be open each day, including Sundays, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. There is no admission charge and the general public is cordially invited. Last year over 30,000 visitors passed through the exhibit and it is expected that this number will be exceeded this year.

Special Groups Named.

Special committees will be in charge of the exhibit each day, being named by the various civic and other organizations which are sponsoring the occasion. On Sunday evening the Junior Chamber of Commerce will be in charge.

A. P. Phillips, Jr., chairman of the art committee of the junior chamber, will serve as host, assisted by A. J. Allen, I. M. Sheffield, Robert Goodhart, George E. Myers, Frank Maloney, Van Jernigan, Frank Bunson, G. F. Grafton, Dr. Frank Lamond and Dr. H. Payne.

This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, a lecture and musical program will be given in the main ballroom of the Bitmore. The program includes a short talk by Hobart Nichols, visiting artists, two songs by John F. Carlson, an artist who could have made an international reputation in opera; a talk by Paul Daugherty; a group of violin numbers by Miss Morrell, and a lecture on "The Enjoyment of Paintings and Sculpture," by Dudley Crafts Watson.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, Mr. Watson will lecture on the present exhibition and will give personal reminiscences concerning many of the exhibiting artists. Miss Morrell will again play, and F. Ballard Williams, famous landscape painter, will talk. Walter Ufer, famous painter of Indian portraits, will talk on "Caon, New Mexico." There is a famous art colony at Caon. Van Deering Perrine, another artist, will speak on "My Point of View," while still another artist, Wilson Irvine, will pay a tribute to Atlanta from the artistic viewpoint.

Hostesses for Exhibit.

The hostesses for the exhibit on Monday will be from the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, the committee consisting of the general officers, Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president, with Mrs. Alfred Newell, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Mrs. R. F. McCormack, Mrs. Fred J. Paxon and Miss Rosa Woodberry. Mrs. Charles M. Jerome is chairman for the day.

Officials of the federation urge every member to be present sometime during the day to lend personal interest in making the attendance representative both in numbers and personnel. Special groups will be arranged for tours of the galleries and to meet the visiting artists.

Other lectures will be given by Mr. Watson and his fellow artists during the two weeks of the exhibition and special lectures will also be given before various organizations of the city.

On Monday, at 11 o'clock, Mr. Watson will lecture before the art department at the Atlanta Woman's club, on "How To Study Pictures From the Layman's Standpoint." He will be introduced by J. J. Haverty, chairman of the local art committee, under whose sponsorship the exhibit is brought here, and Mrs. John D. Little, chairman of the committee, cordially invites any of the general public who are interested in art to attend.

Noted Artists Here.

Among the visiting artists, most of whom arrived in Atlanta by private car on the Birmingham Special Saturday morning, are Walter Ufer, Paul Daugherty, Edmund Rolshoven, Ivan G. Olinsky, Hobart Nichols, Olaf Olson, Wayman Adams, F. Luis Mora, Wilson Irvine, Edmund Greacen, Bush-Browne, W. Elmer Schofield, F. Ballard Williams, Paul King, John Carlson and Violet Oakley.

Erwin S. Barrie, general manager of the Grand Central galleries, also arrived Saturday, while W. W. Wiseman and George F. Nelson, assistant managers, have been here all the past week arranging the exhibit.

Atlanta is given a unique opportunity in this exhibit, to view and enjoy a collection of modern art greater than any ever staged together previously. The exhibits of the Grand Central in New York have hitherto been regarded as the finest in the class, but by reason of the addition of many loaned paintings especially for the Atlanta exhibit, the collection on view at the Biltmore is declared by connoisseurs to be greater than ever shown in New York.

The exhibits are valued, for insurance purposes, at $1,250,000, but should they be entirely destroyed, it is said, it is impossible to surmise the amount it would take to replace them.

Rum Row Skipper Denies

:: SMUGGLER EXHIBITS "FISH" TO GUARDS ::

Ship Carrying Liquor Cargo

New York, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Fish, principally hake, was announced to be the only contraband aboard the ships of the rum row off the coast by one supercargo of liquor smuggler who vociferously, though humorously, insisted that there "wasn't no booze aboard."

Shooting his questions through a megaphone from the coast guard cutter Pequot, on an official inspection tour, a reporter held his long distance interview, continuing an hour, over the gray Atlantic waters 25 miles off Montauk point at dusk last night. The supercargo stood in a searchlight's glare with members of his vessel's crew grouped about him and bandied jests with his interlocutor.

The insistent denial that the vessel, the schooner General Pau, out of Liverpool, N. S., carried liquor was shouted over a pile of significant looking cases. He was informed that a party of newspapermen aboard the Pequot wanted to learn just what rum row thought of the coast guard blockade and was asked if he would receive any of them aboard. He laughed.

"Oh, no," he drawled. "I would like to oblige you, but I fear I can't."

"What do you think of the blockade?"

"Time will tell," was the reply.

"How are you getting on? Plenty of water, food and other things?"

"Oh, not so bad, not so bad."

"Drinking the water aboard?"

"Hope to tell you we're not."

A number of flashlights were then thrown upon the schooner and supercargo and crew were asked to pose for the motion picture camera men. They complied.

He wasn't going to leave the blockade area until he was "good and ready," the supercargo said, whereupon he was asked how much "stuff" he had sold since his boat was picketed.

"What do you mean, 'stuff?'" he asked back. "Fish?"

One of the crew handed him a package, which he held up in the searchlight rays and the newspaper men saw that it was a fish. This was greeted with a laugh and the supercargo assured his hearers that this was the General Pau's only cargo.

A reporter shouted to him that "half the country's going blind."

"What from?" he demanded. "Drinking wood alcohol?"

"No," was the reply, "eating bad fish."

Asked again if he was getting rid of "any of that fish aboard" he replied with a sweep of the arm that included all the beleaguering ships in its scope: "What, with that fandango around me!"

A spokesman for the crew of the French steamer Pellegrini, battered smuggler of many trips, admitted that his ship was loaded to the gunwales with whisky and champagne.

the waters off Boston, which held a dozen or more "rummies" at the start of the drive. Coast guard officials declared, however, that these, too, had been swept out of touch with their land alliances.

More than 70 rum sellers have migrated since the opening of the blockade. All were followed by coast guard pickets or patrols until they rounded Nantucket on the north or got below Atlantic City on the south.

Some Have Returned Home.

Coast guard officials said they had no definite information concerning the present whereabouts of the fugitives, but a number are known to have returned to their home ports. A vast armada, however, is known to have anchored from 50 to 200 miles off shore, there to play a game of patience with the enemy forces, or await an opportunity to sneak shoreward on a foggy or stormy night.

The Pequot steamed out of New London, Conn., last Wednesday afternoon with Lieutenant Joseph Greenspun in command and Lieutenant Commander Thomas M. Molloy, in charge of all the coast guard's bases in this part of the coast, also aboard. Four hours later the first "rummy" was sighted—the General Pau, out of Liverpool, N. S. In the rays of the setting sun, newspaper photographers and news reel camera crankers had their will of the beleaguered Pau, which was under constant guard of two patrol boats and a converted destroyer.

Talk To Ship's Crew.

At dusk the newspapermen on the Pequot's bridge, about 50 feet from the General Pau's scarred sides, carried on a megaphone conversation with a man on the liquor ship. A couple more patrol boats had come up in the meantime, and the coast guard group began a colorful play of searchlights across the skies, turning that portion of the seas in a miniature white way. In the distance were two other rum boats, each with its quota of vigilant pickets, which also joined the festival of light, with searchlight beams that chased the darkness away.

On Thursday the Pequot and her passengers went off Montauk, called on the notorious and battered Pellegrini, a French ship whose crew shouted at the interviewing newspapermen in excellent American. Unlike the General Pau's spokesman, a strong-voiced member of the Frenchman's crew readily admitted the Pellegrini had a mighty load of whisky and champagne aboard, and quoted prices of $20 a case for the "hard stuff" and $35 a case for the wine.

Cigarette Famine Aboard.

There was a cigarette famine aboard, and a case of champagne was offered in exchange for a newspaper and a carton of cigarettes. But the coast guardsmen forbade contact with the Frenchman.

In the distance was but one more "rummy," the schooner Tessie Aubrey. Each "rummy" had its quota of vigilant pickets. In this area just two nights before, Commander Yeandle had been informed at Washington, there were 12 boats. Ten had vanished in 36 hours.

The Pequot then proceeded to the New York-New Jersey rum row, which, up to a dozen days ago, was admittedly drenching Broadway with whiskies and wines transported from its 31 bobbing "rummies" by Long Island boat-to-shore runners. Seven ships all under close guard were there. Not a case of liquor had left them in 11 days, the coast guardsmen said.

Commander Yeandle said today that "the war on the rum-runners has just begun; we realize that it is to be a tough tussle and we are prepared to see it through."

RUM FLOW HALTED ON PACIFIC COAST.

San Pedro, Cal., May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Prohibition law enforcement authorities continued their vigilance over this port and the adjoining coast line today, while their efforts were rewarded, temporarily at least, by stemming a tide of illicit liquor that has rolled up on the beach for the past several days from rum runners oft shore.

Dispersal of the rum ships was reported last night in the arrival of the coast guard vessel Vaughn by her master, Captain H. A. Woods. He said that she ships gave up the rum conquest and departed with the increased vigilance on land and sea.

WHEELER AND STAYTON FIRE VERBAL SHRAPNEL.

Washington, May 16.—The rum war off American shores has touched off a colorful display of publicity fireworks at the press bureaus of the national organizations favoring and opposing prohibition. Opinions, predictions and suggestions on both sides are raining down on newspaper offices in Washington in blinding profusion.

Tonight, both Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, and W. H. Stayton, of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, wound up the week with statements loaded with verbal shrapnel.

Mr. Wheeler said he saw no reason to use the navy against rum-runners "except as a last resort," but recalled that George Washington used the army to put down the whisky rebellion and added that "if another whisky rebellion develops, which cannot be suppressed by civil authorities, I believe Uncle Sam has as much red blood in his veins as he had 131 years ago."

Mr. Stayton asked that prohibition agents be bonded "to protect the public from unwarranted hold-ups," citing the case of Harry Brown, a school teacher, who he said had been shot by dry agents at Charleston, W. Va., because he failed to halt when they commanded him to do so.

CITY HIGH SCHOOLS TO GRADUATE 767 STUDENTS IN JUNE

High schools of Atlanta will graduate 767 pupils in commencement exercises to be held at the auditorium June 2 to 5 according to an announcement made Saturday by Prof. H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of education of city schools and supervisor of high schools. The grammar schools will send 1,064 pupils to the Junior High schools June 4. The Junior High schools will hold commencement exercises during the day of June 6.

The commercial high school exercises will be held on the night of June 2 at the auditorium when a class of 170 will be graduated. Girls High school will follow on the night of June 3 with a class of 225. Tech high school will graduate 262 on the nights of June 4 and Boys High school will follow with 110 graduates on the night of June 5.

Grammar schools of the city will hold simple closing exercises on the day of June 4. The Junior High schools will graduate 1,500 on the day of June 6.

At the high school graduation exercises elaborate programs will be carried out. Nearly all of them will present a play while oratorical contests and other features will be presented.

The grammar school graduates who are eligible for the Junior High schools will be apportioned as follows: William A. Bass school, 552; Joseph E. Brown, 320, Daniel C. O'Keefe, 552 and Hoke Smith High school, 540.

ROADS AND TAXES LEADING SUBJECTS

should be expended on actual road work throughout the state, and also, they should be made to stop purchasing so much worthless road machinery to be left in a few days by the roadside to decay and rust out."

CONSIDERS TAXATION GREATEST QUESTION.

Newnan, Ga., May 11.—Declaring that it was his opinion that the coming session of the Georgia general assembly would be an "epochal one for the state," Representative Sidney Camp, one of Coweta county's two members in the house this year, in discussing important legislation to receive the probable attention of the legislature, declared in a statement to the Associated Press that 'the question of taxation is of greatest import to our state, and until it is settled we will not progress one bit in a civic way."

Other important questions which, if introduced, Representative Camp intends to support, according to his statement, is an entire reorganization of the state highway department "in order that the public confidence in this great work may not be shaken," and enactment of legislation which would provide for immediate payment to Confederate pensioners balances due them.

Favors State Port.

The representative from Coweta also is strongly in favor of legislation which would tend to provide for greater educational advantages to school children throughout the state, and passage of measures which would provide a state port.

Bond Issue Opposed.

"I am not in favor of a state bond issue for highway purposes," continued Mr. Camp. "I favor a 'pay-as-you-go' plan. I believe the plan proposed by A. H. Thompson, of LaGrange highly practicable and feasible, and if it is introduced as a measure I probably will support it.

"As for the state highway department, its reorganization is, in my opinion, very necessary at this time in order that the public confidence in this great work may not be shaken.

"There are two other questions in which I am interested. These are Confederate pensions and common schools. I favor the immediate payment of all balances due Confederate pensioners. If this is impossible under the present tax income, ways and means to pay them should be worked out at once.

"Georgia's greatest pride is her common schools. I shall at all times use every effort in their support; I shall support no measure that encroaches on their legal share of the revenues of this state. Lastly, I favor the state port idea."

stant reinforcements of the Riffians opposing this front. However, no general action has yet commenced and quiet continues in this section.

The next big clash between the French troops and the invading tribesmen and Abd-el-Krim will be the rough foothill territory between Chechaouen and Ouezzan, it is believed here.

This conclusion is based upon news of the concentration of Abd-el-Krim's forces on the western flank of the French. The French need reinforcements to deal with an attack from this direction, which is taken in official circles as explaining the periods of stagnation between the French drives.

Air Forces Used.

General de Chambrun has been obliged to use air forces extensively to protect his flanks because he is operating with the bare minimum force required to protect his advanced positions. However, reinforcements continue to arrive and will be available for use whenever the Riffians choose to attack. The flying column then will be available to fight in full force instead of on a small scale, but with deadly effect, as it fought at Bibane Wednesday.

Fighting between Riffian invaders and Marshal Lyautey's forces seeking to drive them out of French Morocco has become intensified, assuming the proportions of pitched battles.

Riff Loss Heavy.

The French, continuing their endeavors to relieve outposts still besieged by the enemy succeeded in revictualling the garrison at Amzes only after storming trenches. The Moroccans are reported to have lost heavily in this engagement.

In the west General Colombat's men relieved the Maghala post, revictualled two others and sent a detachment to succeed a fourth. The Bibane post apparently is not yet completely liberated.

French aviators have carried the enemy's forces repulsed in Wednesday's drive, attempted to discover where their next concentration is likely. Tribesmen engaged in Wednesday's battle, it is learned, numbered 3,500.

Large reinforcements of tribesmen are reported concentrating before the French right wing. Advices through the Spanish zone say that the Riffians have captured large stores of war material and provisions. The Spanish are continuing efforts to prevent concentrations of Moors in their territory, aviators dispersing Riffians with machine guns.

VALITON FOUND GUILTY OF KILLING SERGEANT

Miami, Fla., May 16.—Walter C. Valiton was found guilty of first degree murder in connection with the killing of Police Sergeant Laurie L. Wever, March 15, by a jury in circuit court here tonight. The jury recommended mercy, which will allow the youth from Toledo, Ohio, to escape the death penalty.

reckless driving and of possession of liquor.

Two Slightly Hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Ford Saturday night narrowly escaped death when the car in which they were riding plunged down an embankment on the Mason-Turner road and turned over. They received bruises and lacerations about the body. Their injuries are not serious.

Call Officers R. E. Pettis and J. L. Kinard, who investigated the case, reported that Ford lost control of the car, and a case of operating a car while under the influence of liquor was made against him by Special Officer Whibby. The Fords live on the Mason-Turner road.

W. G. Moore, 353 Greenwood avenue, Saturday night was shaken up and bruised as the result of a collision on Spring street near North avenue between a light sedan in which he was riding and a truck driven by Clarence Reed, a negro, of 28 Hilliard street. The negro also received slight injuries.

Both cars were badly damaged. A case of reckless driving was docketed against both drivers by Motorcycle Officers Millum and Craig.

Miss Lowe Hurt.

Miss Lillian Lowe, of 42 Elizabeth street, was cut and bruised about the face when the car in which she was riding collided Saturday afternoon with one driven by Sarah Brown, negress, of 222 1/2 Fort street, at Edgewood avenue and Hilliard street.

No case has been made pending an investigation of the accident by Officers Chewning and Lee. Miss Lowe was given treatment at Grady hospital.

ONE DEAD, 30 MISSING IN EXPLOSION IN MINE

Berlin, May 16.—Late advices from the scene of the explosion in the Dorstfeld mine, near Dortmund, report that one man dead and 25 injured have been brought up from the pits. Thirty are still unaccounted for.

You'll Look as Young as Your Husband —in Just a Few Short Weeks!

And Get Back The Rosy Cheeks, Sparkling Eyes, and Tireless Energy You Used To Have

NEARLY every day physicians are called upon to examine women who are growing old in looks and health while still young in years. They are thin, pale, haggard-looking, nervous and irritable, tire easily, suffer from frequent headaches, dizzy spells, loss of appetite, indigestion and numerous other symptoms that cause them the gravest alarm.

Yet in practically every case the doctors find that all their troubles are due to one single cause—thin, pale blood, deficient in iron. And when they prescribe iron to build up and enrich the blood, it is usually only a matter of a few short weeks until all the symptoms disappear and these women regain the glowing cheeks, lustrous eyes, and tireless energy they formerly had.

Examinations in thousands of cases show that three women out of every four lack sufficient iron in their blood, and are weak and run-down for no other reason. For it is iron that keeps the blood rich and red. Without sufficient iron in your blood nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good. You don't get strength out of it. As a result you grow weak, pale, haggard-looking, nervous and irritable, dark circles appear beneath the eyes, and you often look and feel years older than you really are.

In such cases what is needed is not mere stimulating medicines or nerve tonics, but something that will put back into your blood the strength and youth-preserving organic iron that it needs. Once you do this you will be surprised what a marvelous improvement it brings in just a short time.

But be sure that the iron you take is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not the older mineral iron tinctures and pills which many physicians say are not easily assimilated, and so do little good. Nuxated Iron is a wonderful new combination of organic iron, like the iron in your own blood, and like that contained in small quantities in spinach and lentils. It does not injure the teeth or disturb the stomach. Furthermore it is so highly concentrated that one dose is equal to eating one-half quart of spinach, or one quart of green vegetables. Speaking of this new combination of organic iron a well-known physician said: "You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by average remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like iron to put color in your cheeks and, good, sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve strengthener and the best blood-builder in the world."

Millions of people use Nuxated Iron because it acts quickly to enrich the blood, to strengthen the nerves, to put the ruddy glow of health in cheeks and lips and to instill renewed energy into the whole system. Take Nuxated Iron tablets for just two weeks and you'll be astonished how much younger and better you feel, how well you look and how quickly that tired feeling vanishes and you become as strong and vigorous as ever. Nuxated Iron is sold under an absolute guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. At all good druggists.

NOTE.—Be sure you get genuine Nuxated Iron with the letters NI on every tablet, and accept no substitute. This is the only kind sold on the above money-back guarantee.

HINDENBURG ASKED TO SUPPORT DRY MOVE

Berlin, May 16.—German prohibitionists have lost no time in demanding that the new president, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, give his support to the passage of a German Volsteady act which would abolish the time-honored beer gardens and foaming steins, and substitute, presumably soda fountains.

The prohibitionists have issued a manifesto suggesting that the aged field marshal, who enjoys an occasional nip, become an abstainer and thus set an example to the nation. They assert that President Coolidge and also the presidents of Austria, Crecho-Slovakia, Finland and Mexico are teetotalers.

Hindenburg, so far, has dodged the issue.

It is estimated the German people consume wines, spirits and beer last year to the value of $720,000,000.

Investigate the Advantages of FERNANDINA

"The Ocean City"

AMELIA ISLAND

The Most Beautiful Island On the Atlantic Coast

NASSAU COUNTY

The Front Door to Florida

25 MILES OF UNBROKEN BEAUTIFUL HARD SURFACE BEACH
25 MILES OF CONTINUOUS RIVER FRONT

Deepest and most accessible port on the Atlantic Seaboard.

Land-locked harbor sufficient to accommodate any boat or fleet of boats sailing the oceans.

Municipally owned and operated Light, Water and Ice Plants.

To the tourist, Fernandina and Amelia Island offer superior climate, fishing, bathing, yachting and motoring.

To the homeseeker, an ideal and profitable spot in which to locate.

To the investor, many excellent opportunities.

Amelia Island, upon which is located Fernandina, the capital of Nassau County, has some of the best farming lands in the State of Florida. Not only are the lands fertile, but the location is an excellent one. It has been demonstrated that the weather here is not colder than it is in points farther south. In fact, the proximity of the lands on Amelia Island to the sea, and the fact that this is not far from the Gulf Stream, tends to give the island an advantage over other sections in the matter of growing vegetables and fruits for the markets of the country. Developments involving millions of dollars now under way on Amelia Island.

The resources and possibilities of Fernandina, Amelia Island and Nassau County are practically unlimited. Both Fernandina and the surrounding section of Nassau County offer fields for absolutely safe and profitable investment such as must be carefully investigated to be properly appreciated. This community is ripe for development along all lines and is today commanding the attention of capital to a greater extent than it has in the past.

Lowry School Dedication To Be Held Next Thursday

Charles E. Mitchell, Prominent New York Banker, Will Make Principal Address of Day.

Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City bank of New York, the largest bank in the world, will be principal speaker Thursday, May 21, at the dedication of the Lowry School of Commerce and Banking at Oglethorpe university, which will be one of the outstanding features of commencement exercises at this institution. The address will be delivered at the First Presbyterian church on Peachtree street at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Ground will be broken for the new building on the Oglethorpe campus by Mr. Mitchell at 11:30 o'clock in the morning.

Establishment of the new school of commerce and banking was made possible through a legacy of $200,000 left the school in the will of the late Mrs. R. J. Lowry. The Atlanta Clearing House association, at a meeting held recently, adopted a resolution introduced by H. Lane Young, of the Citizens and Southern bank, urging upon all the member banks the desirability of having all their officers and employees hear the address of Mr. Mitchell.

CHARLES E. MITCHELL.

Special Seats for Bankers.

Special seats will be reserved for the bankers who will honor Mr. Mitchell and also Colonel Robert J. Lowry, the first Atlanta man to serve as president of the American Bankers association, who initiated the educational work which is being carried on by the American Institute of Banking.

Exercises Thursday morning will be preceded by an academic procession in which the faculty and students and honor guests and members of the board of founders of the university and officers of the woman's board will take part. This procession will leave Lupton hall at 11:30 o'clock, proceeding to the site of the new building given by Colonel and Mrs. Robert J. Lowry.

Mr. Mitchell will be welcomed to Georgia by Governor Clifford L. Walker and his address will be followed by a talk by Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the board of directors of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, who will pay tribute to the founders of the new school. Mr. Mitchell will make a short address and then break ground for the new building.

The Lowry school, which will cost approximately $200,000, will be constructed of granite, covered with variegated slate, trimmed with limestone—in keeping with the other magnificent buildings on the Oglethorpe campus. Its architecture will make it almost a replica of the Oxford college which was General James Edward Oglethorpe's alma mater, Corpus Christi. It is expected that work will commence on this building at once and that it will be in actual service shortly.

Following the ground-breaking there will be a buffet luncheon in the dining hall of the administration building, to which all the guests of the morning are invited.

Will Lay Cornerstones.

Immediately after the luncheon cornerstones of the two additional units of Lupton hall will be laid, with appropriate exercises, and then the entire group of participants in the morning exercises will proceed to the First Presbyterian church, where Mr. Mitchell will make the principal address of the day, dedicating the Lowry legacy to the cause of education in banking and commerce.

The school has been made possible through the will of Mrs. Lowry, who in 1923 left the bulk of her estate to the founding of the School of Banking and Commerce at Oglethorpe university to bear the name of herself and her husband. While the subject of banking and finance will be especially emphasized, the school also will include all the subjects taught at such institutions and colleges of commerce and business administration as Harvard, University of Chicago, or the Wharton School of Commerce of Pennsylvania.

The Atlanta Clearing House association will give a special dinner in honor of Mr. Mitchell Thursday night and he will leave at midnight for his home in New York.

of Piedmont avenue and Fourteenth street on the afternoon of April 27. Miss Barnes was driving on Piedmont avenue, when a car driven by Mrs. Capers Andrews and occupied by her son, Capers Andrews, Jr., of Brookhaven drive, and Mrs. W. A. Crossland, 15 Peachtree, attempted to cross Piedmont from Fourteenth street and enter Piedmont park. The cars crashed at the intersection of the streets.

Mrs. Andrews, her son, and Mrs. Crossland were taken to a local hospital where they remained under the care of physicians for some time, being treated for bruises and lacerations about the body.

Miss Barnes was placed under arrest on April 28, one day following the accident, by Call Officers J. A. Corley and W. A. McKinney, who had been given the license number of her car. Miss Barnes had been placed under $1,000 bond, pending her hearing Saturday.

GEORGIA INDUSTRY LEAPS TO FRONT

woolen goods. The total value of these products was $254,119,910.

There are used in the textile mills the following machinery: 2,980,073 ring spindles; 513,016 mule spindles and 345,440 twister spindles; 55,353 looms; 12,165 cards, 234 sets of cards, 1,130 sewing machines; 6,669 knitting machines, 874 looping machines; 1,103 ribbing machines. Ninety-three of the mills bleach, dye and finish; 32 use water power, 83 steam, 79 electric. Some of these have both steam and electrical power, and some have water and electricity. The cost of raw materials was $131,548,951.

Clothing Factories.

Industries allied to textile mills are those that manufacture pants, overalls, shirts, hats and garments for women and children; also awnings, tents, mattresses and backbands. There are 75 establishments in Georgia that come under this class. They use 2,862 sewing machines. The capital invested in these plants was $3,802,565. The pay of the officers and clerks, $354,689; repairs and new machinery, $50,656; amount paid wage earners, $1,984,322; cost of raw materials, $5,989,351; total of the foregoing items, $8,379,018. The value of the manufactured products was $10,023,654.

Of the 123 oil mills now in Georgia only about 60 operated. The amount of capital invested is $24,050,947. There were received at the oil mills 537,560 tons of cotton seed, of which 305,505 tons were crushed.

Of the 163 fertilizer plants only 60 were in operation. The amount of capital invested was $47,852,974. Raw materials used were sulphates, pyrites, ground limestone, pulverized phosphate, tankage, and cotton seed meal.

Building Supplies.

Brick, tile, sewer piping, cement, clay, limestone products, and fullers earth show an increase over 1923. Capital invested in these industries was $11,987,565.

The machine, foundry, iron and steel and general repair shops, including railroad shops, was as follows: Number of plants, 167; capital invested, $25,767,756; amount spent for repairs and new machinery, $3,012,657; value of raw materials used $16,586,752; number of tons, 2,365,286.

Marble and granite quarries, marble yards, building stone and paving materials used for construction were as follows: Number of establishments 123, capital invested $15,964,545.

Bottlers and manufacturers of soft drinks were as follows: The number of plants was 218; capital and investment was $10,675,384. Number of employes, whites, 1,288; negroes, 463, making a total of 1,751.

Buggies, carriages, wagons and cart manufacturers show a very large decrease in their output. Then, too, the automobile has displaced the buggy and carriage and the truck has very largely done the same thing for the wagon. A great many of these plants have been turned into auto and truck repair shops. The number of plants was 46 with a capital of $1,020,260.

Many Power Plants.

Electric power and light plants for the past year showed as follows: Number of plants, 137; capital invested, $121,384,685; number of employees, whites, 8,865; negroes, 4,027, making a total of 12,892. Number of gas plants, 19; amount of capital invested, $12,902,784. The number of ice plants in Georgia in 1924 was 122; amount of capital invested, $11,983,765.

The barrel, box, crate and stave manufacturers were 101, amount of capital invested, $5,423,256. The broom, brush and mop manufacturers show as follows: Number of plants, 22; capital invested, $250,850. The canning plants in Georgia for 1924 numbered 58 with a capital of $1,496,587. Cigar and tobacco manufacturers, 37, with a capital of $380,260. Flour and grist mills and feed mills numbered 162, with a capital of $6,980,756.

Furniture Units.

The furniture manufactories, including fixtures, sash, doors and blinds and finished wood work, 173, with a capital of $9,876,354. Laundries are not classed as manufactories, but of public importance. There are 68 plants with a capital of $1,752,620. Leather goods, tanneries and saddleries number 23, with a capital of $5,218,786.

Miscellaneous manufactories, with not enough of a kind to place them in a separate class: Number of plants, 131; capital invested, $48,787,662; cost of repairs and new machinery, $2,265,386; cost of raw materials, $11,695,376; paid to officers and clerks $635,284; amount paid to wage earners $2,986,755; total of the foregoing items $17,582,801; value of the manufactured products $22,226,687.

LEADERS OF U. C. V. WILL BE HONORED

meeting every day for the week, the leaders in the campaign are to gather at the Chamber of Commerce for luncheon. At that time official reports are to be made and general campaign instructions outlined.

Preston S. Arkwright, state chairman, and Harry Stillwell Edwards, originator of the coin, leave during the night to organize district groups in four Georgia cities. Cities included in the tour are Albany, Augusta, Savannah and Waycross. F. W. Maaloe, state director, will accompany them on the trip.

Mr. Arkwright announced Saturday that Leon S. Dure, former city official and retired capitalist, had accepted chairmanship of the Macon district, and the district will be one of the first organized on the return of Mr. Arkwright from the present state tour.

Attorney General Napier, in the interest of the Confederate Memorial coin distribution in Atlanta and all over Georgia, has urged "Georgians and southerners and Americans" to purchase certificates liberally in order that the monument may be hurried to completion.

All other leaders are enthusiastically entering into the campaign, which gets under way with nation-wide interest.

NORTH CAROLINA BEGINS BIG DRIVE.

Raleigh, N. C., May 16.—With Cameron Morrison, former governor and one of the most popular men in North Carolina, at the head of the campaign as state chairman, and with the North Carolina Bankers' association pledged individually and collectively to give their active support and cooperation, there is every indication that North Carolina's quota of Stone Mountain Confederate memorial half-dollars will be carried over the top with flying colors.

The support of the North Carolina Bankers' association was pledged to Governor Morrison as state chairman in a resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the association at Pinehurst. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, the banks of North Carolina have been requested by the Stone Mountain Monumental association to assist in the distribution of memorial half-dollars authorized by congress in honor of the heroes of the south, and

"Whereas, our fellow citizen and former governor, the Hon. Cameron Morrison, has accepted the honor and responsibility for the success of the distribution in North Carolina, and

"Whereas, it is a point of honor with all loyal sons of the south that this, the world's greatest work of memorial art, shall not fall short of complete success;

"Therefore, be it resolved by the North Carolina Bankers' association in convention assembled that we collectively and individually pledge our wholehearted indorsement, cooperation and assistance to Governor Morrison and to the Stone Mountain Monumental association in securing the subscription necessary to fulfill the quota assigned to North Carolina and the south at large."

Hundreds of "Dads" Attend

:: EMORY AND TECH CELEBRATE DAY ::

Classes With Their Sons

"Dad's Day" was celebrated at Georgia Tech Saturday with 300 fathers of students present.

The large attendance of male parents was secured through letters sent out by a committee composed of Scroop Enloe, Herbert Hutton, Dr. J. N. Crenshaw, Professor Floyd Fields and Dr. W. V. Skiles.

The day's activities opened at 11 o'clock in the morning, when the fathers met on the school grounds and inspected the campus. At 11 o'clock, a mass meeting of the fathers and 2,000 students was held at Grant field.

Scroop Enloe made the welcome address on behalf of the students, while Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Tech, and Dr. Fields made the welcome addresses on behalf of the faculty.

Response was made by Judge E. C. Kontz. The fathers were guests of the Tech Athletic association at the Tech-Georgia baseball game in the afternoon. Former Governor Nat Harris was a distinguished visitor at the dads' day exercises.

The fathers were guests of the Marionette club at the performance of "The Bad Man," at the Atlanta Woman's club Saturday night.

DAD'S DAY OBSERVED ON CAMPUS AT EMORY.

Emory University, Ga., May 16.—(Special)—Thronged with the fathers of students who were visiting their sons in observance of the second annual "Dad's day," Emory campus all day Saturday was the scene of family reunions.

The dads attended all regular classes with their sons. To those fathers who had been college men themselves the class work brought vivid recollections of their own Alma Maters, mingled with mild surprises at the new changes that have taken place since "the good, old days." Most of the fathers, however, had never been to college and to them the daily routine of the classroom was a revelation.

A baseball game between the freshmen and sophomores was the feature of the afternoon. After a hard-fought battle, the sophomores won with a score of 6 to 5.

Saturday night a banquet was given by the university in the Emory dining hall for visiting fathers and sons. The visitors were welcomed and the purpose of "Dad's day" explained by various members of the student body and faculty and responses were made by several of the dads.

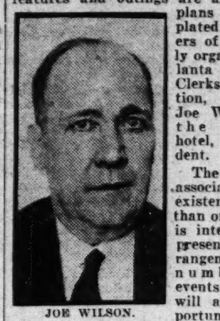
"Dad's day" was instituted at Emory, it was stated, in order to bring about a closer feeling of sympathy and cooperation between the students, their fathers and the school.

For the fathers who can stay over today the committee has arranged for a special "father and son" service at the Emory church, an automobile trip to Stone mountain and an open air concert by the Emory orchestra.

Mrs. Sarah Rebecca Bryan, who remembers the accession of Queen Victoria, celebrated her hundredth birthday recently at Bermondsey, with the two of her ten children who survive.

Wilson Enthusiastic Over Clerks' Program For Special Meetings

Preparations for a series of special meetings looking to entertainment features and outings are among the plans contemplated by leaders of the newly organized Atlanta Hotel Clerks' association, of which Joe Wilson, of the Piedmont hotel, is president.



JOE WILSON.

The clerks' association, in existence less than one month, is interested at present in arrangement of a number of events which will afford opportunities for wives and members of families of clerks to attend, according to Mr. Wilson. "Maybe it's because we are new that we are so ambitious," Mr. Wilson said, "but, be that as it may, we are going along with a bang for a new outfit and with a fine spirit among members we believe the clerks' association will be one of the livest clubs in the city in a brief time."

NAVY ENGINEER GUILTY OF LIQUOR SMUGGLING

Norfolk, Va., May 16.—Chief Machinist Frank M. Hendricks, chief engineer of the transport Beaufort, on which 500 quarts of liquor were seized by a searching party February 24, was found guilty by a naval court martial today on charges alleging conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline, attempting to land liquor into the United States, and violation of the lawful regulations of the navy.

The court reached its decision after nearly three hours deliberations, but did not intimate what the sentence would be. The decision, with the record, will be forwarded to the secretary of the navy.

Hendricks, on the stand, denied absolutely that he had placed liquor aboard the ship, or knew anything about its presence in his stateroom.

·PERMANENCE·

MORE THAN FIVE THOUSAND YEARS the pyramids of the Nile have been the world's most notable monument to man's constructive skill. The cities which existed near them have passed away, their histories forgotten in the dust of ages. The pyramids stand there alone—as changeless as the desert—the only permanent record of a civilization which in its time was the greatest the world knew of.

Every builder of things worth while seeks to make the thing that he builds permanent and lasting. The good that is done today is multiplied a thousandfold if it endures tomorrow and tomorrow's tomorrow.

Coral Gables has been made the most beautiful garden spot for homes by vision, with planning and great endeavor. To insure permanence for that beauty has been the constant aim from the beginning. It is no matter of chance or accident that all Coral Gables homes are of stone or stucco, that all roofs are tiled, that every building, whether for business, industrial or residential purpose, is carefully restricted in every possible way. Coral Gables has been planned that way.

We are not only building wisely, carefully, purposely for beauty at Coral Gables, but also for permanence. More than three years ago, before a single plot had been sold, before streets or plaza had been built, George E. Merrick himself wrote of Coral Gables: "Not a thing of the moment, of the year, or even of the passing period, but a wonderful monument to the achievement of worthwhile perseverance in the creation of beauty and the bringing true of dreams, that will as solidly endure and as beautifully and bountifully age as does the everlasting coral upon which this master development is founded."

That a far greater number of people place a high value upon the permanence and lasting qualities of all of Coral Gables' fine improvements is evidenced in practical form by ever-increasing volume of sales. That investors here find such things highly desirable is proven by their willingness after a large profit is taken to invest again and again.

A visit to Coral Gables is part of every complete Florida tour---and it makes a delightful outing. Call at our local office and let us tell you how you may see Coral Gables with no transportation cost to you.

Congressman Kelly To Speak Before Postal Employees At Atlanta Jubilee Monday

Solon Is Given Credit for Much of Success of Postal Pay Bill Passed by Congress.

CONGRESSMAN M. C. KELLY.

Congressman M. Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, will be the principal speaker at a jubilee mass meeting of postal employees Monday evening at 8 o'clock on the roof garden of the Ansley hotel.

The celebration isbeing sponsored by the Railway Mail association and National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, and all postal employees in Atlanta and visitors from other Georgia cities are expected to attend to do honor to Congressman Kelly.

With Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, he successfully guided the postal salary bill through the 68th congress after the original Kelly bill had been vetoed by President Coolidge.

This bill affected 350,000 postal employees, increasing their pay an average of $300 annually.

Congressman Kelly, accompanied by W. M. Collins, national president of the Railway Mail association; Henry W. Strickland, editor of the Railway Postoffice; Thomas F. Flaherty, secretary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, and Edward J. Gainer,president of the Letter Carriers' association, will arrive from Asheville, N. C., early Monday morning and will be met by local committee headed by E. F. Chilten, of Nashville, Tenn., president of the fourth division Railway Mail association, and Lewis Crespo, state representative of the postoffice clerks. Leo E. George, of Washington, D. C., president of the postoffice clerks' organization, is also expected to attend.

During the day the party will be shown points of interest around the city, including a trip to the Cyclorama and Stone mountain. At 6 o'clock a dinner will be served at the Ansley and Georgia senators and all congressmen have been invited.

The list of local invited guests includes Mayor Walter A. Sims, representatives of the chamber of commerce, officials of the railway mail service and postoffice, postoffice inspectors, editors of the daily papers and Journal of Labor, and local officials of the postal associations.

An orchestra will assist in making the meeting on the roof garden a gathering worthy of the esteem and appreciation which all postal employees feel for Congressman Kelly.

A few brief addresses will be made by others on the program and Congressman William D. Upshaw, of the fifth Georgia district, will introduce the orator of the occasion.

Mr. Kelly's home is in Edgewood, Pa., and he has represented the 33d Pennsylvania district for five consecutive terms and has been reelected to the 69th congress. He is a member of the postoffice committee and one of the recognized authorities in postal affairs.

Previous to his entry into public office he was an editor and president of the Braddock, Pa., Daily News Publishing company.

Postal employees and their families are expected to tax the capacity of the roof garden and the meeting will be called to order promptly at 8 o'clock.

Congressman Kelly and party go from Atlanta to Jacksonville, Fla., returning to Washington by Charleston, S. C., and Richmond, Va. Where similar meetings are being planned.

Women do not weep as readily now as they did in the old days, and the explanation of it may be found in the fact that considerable time is required to put on a complexion and it costs too much to be washed off several times a day.—New Orleans States.

ODD FELLOWS TO FETE GRAND LODGE MEMBERS

The grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will meet here at the auditorium during the week of May 25 as the guest of the local lodges of the sixteenth division.

Tuesday, May 26, the grand encampment will hold a one day session convening at 10:30 o'clock, at the Odd Fellows' hall, corner of Alabama and Broad streets, with Tom Salmon, grand patriarch, presiding. At 7:30 o'clock the degree contest will be held in the Taft hall. At 9 o'clock a reception will be tendered the visiting grand lodge, grand encampment, Rebekah assembly and canton officers and representatives at the ballroom in the Kimball house.

At 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning May 27, there will be a public meeting at the auditorium, at which the Hon. D. L. Nichols, deputy grand master, will preside. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. M. D. Collins, grand chaplain. The address of welcome will be delivered as follows: For the state of Georgia, Governor Clifford L. Walker; for the city of Atlanta, Mayor Walter A. Sims. Attorney Paul L. Lindsay, grand master, will make the response.

An interesting program is being arranged under the direction of the local committee, which will include a beautiful musical under the direction of Barnes Lodge No. 55, orchestra, directed by F. L. Heightman.

Following the public exercises the grand lodge will be called to order with Grand Master Paul L. Lindsay in the chair. The Rebekah assembly will also convene in Taft hall with the president, Mrs. Maude Hughes, presiding.

Reading of reports and election of officers will occupy most of the business session of the grand lodge and Rebekah assembly on Wednesday's program.

At 7 o'clock the grand lodge degree contest of the subordinate lodge crack drill team will be held at the auditorium, the Rebekah assembly will hold their degree contest of the Rebekah lodge, following the business session in Taft hall.

At 8 o'clock Thursday morning there will be a joint memorial of the grand lodge, grand encampment and Rebekah assembly by the officers of the grand lodge.

At 10 o'clock the grand lodge will reconvene and will adjourn at will. The Rebekah assembly will assemble in Taft hall at 10:30 o'clock.

CORNELIA WOMEN GLADDEN HEARTS OF CRIPPLED KIDS

Children at the Scottish Rite hospital for crippled children were made happy Saturday by the visit of the Scottish Rite club of Cornelia, Ga., and the gift of almost a wagon load of home-baked cakes and candies.

Twenty-seven persons composed the party, which motored from Cornelia, led by W. T. Brewer, president of the Scottish Rite club, and Mrs. J. H. McClure, president of the woman's auxiliary of the club.

The woman's auxiliary at Cornelia is one of the most important aids to the Scottish Rite hospital. These women make hundreds of garments a year for the little cripples, and keep busy all the year round sewing on buttons and mending clothes which are sent them by parcel post from the hospital every week.

University School Graduation Program Will Open Today

Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, will open the commencement program at 11 o'clock today for the University School for Boys by preaching the baccalaureate sermon at the church, it was announced Saturday.

The annual letter men banquet will be celebrated at 8 o'clock Monday night, at which time letters and sweaters will be awarded. The last chapel exercises at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning will be followed by the alumni meeting.

The senior class meeting and class day exercises will open Thursday's program at 8:30 in the morning. The senior-faculty banquet will follow at 6 o'clock Thursday night in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club.

L. C. Blackwood, solicitor general of the seventh judicial circuit of Spartanburg, S. C., will deliver the literary address for commencement exercises at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club. R. K. White, president of the University school will present the diplomas. Dr. Arthur S. Libby, dean of commerce, Oglethorpe university, will present all medals at the occasion.

George Whitfield Forrester, Jr., will deliver the salutatory address, and Joseph Travis Holleman, Jr., the valedictory. Music will be furnished through the services by Mrs. Harold N. Cooledge.

DR. RIDLEY BEGINS SERIES OF SERMONS ON "JESUS" TONIGHT

Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Third Baptist church, will begin a series of special sermons Sunday night, on the text, "Jesus." These sermons will be delivered at the night services. "What Jesus Claimed for His Children," will be the subject this morning. Sunday school will be held at 9:30 o'clock.

MAN SENTENCES SELF TO CITY STOCKADE

John Florence, of 265 Bankhead avenue, was sent to the stockade Saturday to serve a sentence he fixed for himself two weeks ago in police court, he having imbibed too freely of the forbidden liquid, according to police.

Two weeks ago, Recorder Callaway let the prisoner off when he begged for another chance, on the promise that if he came back Recorder Callaway could send him to the stockade for 30 days. John came back Saturday, and was sent to the stockade.

INSURANCE MEN PLAN PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

A cooperative advertising campaign will be the principal topic under discussion at the monthly membership meeting of the Atlanta Association of Fire Insurance Agents, called for Wednesday, at 12:30 o'clock, at the Chamber of Commerce assembly hall.

It is planned to start this advertising campaign in the near future, the object of which is to acquaint the public with the many services offered by the representative fire insurance agencies of Atlanta. Several other interesting matters will also be up for discussion.

The membership of the Fire Insurance association now numbers nearly 60. The association is affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association.

Broadway Banter

BY FORNEY WYLEY

Miss Martha Bryan Allen, a Kentucky girl, and Lyonel Watts, stars in the comedy, "O Nightingale," latest New York success.

Through no official of Ziegfeld officials I recently attended a rehearsal of the spring edition of their Follies. I have come to the conclusion musical revue rehearsals are the same the country over, whether professional or otherwise. There was much about the Ziegfeld rehearsal to remind me of Atlanta's Junior League Follies rehearsals. Everyone, it seemed, had a great deal to say at just those moments the most difficult steps were being taught. These professional beauties, just as our local ones, never found laughing and screaming a more delightful pastime than during the rehearsal. The exasperatingly prompt arrival of Gene Buck, with whom I had an appointment, made it necessary for me to leave. At no time, however, did anyone even suggest to me it was a lovely day outside, as much as I was expecting it. It would therefore seem, the Ziegfeld organization has in its employ no Mrs. Peeples, that charming Atlanta Junior Leaguer whose duty it is to see that no undesirable matter is allowed to settle at any of the local rehearsals. The attractive Mrs. Peeples can dispose of would-be-rehearsal-watchers with such amazing rapidity that oftentimes, you are more than half way home before it fully dawns on you you're no longer present at the rehearsal.

"My Girl" is a snappy, peppy musical show. There's everything in it you want in a musical comedy and none of those things you don't want but so often get. It happens to be one musical show which doesn't rely on gold draperies and sequin drops to get it by. So many producers seem to think that by dazzling you with glittering costumes and scenery they can blind you to the lack of comedy, good dancing and tuneful music in their show. In "My Girl" more care has been given to staging a clever, sparkling musical production than merely a fashion show. The show was put on by the same people who did "Little Jessie James" which you remember was so well liked in Atlanta it had to play a return engagement. Each of the eight chorus girls do a specialty in the second act of "My Girl" the same as they did in "Little Jessie James." The orchestra in the new show is featured as in the first one.

The music of "My Girl" is very tuneful. There is, of course, no "I Love You" in its score. Such a piece as that happens along only once every eon, which even before the days of cross-word puzzles meant something like only ever so often. It is apparently the producer's intention to have you like "You and I" the best of the musical numbers, but at that I liked "Rainbow of Jazz" the best of the music. There's a catchy waltz in the score called "A Fellow Like Me."

Marie Saxon, a Dorothy Dixon-Irene Castle type, dances with more grace and charm than anybody I've seen in New York. Miss Saxon seems to get more out of a kick than any dancer I've ever seen. She looks as if she likes it so well that if her salary stopped, she'd still keep on kicking regardless. She doesn't kick as though she has the backache and wants you to know she resents having to do it. Harry Puck is the juvenile opposite her and the two of them are way and above everybody and everything else in the show.

"My Girl" is the show to which that out-of-towner who always asks "Say, what's a good musical show for me to see?" is most often referred.

Atlantans continue to appear in large numbers in New York. In the New York Biltmore I saw Holland Judkins, whom you see in the Atlanta Biltmore with the same regularity you see Elizabeth Hawkins at all of Rich's Harvest Sales. The same day I saw Hugh Carter and his Princeton room-mate who were on their way to have tea with Martha Boynton. They told me only a few nights ago they saw Katherine Murphey at the Ritz. The Princeton room-mate, by the way, said what all Princeton men I've met always say, "From Atlanta? Do you know Sarah Schoen and Grace Goldsmith? I met them last summer in Europe" convincing me that Grace and Sarah must have been in the receiving line of every Parisian reception. Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Nixon I saw enjoying a stroll on East Forty-Third. They told me Atlanta's newest bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Trot Foreman, who before their Driving club ceremony were Mr. Trot Foreman and Miss Mary Shedden, were honeymooning here at the Vanderbilt.

"O Nightingale" is most appropriately billed as a "spring comedy." It's more or less of a light frothy affair which is decidedly interesting. Martha-Bryan Allen who plays "the girl" is quite the most fascinating person I have seen in many moons. She is a small dark-haired edition of Atlanta's Mrs. Bruce Woodruff whom somehow, like myself, you're probably still calling Mary Hill Bloodworth. Then there's something about her to suggest Marguerite Clerk in her palmiest motion picture days. Regardless of these comparisons, Miss Allen is a most individual person. She is another southern girl who is having remarkable success in the theater. Miss Allen being a native of Louisville Ky. Recently she has appeared in "Gypsy Jim" and "Lazy Bones." By the way, Miss Allen played in Atlanta with Leo Carrillo in "Magnolia" so if you saw the play, there can be no public about your remembering the attractive leading lady.

Lyonel Watts is cast as the young sculptor who eventually marries Miss Allen. Mr. Watts is an Englishman with quite an attractive accent. At all times is his work convincing. Mr. Watts tells me he appeared with Charles Cherry as "the boy" in "The Dover Road." His most recent Broadway appearances have been in "Outward Bound" and with Margaret Lawrence in "Isobel."

"O Nightingale" will probably go town in history as the one play in which a young girl who comes to New York to go on the stage, does not succeed, even in the last act. It is quite refreshing to find, even on the stage, a young girl as thoroughly innocent of the ways of our delightfully wicked world as the one Miss Allen portrays. You almost feel it can't be true, even in a play. Therefore, it is even more remarkable the character appears to be quite a real one, made doubly so by Miss Allen's wonderful performance.

Edith King, one of the most popular leading ladies the expired Lyric Players ever had, is now appearing in a vaudeville sketch with Laurette Taylor. The past week they appeared in Washington, and the present week are booked in New York. From what I have been able to learn so far, there are only the two of them in the sketch.

You can't trump "The Love Song" for exquisite music and singing. The Shubert show, appearing at the large Century theater, is as sumptuously staged as any production I have seen this season. There is a ballroom scene in the second act which out-ballrooms any others I've ever seen, even in the movies. Before seeing "The Love Song" I had from no particular cause gotten the idea it was going to be just a wee bit heavy. All such fears were immediately dispelled from the opening act on, the score being composed of not only the most beautiful but also the most tuneful music I've heard in a long time.

Odette Myrtil, taking the comedy role of Hortense, stands out as the particular star of the evening. She fairly radiates personality and holds your interest every minute she's on the stage. When she's off to make a costume change or whatnot, she leaves the show in rather capable hands as well. Allan Prior as Offenbach, the composer from whose music the score was taken, has a wonderful voice coupled with a pleasing stage presence. Evelyn Herbert makes an attractive Herminie while Dorothy Francis is an acceptable Eugenie.

Of the music, "Remember Me" is, perhaps, the most beautiful. There's not a chance of your not liking "The Love Song" and it should be on your list of shows not to be missed.

* * * *

A play by the name of "Flesh" was agreed upon by most of the critics as being the worst play of the year, quite a distinction this season, too. It is one of those plays no one expected to ever hear from after its fatal premiere. Now, we are told, the producers are contemplating making it a burlesque, and continuing its run. A lobby scene, in which the opening night critics' far from flattering comments on the play would be included, would precede the play proper, which it would seem an excellent fay to get the audience, if any, to come to the show on time.

By the time this reaches you, Lila Lee, screen star, will have have made her return to the legitimate stage in a play called "The Bride Retires." Miss Lee will appear at the National theater on Forty-first street, jus four blocks away from the Lyceum theater, where her husband, James Kirkwood, is appearing in the Belasco production, "Ladies of the Evening." Miss Lee has, as you know, been doing picture work for the last few years, and in the new play, she will make her first stage appearance in some years.

It should be of untold interest to the many Atlanta followers of "Ukelele Ike" to know that his wife is a member of the chorus in "Lady Be Good," the show in which he and the uke are appearing to such advantage. Two of Mr. Edward's numbers which are particularly popular at the present time are "That's All There Is, There Ain't No More," and "Everything Is Hotsy Totsy Now."

NEGRESS FILES SUIT FOR AUTO INJURIES

Sallie Armour, negress, Saturday filed suit in Fulton superior court for $10,000 for damages alleged to have been sustained when she was run over by a truck of the Waldrop-Estes Grain company, defendants. The accident occurred on the night of February 3. Scott, Hornbuckle & Moore, attorneys, represent the petitioner. Hearing is slated for the July term of Fulton superior court before Judge W. D. Ellis.

FAVORITE VICTOR STARS ARE HEARD ON NEW RECORDS

Gene Austin and Carson Robison make a tuneful duet of "Way Down Home" with the assistance of a violin, guitar, harmonica and piano on a new Victor record. It draws upon "Home Sweet Home" and utilizes a bit of Grieg melody. Vernon Dalhart on the other side complains of feeling lonely in "The Time Will Come." Violin, guitar and ukele bear him out.

Six fox trots are listed this week by Victor. Glen Oswal's Serenaders lead off with "If It Wasn't For You I Wouldn't Be Crying Now," "I Ain't Got Nobody to Love." They are serio comic, the first having sentimenta melodies and some brass "strangula tion." An accordion appears in th second.

"Big Bad Bill," who was a terro except at home, is put upon a dance record this week by Don Clark an his La Monica Ballroom orchestra Among other things are some St Vitus' dance effects for saxes "Cheatin' On Me" by the same or ganization is an easy-going number.

International Novelty orchestra makes an interesting record of "Th Flapper Wife," a melodious dance with a vocal refrain and brilliant piano and trumpet spots. "Who Take Care of the Caretaker's Daughter," on the other side is boisterous.

Captain Gaynor, soldier of fortune, repulses the highwaymen, until he is rescued by the bodyguard of the beautiful Damaris Hollinstone. . . .

Rafael SABATINI writes

The GATES of DOOM

a new Blue Ribbon serial story

THIS latest masterful story of love, intrigue, and adventure tells of the romantic affairs of the handsome young Englishman, Captain Harry Gaynor, a soldier of fortune intent on placing a Stuart on the throne of England. The exciting situations surrounding the Captain's courtship of the beautiful Damaris Hollinstone, coupled with the breath-taking escapades which develop from his determination to organize the followers of the ambitious Stuart prince, make this novel a worthy companion to Sabatini's well known best sellers---Scaramouche, The Sea Hawk, and Captain Blood.

The Gates of Doom is a story of highwaymen and hangmen, of soldiers and traitors, of heroes and weaklings. Sabatini has an inimitable style and genius for producing novels of crisp adventure and feverish romance. His rare genius appears again in this never-before-published novel purchased at great cost as a new Blue Ribbon serial story for Constitution readers.

The Constitution spends thousands of dollars every year in order to give its readers the best possible fiction obtainable. All of the novels and short stories printed in The Constitution are new stories. The Constitution was one of the first newspapers to present first-run fiction to its readers. Today its magazine section ranks high among all fiction-bearing publications.

For pulsating, thrilling adventure, for fervent love, gay romance, and sinister intrigue, don't fail to follow this new Blue Ribbon serial story.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: :: :: :: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH :: :: :: ::

Smith & Rankin Co. To Make $1,500,000 Sales in 1925

Sales aggregating $137,000 within the past 30 days, in three residential developments that are being sold under the auspices of the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin Co. were announced by W. R. Sheppard, manager of subdivisions, Saturday. The sales were made in Morningside the "Million Dollar Residential Development," in Sylvan Hills, a splendid southside subdivision, and in a development in Hapeville, recently taken over by this concern. Pledges have been given by the sales force to sell $1,500,000 in 1925.

This sales record, which is looked upon as an outstanding event in the real estate world of Atlanta, was celebrated by a picnic given recently at Sweetwater camp, when all members of the Smith & Rankin force were entertained. This picnic was given by Mr. Sheppard and O. L. Taylor, director of sales for Sylvan Hills, on Friday, May 1, and was followed by a banquet given by the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin Co. at the Henry Grady hotel on Tuesday, May 5. Pledges were given at the banquet by each member of the three subdivision staffs that they would put over at least $100,000 in sales for the month of May.

A friendly contest was one between the members of the three sales forces during the month of April 1, and W. R. Sheppard presented to Mrs. Lillian R. Uzzell a handsome watch as the winner of the first prize in Sylvan Hills. Wade Browne was given a fine watch as first prize in Morningside, and W. G. Cunningham was presented with $50 in gold as winner of second prize.

Sales to Reach $1,500,000.

Mr. Sheppard also announced that aggregate sales for the first months of 1925 reached a grand total of $345,000, and the sales organizations gave their pledges to produce business to the amount of $1,500,000 during the present year.

Preparatory to the big sales campaign that is to be inaugurated in Morningside, the Smith & Rankin company has erected a beautiful Spanish renaissance office building on the grounds. This building will be devoted to the convenience of prospective patrons, and among the features of the service that will be provided will be a complete architectural department, in which clients will be assisted in working out pans for dwellings. This building will be occupied at all times by a representative of the company, whose duty it will be to show the subdivision and to give whatever service that may be expected by prospective patrons.

The field office will be shared by Wagar & Company, Inc., and W. L. Sellers, associate architect, who will assist clients in preparing the plans for homes in Morningside park. This firm of architects, with Mr. Sellers, have worked out many beautiful designs of the Spanish and Old English type, and there are more than a half dozen residences of those styles now being erected in that development, according to Mr. Sheppard. This firm, it was also announced, has purchased about 30 lots in Morningside, and will begin within a short time the construction of many more beautiful dwellings.

$2,500,000 in Homes Sold.

That more than $2,500,000 worth of dwellings have been erected in Morningside within the past 18 months was also announced by Mr. Sheppard, who said that the figure is indicative of the popularity of Morningside as well as evidence of the activity of real estate and building operations here.

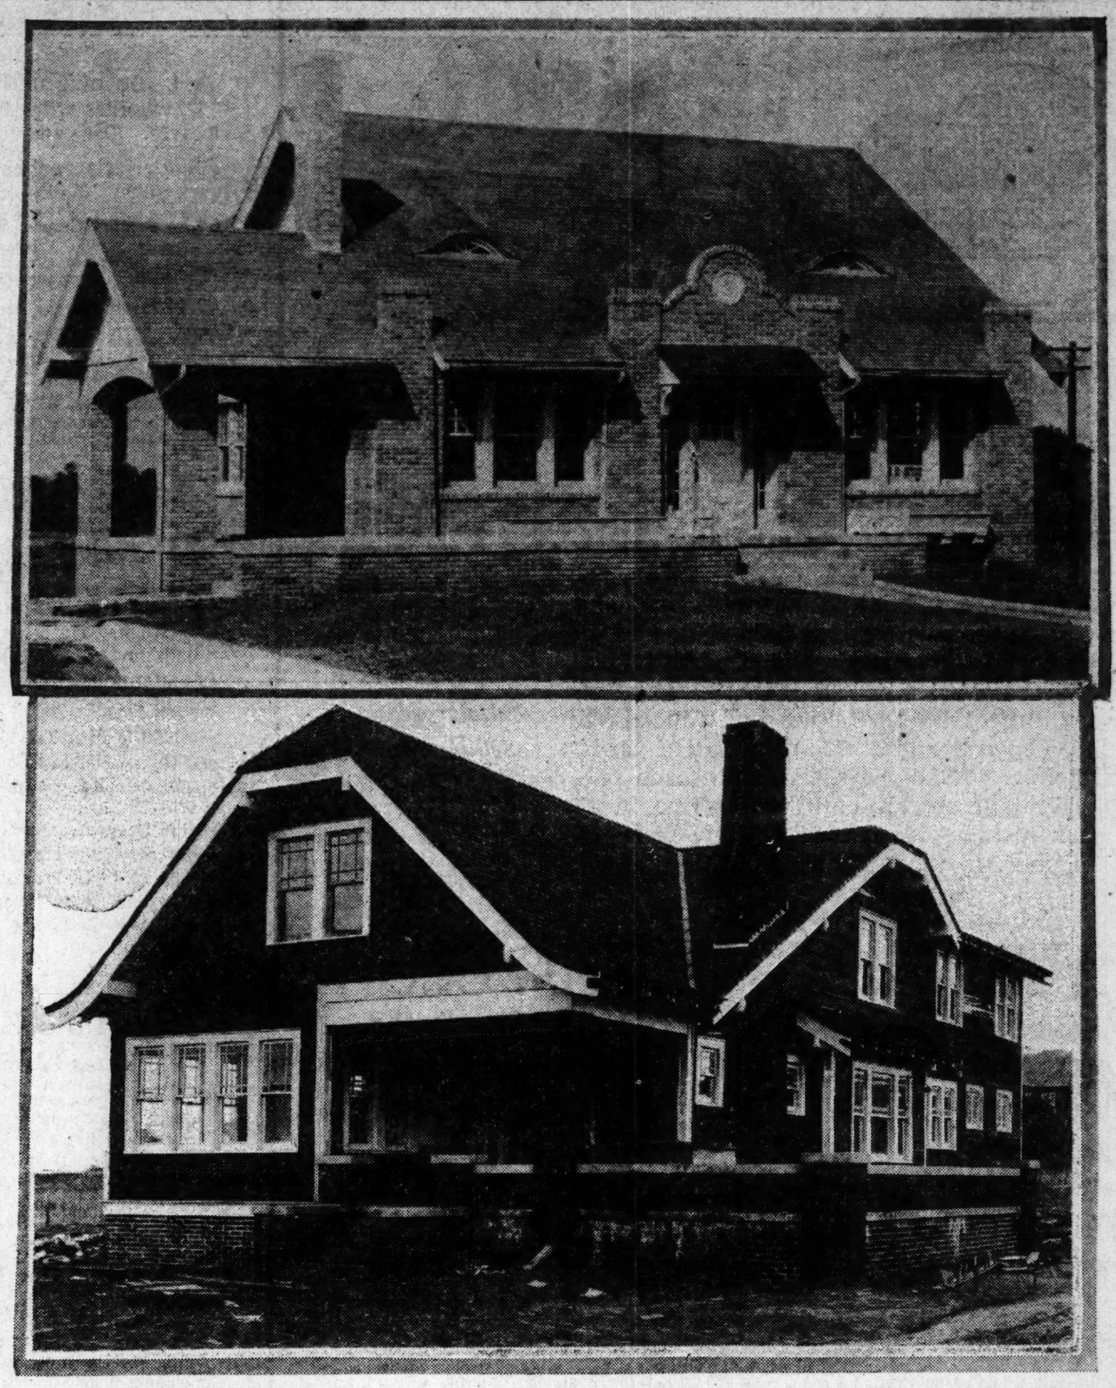
"Every street that was opened through Morningside during the past year," said Mr. Sheppard, "has been paved and all the civic improvements in the developed portion of the subdivision have been completed. More than 15 miles of sidewalk have been laid, with the accompanying curbs. Nine miles of gas mains are down; sewers and water mains, and seven miles of concrete paving have been laid. Parkways and playgrounds that abound in many parts of the park have been sodded, and beautiful flowers and shrubs everywhere add their bit to the beauties of nature. The magnificent forest trees add their loveliness to the many elms, crepe myrtles and other handsome shade trees that have been planted along the driveways."

Sylvan Hills, another beautiful subdivision, is being rapidly sold to the homeseekers under the auspices of the Smith & Rankin company.

Hapeville Development.

The Hapeville subdivision, according to W. R. Sheppard, is under management of J. B. Nall, an experienced real estate man and popular salesmen. The improvements in this development, it was stated, are practically complete, and 50 or more handsome homesites will soon be opened. About a score of homesites have already been sold and 10 homes have been completed, while others are planned for immediate construction.

New Homes in Avondale Estates



Above are shown handsome residences in Avondale Estates nearing completion. Several of the 25 splendid residences to be built for occupancy this summer are now under construction in accordance with the scientific plan of home-building inaugurated in Avondale Estates. Wholesale purchase of basic materials, such as lumber and brick, and free service of a corps of architects and engineers result in substantial savings, which are passed on to the home purchaser, it is stated.

Unprecedented Building Wave Predicted for South

An unprecedented volume of contemplated construction in the south during the coming summer is indicated by the April building reports of S. W. Straus & Co. made public yesterday.

The 25 leading cities show a total of $32,661,068, an increase of 12 per cent over April, 1924.

Reports from 67 southern cities and towns show an April total of $38,759,065, an increase of 9 per cent over last April, and for the first four months of the year, $130,948,112, an increase of 14 per cent over the same period last year.

Eighteen of the 25 leading cities show marked increases over last April and 44 of the 67 cities and towns reported gains.

Louisville led in April in volume of prospective building, with a total of $4,770,075. The highest percentage of April gain among the leading cities was 239 per cent, reported by Wichita Falls.

Dallas, which holds second place, had an April gain of 51 per cent; Miami, in third place, had a gain of 43 per cent. Houston was the fourth city in volume; Memphis, fifth; Birmingham, sixth, with a gain of 54 per cent; Richmond, seventh, and New Orleans, eighth. Shreveport, ninth, had a gain of 165 per cent; Miami Beach was 10th with a good gain; St. Petersburg 11th with a gain of 39 per cent and Nashville 12th with a gain of 29 per cent. Fort Worth had a gain of 34 per cent. Winston-Salem, Jacksonville, Asheville, Little Rock and Greensboro, all in the list of 25 leaders, showed substantial April gains. Amarillo had a gain of 199 per cent and Shreveport 165 per cent.

Louisville and Dallas were reported in April among the 25 leading cities of the country, Louisville occupying 14th place and Dallas 24th.

The total of April building permits for the whole country, 365 cities and towns reporting to the S. W. Straus & Co. national monthly survey, was $457,169,969, a gain of 32 per cent for the same cities over last April.

Seen From the Auction Block

BY THE AUCTIONEER

MRS. IVEY RETURNS FROM FLORIDA.

Mrs. Gussie B. Ivey, who is known as one of the outstanding business women of Atlanta and who conducted a real estate office here for several years, making a speciality of finding homes that suited her clients in every particular, has returned to Atlanta from a winter trip to Florida, and while no announcement has been made by her, it is presumed that she will again enter actively into her former business here.

Mrs. Ivey has been welcomed home by her many friends and admirers.

THROWER MAKES TOUR OF SOUTHERN CITIES.

M. L. Thrower, well-known real estate man and lay church worker, spent the past week in a trip to Pittsburg, Baltimore, Richmond and other cities, attending gatherings of the Business Men's Evangelical association, of which he is head.

COUNTY TO WORK ON MADISON AVENUE.

"The last word has been spoken," said John A. White, chairman of the street committee and member of the staff of the M. L. Thrower Realty company, "and everything is in readiness for the county construction forces to take over Madison avenue during the coming week and begin the work of grading, cutting back the houses and lots and opening the boulevard to where it will form a junction with Forsyth and Whitehall and other streets. The opening of this street will also form a new cross town boulevard that will take much of the burden off Peachtree and Whitehall streets, and make a convenient and pleasant way to pass from the north to the south side of the city.

"Property owners along Madison avenue have agreed that the city may authorize the tearing away of those buildings that would extend into the street after it is widened, provided the city authorities will promise to pay them for the property during the present year. This means that the county forces will be given charge of the street during the next week and that this greatly needed thoroughfare will be rapidly brought to completion."

EDGEWOOD AND IVY GROWING INTO BUSY CORNER.

The "Little Five Points" at Edgewood avenue and Ivy street, where Gilmer street also enters, is becoming one of the busiest places for automobile traffic in the city, and because of the peculiar way in which pedestrians are forced to cross the street at this point, it is looked upon as one of the most dangerous places in the city. The increase in traffic at this point continues each day because of the many new buildings and enterprises that have been inaugurated there during the past few months. Many automobiles use Edgewood avenue now that did not do so formerly because of recent widening and paving of the thoroughfare.

Among the new enterprises and buildings that have been opened near this point during the past few months are the Hurt building, which accounts for hundreds of new faces in this portion of the city; the new Ivy street garage, which is rapidly growing to a state of completion; the Commercial Exchange building, and other large establishments. The Ivy street garage, which is to be opened June 10, will provide space for 600 automobiles, and it is expected that a large number of the cars will approach the structure on Ivy street, adding to the congestion already there. It is expected that a traffic policeman, now greatly needed there, will be stationed there when the new garage opens.

BURKE RETURNS FROM FLORIDA TOUR.

J. Clayton Burke, who has been sales manager for the Grant-Jeter company for several months, has returned from a trip to Florida in company with Cliff C. Clay, George Allen and Gordon Clarke. They were guests of Mr. Clay, who drove through south Georgia to Lake City, Jacksonville and to Miami and other cities. The party was away from Atlanta about two weeks, and its members expressed themselves as happy to return.

ATLANTA ENGINEER BUILDS FLORIDA HOTEL.

Joseph S. Shaw, well-known as a leading engineer of Atlanta, is said to be erecting a large hotel on the estuary of the Halifax river in Florida after a design of his own. J. Clayton Burke, who has recently returned from a tour of Florida, said that on a yacht trip down the Halifax river the party was shown this splendid building and told that it was being built by an Atlanta engineer. Mr. Shaw has built many notable houses in this city.

BEATTIE PREDICTS GOOD YEAR FOR REAL ESTATE.

W. D. Beattie, who is known as the developer of Capitol View, sounds a note of optimism with reference to the market for homes here during the coming season, and enthusiastically predicts that 1925 will be perhaps the best year in the history of the city.

Mr. Beattie has an original plan of selling a home on easy payments without burdening the property with a mortgage—a small payment down and the balance divided into 100 equal monthly payments—the amount being prorated according to the price of the dwelling.

"Unusual building developments," said Mr. Beattie, "have been carried on in this section for seevral months, due to the desirability of Atlanta as a home city and the attractiveness of the sites offered for sale in various parts of the city."

O. W. Settles is sales manager for the Beattie company, and he says that he expects to sell more homes during the present year than ever before in the history of the Beattie business.

RAY HERN NOW WITH RALPH MARTIN COMPANY.

Ray W. Hern, well-known business man of the city, is reported to have become connected with the real estates firm of Ralph B. Martin, and will take his place on the sales force of that concern. Mr. Hern, it was stated, will specialize in the sale of homes and vacant lots. He invites his friends to visit him in his new offices in the Atlanta Trust company building, where he declares he will be glad to serve them in any way.

Mr. Hern was formerly sales manager for the Georgia Wholesale company, resigning that position to take up his new connection with Ralph B. Martin.

BOGGS WITH GARDEN HILLS DEVELOPMENT

L. J. Boggs, salesmanager for Garden Hills, reports a successful week with a number of lots sold to representative people. Some of these purchasers will begin erection of homes at once.

"Garden Hills is not exceeding my expectations," Mr. Boggs said, "As I have always had abounding faith in all north side development, and feel that Gardens Hills is the garden spot of this delightful residential section. Some of the most wonderful country estates in the south are immediately adjoining Peachtree road and the natural trend of progress is in this direction," he stated.

Developments are rapidly going forward. Street paving is well under way, and white asphalt drives will soon add to the beautiful landscape work and the many handsome homes now being completed.

HORINE RETIRES FROM BUILDING MANAGEMENT

E. M. Horine, who has for several years been active in the affairs of the Atlanta Building Owners' and Managers' association, has retired from the presidency of the association, according to an announcement in the current bulltin of the organization, published under the editorship of Fred Shaefer. Mr. Horine has also been in charge of the Grand building, of which his wife, a daughter of the late L. DeGive, was part owner, and he has also retired from that position according to the announcement. Mr. Horine, who is well known in local real estate and office building circles, purposes retiring to a large extent from active business and taking a tour of the world.

ADAIRS TO CELEBRATE SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Invitations have been sent out by the Adair Realty and Trust company to its sixtieth anniversary dinner that is to be held in the Biltmore hotel on the evening of May 20. This firm, which was founded by Colonel George W. Adair, father of Forrest Adair, present head of the concern, is known as perhaps the largest real estate concern in the entire south. It has played a large part in the development of Atlanta, handling many millions of dollars worth of the most valuable property in the city, and its expansion has kept step with the growth of the city in every way. A statement made by Forrest Adair at the beginning of the present year was to the effect that the business of the firm had reached its greatest peak in 1924 and that he fully expected it to double during the present year.

PALMER ACCEPTS FLORIDA INVITATION

C. F. Palmer, head of Palmer Incorporated, owners of the Palmer building and the handsome new office building, known as the 101 Marietta Street, has accepted an invitation to serve on the National Planning service of the Wilson 17-story building, at Miami, Fla.

Mr. Palmer, who has made a study of office buildings, and who evolved the plans for the anique structure at 101 Marietta street, is considered an authority upon the building and operation of that class of structures. The invitation to act on the above commission was extended Mr. Palmer by President Lee T. Smith of the National association.

DOLVIN COMPANY ENJOYS INCREASED PATRONAGE.

Since removing into their new offices at 814-34 Candler building, the Dolvin Realty company announces that the business of the concern has experienced a steady increase.

"Not only have we enjoyed a fine increase in our sales," said Oliver Dolvin, head of the firm, "but we are looking forward to the best year this concern has ever known."

TURNER JOINS STAFF OF J. J. THOMPSON.

Clyde L. Turner, well known in local business circles, has joined the sales force of the John J. Thompson company, real estate concern in the Candler building. Mr. Turner formerly served with a prominent automobile concern, and is said to have made a splendid sales record. He has been congratulated by many friends since taking up his new work.

Preacher Firm Occupies Office In New Building

The firm of G. Lloyd Preacher & Co., one of the best-known architectural firms in the south, has removed from its former offices in the Healey building to the Wynne-Claughton building, according to recent announcements.

The building in which the architectural firm has opened its new offices was designed by the Preacher company. The interior decorations of the company's new quarters are of the Spanish type, and are said to be among the most beautiful in the city. The entrance to the offices is from the lobby and visitors are at once impressed with the charming effect of the old Spanish architecture. Worm-eaten beams, cypress woodwork and the rich coloring of the Moorish interiors have been used to create an ensemble that will not fail to receive the approval of lovers of the beautiful.

The reception room, which is made highly attractive by the beautiful ceiling, is also enhanced in its loveliness by the specially manufactured draperies. Old-fashioned wrought iron fixtures also add to the charming effect of the apartment, rendering it both unique and beautiful.

The firm of G. Lloyd Preacher & Co. has designed many of the most beautiful buildings in the south, including the Henry Grady hotel in Atlanta and a number of splendid hotels in Florida cities.

Shadow Lawn Will Soon Be Complete, Collins Declares

Sales continue active in Shadow Lawn, handsome North Side residential development of the Berry Collins company, and improvements which have been in progress for some time are advancing with marked rapidity.

Invitations have been issued to home-seekers who wish to leave the crowded districts and apartments in the city and come to Shadow Lawn and select a site for the home of their dreams.

"All of us have dreamed of the home we want, and it is perhaps true that few, if any, of these dream-homes have a setting that does not include beautiful shade trees, flowering shrubs and the beauties that nature can produce for us only in the open places," stated a member of the Berry Collins sales force. "We all wish for ourselves and our little ones everything that will make life happy, and beautiful homes surrounded with trees and singing birds, velvet-like lawns and fresh open air are among the most pleasing things to be found.

"Shadow Lawn, as its name implies, has a great abundance of cool, grateful shade, its lawns are like velvet and every delight to be found in the country is to be enjoyed, combined with all the advantages of the most modern and luxurious city home."

The Peachtree road portion of the subdivision, it was stated, has about been sold, but a few choice sites remain available. It is said to be probable, however, that these remaining lots will go within the next few days, and advice is given to those who wish locations to act promptly.

The Berry Collins company is erecting several new homes in Shadow Lawn. On the west side of Peachtree road this company has built three homes of the old English type. These dwellings will be of stucco and hollow tile. One of these homes has been sold, and several others have been under negotiation for the past few days. On the east side of Peachtree road the company is building a handsome brick bungalow. Several red and cream brick dwellings are being completed, one of which was sold during the past week.

Blue Rock Heights Rapidly Reaching Completed State

Blue Rock Heights, one of Atlanta's newest and most beautiful subdivisions, which has been under development for several months, is rapidly taking on the aspect of a completed home park, and many high-type residences are said to be planned for this section within the near future. Several handsome homes have been designed and construction is expected to begin within a short time.

A visit to Blue Rock Heights Saturday brought out the fact that much development work has been accomplished there during the past few weeks, and many driveways have been graded and prepared for the paving that will begin at once, according to official statements. Blue Rock drive will be paved at once, it was declared.

Blue Rock Heights, property of the Collins Development, was designed for high-type homes, and restrictions surround every purchaser that insure the class of dwellings that would be acceptable only in the most exclusive neighborhoods. Every effort is being made by the owners of the property to make the improvements placed upon this development harmonize in every way with the rich gifts of nature, and landscapers have been employed to render the residential park as attractive as possible.

That a campaign of selling will be put on during the summer in order to sell the handsome home sites in Blue Rock Heights was stated by the publicity department of the Berry Collins Development company Saturday.

"These lots are highly attractive in themselves just as nature gave them to us, but landscapers, engineers and home builders will complete the lovely picture that will be seen in that section during the next few months," it was stated.

Southern Railway Issues Handsome Book on Atlanta

A handsome illustrated booklet, giving a number of splendid views of Atlanta and containing many new items of information about the metropolis of Dixie, has just been issued by the Southern railway. Several hundred thousand of the books have been distributed by this company and it is believed that they will prove of inestimable value to the city from a standpoint of high-class publicity.

"Progressive Atlanta" is the title of the new booklet and it carries, in addition to many new facts and figures with reference to the city, a number of engravings of Atlanta's attractive hotels, recently-erected dwellings and apartments and several park and playground scenes that will not fail to attract the admiration of people in other cities.

A double-page view of Stone mountain, showing in the most graphic manner the proposed Confederate monument as it will look when completed is one of the most interesting and attractive features of the book.

Hundreds of the books have been distributed on the trains of the Southern railway, sent to their various agencies in other cities and left in hotels and other places where they will fall into the hands of people who might be induced to come to this city.

The publication of "Progressive Atlanta" is regarded by real estate, business men and members of the railway profession as an outstanding effort on the part of the railway company to give the south's greatest city a splendid boost.

The Ananias club: "I want to sell you this orange grove," said the Florida real estate salesman, "but I want to warn you before you buy it that not one in a hundred ofthe suckers who fall for our bait makes any money out of their groves."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Haire Will Join Smith & Rankin SalesOrganization

J. H. Haire, for several years manager of the classified advertising department of the Atlanta Constitution, and who is known to practically every real estate man and woman in the city, has severed his relation with The Constitution to join the sales staff of the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin, well known real estate agency.

Howard Haire, during his service with The Constitution, came into contact with the real estate fraternity in the most intimate way, building up friendships and forming associations that enabled him to greatly increase the volume of business in his department. He is known as one of the outstanding figures in local advertising circles, and with his knowledge of real estate advertising and modern business methods, as applied to the real estate profession, it is believed that his services should prove of great value to his new employers.

Mr. Haire leaves The Constitution with the best wishes of a number of friends and the best wishes of the Real Estate Review and every member of the classified advertising staff are extended to him.

Tolleson Speaks To Real Estate Men On Memorial Coins

The luncheon meeting of the Atlanta real estate board held at the Henry Grady hotel Thursday was attended by a large number of members.

Mr. Tolleson, representing the Stone Mountain Monumental association, spoke to the members in regard to the memorial coin campaign that began Friday. He urged members of the board to see that everyone in their organization has an opportunity to purchase these coins among the real estate dealers.

Ward Wight, of Ward Wight company, and one of the active members of the board, was principal speaker and his subject was "Real Estate Appraising." The speaker's talk dealt with modern methods of appraising residence, vacant and downtown business properties. He said that appraising is a phase of the real estate profesion that is growing in importance and in order that a broker may be efficient it is necessary for him to be familiar with modern methods of making appraisals. He said that the correct appraising of properties is one of the fundamentals of the real estate profession and the ability to successfully handle real estate transactions depends upon the individual's ability to accurately judge values. All realtors were urged to give the matter of appraisals careful study so as to equip themselves to be more efficient in this respect.

A. S. Adams, president of the board, called attention to the service the appraisal committee offers to the purchasing public and urged members to refrain from giving free advice and "snap judgments" on values and to continue their efforts to have the board make all their appraisals.

He further called attention to the fact that he is especially anxious to have a large number of members attend the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to be held in Detroit in June.

Mr. Adams urged all firm members to take advantage of every opportunity to use the word "realtor" in their ads as the public is beginning to realize that this word means something in the real estate business and assures prospective real estate buyers of fair dealings and efficient service.

"CITIZENS SHOULD BOOST ATLANTA," SAYS C. A. FORSYTH

Calling attention to the fact that Atlanta has won her present prosperity without artificial stimulation or influence to contribute to her growth, C. A. Forsyth, well-known real estate and business man, has given out a statement urging the people of Atlanta to cease boosting other states and concentrate their attention on boosting their home city.

"Golden opportunities are here in our immediate vicinity ready to be grasped by the people of this city—investments in real estate, for instance, present splendid chances for investments, to say nothing of other lines of business that promise safe and sure returns.

"There are numerous sound reasons why Atlanta should receive the serious consideration of investors. Atlanta is the greatest city of its size in the world, because of its geographical location, its climate, its bountiful raw materials, its splendid highways and wonderful network of transportation lines. Our manufacturers employ fully one-third of Atlanta's population, and we have 347 industrial plants humming with industry and turning out thousands of articles of commerce daily."

Mr. Forsyth called attention to the variety of minerals that are to be found within 50 miles, and the large number of raw materials to be had within a small radius. At Cartersville many important minerals are mined and a big part of its large weekly pay roll finds its way into the coffers of Atlanta business concerns.

He called attention also to the climate of this city, which would render it one of the most delightful summer and winter resorts in the country; the labor situation, which is one of the best in America, and the freedom of this city from tropical pests.

"We should show the people passing through our midst just what a magnificent city we have," he said. "This can be done if we will advertise and boost Atlanta on every hand, and quit contributing to the advertising campaigns of other cities and states."

Burdett Makes Many Important Property Sales

Indicating the increasing activity in residential property sales in Atlanta, the Burdett Realty company gives out a list of sales involving splendid properties in various portions of the city. While no considerations are named, it is understood that the sales aggregate a large total and that good prices were paid for each of the dwellings mentioned here.

The list follows in full:

165 Briarcliff road, two-story brick residence; from Manget Realty company to Dr. W. H. Wilson, 91 Techwood drive, brick bungalow; from Mrs. E. L. Kelly to D. F. Morgan, 557 Atlanta avenue, frame bungalow; from L. M. Melton to D. C. Freeman, 634 Ponce de Leon avenue, two-story residence; from A. H. Harper to a client, 186 Sells avenue, two-story apartment; J. B. Richardson to D. C. Freeman, 362 Ponce de Leon avenue, residence; from Emory Morris to a client, 26 Woodcrest avenue, new two-story home; from H. W. Nicholes to G. W. Eakins.

Appraisals Should Be Officially Made, Declare Realty Men

Giving of gratuitous off-hand opinions on the value of property on the part of board members is condemned in a formal resolution which has just been adopted by the Kansas City, Mo., real estate board. Furnishing such opinions is "an unfriendly act and an unethical practice," the resolution holds.

Announcement of the board's action in its official bulletin carries a further statement showing how "horseback appraisals" cut down realtor prestige.

"The more serious aspect of this line of conduct," the bulletin states, "lies not in the free dispensation of information so much as in the danger that what is thus given out is apt to be misinformation; that is to say, off-hand statements are lacking in the elements of study and consideration which should accompany every judgment of a realtor. In fact, there is no judgment at all without study and consideration. Only to the extent that the declarations of a realtor are based on serious thought and thorough examination with his word carry weight."—National Real Estate Journal.

Members of the Atlanta real estate board realizing the danger of giving off-hand opinions on the value of property, took unanimous action at one of the business meetings in 1924 prohibiting the giving of such opinions and further provided in the by-laws of the board that all requests for appraisals should be turned in to the board's appraisal committee, who would make a careful inspection of the property in question and give an appraisal which would have weight and value.

IN REALTY FIELD

C. L. TURNER

Who has recently joined the sales staff of the John J. Thompson company, one of the leading realty concerns in Atlanta. Mr. Turner has had wide experience in the business world, having served for some time with outstanding automobile agencies and other lines of business. FORMER ROME BOY WINS AT NATCHEZ

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Announcement was received here today that Ben Grafton, son of Mrs. Ned Grafton, for many years a resident of Rome, now residing in Alexandria, La., won the gold medal in declamation in a contest held at Jefferson Military college, Natchez, Miss., where he is a junior.

He is a grandson of Mrs. V. A. Grafton, of Rome, and was a student at Darlington school for several years.

Teachers Elected.

Rome, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—In addition to the teachers already elected for the coming year to teach in the Rome schools, the board of education at a meeting held last night reelected five teachers, and one additional. Those reelected were: Miss Sarah Bryan, Miss Claire Maxwell, Miss Marie Davis, Miss Evelyn Harrington and Mrs. T. B. Crawford. Miss Mary Griffin, who will graduate from G. S. C. W. at Milledgeville, this year, also will teach. She is also a graduate of Rome High school.

Election of teachers and routine business were features of the meeting.

Youthful Robbers.

Rome, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Jimmie Thomas and Eli Ksonewitcz, two well-known juvenile miscreants in Floyd court circles, have been caught in Chattanooga at the instance of Rome police charged with burglary of Burney's store on Broad street Wednesday night. A large amount of property alleged to have been stolen was found in possession of the boys.

Sheriff Wilson has gone to Chattanooga after the two, and it is said that they will come back without requisition papers.

Retiring President Mather Daniel turned over the presidency of the club to President Quigg and required the new president and other officers to take solemn oaths of allegiance to the flag of Rotary. Other officers are: John S. Bachman, vice president; Albert S. Fahy, secretary; Doyle A. Moore, assistant secretary; Otis L. Daniel, treasurer; T. M. Adams, sergeant-at-arms.

A gift was presented to Mrs. R. B. Combs, who has been acting pianist in the absence of Rotarian Glover McGhee.

VENETIAN SWIMMING POOL OPENS JUNE 1

The handsome Venetian swimming pool, which is to be one of the features of Avondale estates, will be formally opened on June 1, it was announced Saturday afternoon.

Construction work of the pool has been practically completed, and the new pool will provide every possible convenience for bathers, including commodious bathhouses. The pool is surrounded by trees, giving it a natural woodland border. Appropriate ceremonies will be held at the opening.

Also during June, the exact date not having been set, Avondale stables will be opened to property owners in the big development. A dozen or more fine bred stable horses from the blue grass regions of Kentucky will be provided.

Announcement was made Saturday that paving of Avondale road had been completed and also paving of that part of Covington road that traverses the estates. Work on additional streets will be completed soon.

Every day now presents busy scenes at Avondale. There are hosts of visitors present, and crowds of workers are seen everywhere. Work already has started on new houses for Avondale estates, and others being erected by recent purchasers of lots. Sales are proceeding at a rate of more than $3,000,000 a year.

Downtown sales offices at 173-175 Peachtree street are still drawing large throngs. Of particular interest are 40 enlarged photographs in natural colors of Avondale homes and scenes. Artists have given them highest praise.

NON-FRATERNITY MEN OF EMORY TO MEET

Emory University, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—T. Felton Bowden, of McDonough, was elected president of the Emory non-fraternity student body for next year at a mass meeting of the non-fraternity men held here last night. Ed Adams, of Warrenton, and Sandy Glower, of Morven, were named, respectively, vice president and secretary-treasurer.

Other representatives to the non-fraternity council elected for next year were George K. Smith, of Carrollton; Roy L. Gardner, of Oglethorpe; Wm. H. H. Jones, of Hephzibah; Willard Hay, of Dallas; Huston Craige, of Meshoppen, Pa., and Wm. H. Gardner, of Sand Mountain, Ala.

Plans were made at this meeting for the annual non-fraternity reception to be held Monday, May 18. It will be held at the home of Mrs. P. S. Arkwright, and all students of the university, especially the non-fraternity men, are invited to be present.

Macon, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—W. W. Pittman, 86, a Confederate veteran, died here tonight at the home of his son, H. W. Pittman. He is survived by five sons, one of whom is P. W. Pittman, of Atlanta.

Stone Mountain Sculptor Visits Southern Expo

New York, May 16.—Augustus Lukeman, Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial sculptor, today visited the southern exposition and expressed his delight at the beauty of it.

"I came hoping to find inspiration and there certainly is plenty of it here," he said. "The show, indeed, is noteworthy. It is particularly commendable to observe how splendidly the various states and cities have made their displays interesting to New Yorkers."

Discussing the attractive art exhibition on the main floor, Mr. Lukeman said southern art constantly was improving and that producers of meritorious art in the south at last are being accorded the appreciation they merit.

Much of the art in various sections of the south, as represented by memorials and statues, particularly work executed 50 years ago, he said, is far from being all it should have been.

This often was due to the fact, he continued, that towns and communities entrusted works of art to the advice of local tombstone cutters and painters on a friendship and local pride basis, rather than on a basis of true art.

"Today, however, the south has excellent art schools and many who have studied thoroughly in these are turning out excellent work," he said. "It isn't necessary for an art student to go to Paris to learn how to draw or to model in clay. That's a lot of bunk. We have perfectly good schools in this country and the finest instructors."

The sculptor added that it was gratifying to note the great south, with its splendid culture, is going through a stage of re-awakening in fine arts. This will mean more and better art in the south in the years to come, he predicted.

ATHENS PLANS MEET OF COMMISSIONERS

Athens, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Plans for the annual convention of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia to open here May 20, are going forward here Tate Wright, clerk of the Clarke commissioners, announces. It is expected that the convention will be one of the best ever held by the association and entertainment features are thought to be very attractive.

Addresses by Governor Clifford Walker and other notables, as well as round table discussion of problems confronting the commissioners will feature the business sessions. The convention opens May 20.

According to Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention bureau, that city is seeking the 1926 convention. Several Atlantans are on the program for addresses.

The complete program follows:

Wednesday, May 20.

All delegates to register at court house. Address of Governor Walker. Annual meeting and dinner of executive committee to be held Wednesday evening.

Thursday, May 21.

8 A. M.—Convention called to order by President Heard.

Address of welcome on behalf of Clarke county—Judge Blanton Fortson, of the superior court, western circuit.

Address of welcome on behalf of Athens—Mayor O. H. Arnold, Jr.

Address of welcome on behalf of University of Georgia—Dr. Charles M. Snelling, dean of University of Georgia.

Response to addresses of welcome—Rhodes Browne, member of Muscogee county commissioners, Columbus.

"County Health Organization," by Dr. Thomas F. Abercrombie, state commissioner of health.

"Conservation of our Timber Resources," Bonnell H. Stone, president of the Georgia Forestry association.

Address by Dr. Charles M. Strahan, professor of civil engineering, University of Georgia.

"The Pay As You Go Plan," by Virlyn B. Moore, chairman of the Fulton county board of commissioners.

"Highway Bonds the Solution of the Good Roads Problem," by Arthur L. Brooke, Atlanta, chairman of the good roads committee of the Kiwanis club of Georgia.

Address of Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the state college of agriculture—to be delivered at Hardman hall.

On Thursday from 12 o'clock to 2:30 the delegates will be guests of the Clarke county commissioners at a luncheon to be staged at Camp Wilkins. Following this the delegates will witness an exposition of Georgia's educational resources at Hardman hall.

Automobile ride to points of interest in and around Athens and Clarke county.

No set program has been arranged for Thursday evening, but it is probable that a motion picture of interest to the county commissioners will be shown.

Friday, May 22.

Convention to be led at sunrise meeting by W. Tom Winn, of Atlanta, past president of the association.

8:30 to 11:30 A. M.—Informal session consisting mostly of "shop talk." Questions to be discussed relating to road work and highway program.

11:30 to 12:30—Reports of various committees; election of officers; selection of 1926 convention city. Adjournment.

1 P. M.—Delegates will be guests at a barbecue to be given at Woodruff hall, named in honor of "Kid" Woodruff, of Columbus, famous on the gridiron of the University of Georgia.

3 P. M.—Baseball game between University of Georgia and Oglethorpe university.

MILTONS LEAVE ON THREE-MONTH HONEYMOON TRIP

New York, May 16.—Mrs. David Meriwether Milton, the Abby Rockefeller that was, and her husband of two days, sailed for three months of honeymooning in Europe aboard the Paris of the French line this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the bride's parents, and Ivy Lee, who handles publicity for all the Rockefeller interests, from Standard Oil to weddings, saw the couple off to Europe in what was described as "the cheapest of the first-class cabins."

The French liné learned the bridal pair would be aboard their liner only a short time before it sailed, but there was time for an official to telephone the Miltons that a more suitable cabin could be had for $200 additional. The Miltons replied that their cabin, with private bath, which cost $908, was good enough for them.

There are no definite plans for the honeymoon, just day to day traveling as the mood strikes them, the groom told reporters.

DE LOACH JOINS STAFF OF FULTON NATIONAL

Officials of the Fulton National bank announced Saturday that W. R. DeLoach, well-known local man, had been added to the staff of that institution in an official capacity, his connection to be immediately effective.

Mr. DeLoach, who for the past six and one-half years has been associated with the Citizens and Southern bank, recently as assistant cashier, was connected with the Muscogee bank, in Columbus, before coming to Atlanta, and is well known throughout the state for his interest and activity in various banking institutions.

Locally, he has been a leader in the activities of the Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Banking, having served as first vice president. In the national organization also, he has been a foremost figure, and is now on the local chapter's board of governors.

Mr. DeLoach is also an active worker in the Robert Morris Associates, which is the bankers' group of the National Association of Credit Men.

A member of the Civitan club and other prominent civic bodies of the city, he has been closely affiliated with all the progressive movements in Atlanta since he has been a resident of the city and has a large circle of friends who are congratulating him on his new association.

Kiwanis Club Formed By Eatonton Citizens; Barbecue Is Served

Eatonton, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) Eatonton's recently organized Kiwanis club celebrated its charter presentation with a typical Georgia barbecue, at their weekly dinner Thursday at Kiwanis hall. Visitors were present from Macon, Milledgeville, Madison and Monticello.

The menu cards carried the admonition, "There is as much valor in feasting as in fighting." The hall was tastily decorated with club colors and flowers. More than 100 guests were served. John D. Patterson, president of the local club, was toastmaster.

After the barbecue the members sang "America," after which Kiwanian J. B. Duke delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the local club. Visiting Kiwanians were asked to stand and call their names. Mrs. T. Z. B. Overton and Mrs. S. A. Clarke sang a duet. Past District Governor P. T. Anderson, of Macon, delivered the charter to the local club in a happy speech. President Patterson in a short speech accepted the charter.

The meeting closed after a number of five-minute talks by the visiting Kiwanians.

The newly organized Kiwanis club here is expected to wield much influence throughout Putnam county, industrially and agriculturally.

Minister Blames Parents for Crime Of Modern Youth

New York, May 16.—American youths are making the United States the crime center of the world, but the fault largely lies with parents, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, told 1,000 persons who gathered this afternoon for the laying of the cornerstone of a $600,000 Y. M. C. A. building in Flushing.

"Most of the children who go to the devil today," Dr. Cadman said, "are being aided by fool parents. If I had the means and cooperation I would establish in every county a home for bringing up parents in the proper way. My one fear with regards to this plan is that there would be too many applicants.

"The youth of today is making the United States the crime center of the earth largely because of lack of proper discipline by parents." Dr. Cadman declared in urging parents not to "parade too many privileges before their children."

FORT VALLEY STUDENT HEADS EMORY COUNCIL

One of the largest, most outstanding developments in the entire state of Florida, having a record for both sales and development, has vacancies now for several big-caliber, self-reliant, ground salesmen. These vacancies have occurred because we are sending men from our present force to open agencies in the north. This opportunity will command the respect and attention of the highest type salesman of executive caliber because these men will have the same opportunity as above men.

This is a residential park development of over 4,000 acres, second to none in the entire country financially, with a development and sales program covering a period of over five years. This project is headed by one of the most outstanding men in the entire south, an Atlanta man.

We have 12 branch offices, bringing in prospects from all over Florida on our Pullman buses and are just now extending our operations out over the southern states and into the north. The men we select need not have had real estate selling experience, but they must be clean-cut, have real personality, at least some record of achievement in the selling or executive field and not afraid of a straight commission proposition. To get an interview he must sell himself by letter first. Give address and phone number. Address Box F-497, care of The Atlanta Constitution.

ADAIR'S SPECIAL LIST

No. 25 Avery Drive—Ansley Park

WE are pleased to be able to offer to our customers this Ansley Park bungalow at a price under $9,500; there are very few bungalows in this most desirable locality that can be bought at such a figure. It will not take much cash to start off the purchase; good terms can be arranged. The place is now vacant and is in perfect condition and ready to move in tomorrow.

No. 119 Adair Avenue

AN excellent home of the colonial bungalow type; located in the Virginia avenue section, having the advantage of being near one of Atlanta's finest grammar schools, and also in walking distance of the Senior High school. This house is clean and fresh looking; it, is a livable place; there are six rooms (three bedrooms), a large living room, dining room, breakfast room, bathroom and kitchen. We are making a drive on this house in order to sell it. Price $8,750, on good terms. Reduction for cash.

No. 102 S. McDaniel Street

THIS is a cottage containing five rooms and bath; lot is 52x150; there is no loan on the property and we can sell it on good terms. We want $250 cash, 30 monthly notes of $25 each and a coupon note of $1,500 due within five years. We recommend this place as a moderate-priced home suitable for some rent payer to make his monthly payments count on a home purchase.

No. 139 Logan Street

THIS house has six rooms and bath; the location being between Broyles and Grant streets; lot is about 40x150; has a good front yard and a large back yard; house is now vacant and ready to move in; there is no loan. Price $3,000 on term payments or will make a bargain price of $2,500 spot cash.

No. 132 Tift Avenue

THIS house has five rooms and bathroom; it is located on a lot 48x152; in the vicinity of Stewart avenue; there is a garage on the lot. We can make price $3,750 with a cash payment of $500; monthly notes $25. House now rents for $35 a month.

No. 239 East Fifth Street

THIS six-room brick bungalow is near Durant Place; there are three bedrooms. It has a good furnace; lot is 50x120; gas range and all shades go with the house. We are making a special effort to sell this place for a non-resident owner. Price $8,000. Terms can be arranged.

No. 292 N. Moreland Avenue

THIS is near North avenue, an excellent residential section; it is within two blocks of Druid Hills and convenient to the Inman Park store district, commonly known as Little Five Points; lot faces east, 50 feet wide and over 200 feet back; house is bungalow style, having six rooms and bath. It is the only house anywhere in that section that can be bought for our price. $6,800.

No. 134 East Avenue

A LARGE residence in the Boulevard section; has 10 rooms; a two-story brick and stucco house in a good home section not too far out. We are offering this place for $8,500. You cannot buy another 10-room house in as good a section of Atlanta for the money.

No. 706 East Point Avenue

WE are pleased to offer this neat and substantial cottage in Atlanta's flourishing suburb of East Point; lot is 75x190; house has six rooms and bath. It has a $2,000 first loan and $1,000 in monthly notes against it; total indebtedness $3,000; value of owner's equity is $3,000, making a total price of $6,000. We can trade the equity for a city or suburban lot.

No. 316 Benson Street

THIS is near the car line in the southern portion of Decatur; a two-story frame house having eight rooms and bath; good furnace; lot is 75x195. We offer this good house for $5,500. You will not find any other eight-room house so well located offered at this figure.

No. 241 North Moreland Avenue

THIS two-story house has eight rooms and two baths; all rooms are very large; house is well planned and well built; lot is 52x100; there is a first mortgage loan at 6% in favor of the Equitable Life Insurance Co., three years to run; amount originally $6,000, reduced by part payment of $5,800. We have a special price of $10,500 in order to get the equity out in cash. $4,750 will buy the place subject to the loan.

No. 100 Briarcliff Place

WE like to recommend a good house having merit in its design, construction and in its location. This is a two-story brick structure with eight rooms and bath; Holland furnace; lot is 50x170; close to Briarcliff Road. Price $12,500.

No. 27 Durant Place

A TWO-STORY frame duplex dwelling, consisting of two separate apartments, each with five rooms and bath; one apartment is now vacant, the other occupied; we believe that we are giving our customers the benefit of a good price reduction in this house. We know of no other duplex dwelling in that locality that can be bought at the same price, $8,500. There is no loan. We can arrange terms to suit any responsible buyer.

No. 606 Washington Street

THIS two-story eight-room house is near Atlanta avenue; lot is 50x150; it is in a substantial home-owning community; we get listings of eight-room houses in this locality at prices ranging from $8,000 to $10,000. There is one way to sell a house and sell it quickly; that is to make the price so that the listing will stand out. We have decided to price this house at $5,000 and give Adair customers the benefit of the reduction. There is no loan. We can make good terms to a responsible buyer.

Evans Drive—Fort McPherson

THIS is a two-story house, having seven rooms and bath, situated on a lot 50x200, at the southwest corner of Evans Drive and Mickleberry street. It is two blocks from the East Point car line and on one of the prominent streets in the Fort McPherson section. Price $6,000.

No. 60 Rose Circle

NOTICE the good-looking houses on this street, which is near the Junior High School in West End. Every house on it is new and modern with good families living in them. No. 60 has a Prudential loan of $2,375, also 26 monthly notes of $30 each. We can make price $5,750 provided we can get practically all cash for this owner's interest or equity.

No. 115 Greenwood Avenue

THIS two-story eight-room house is located on a corner lot, two blocks from Boulevard; house is in good condition. We are offering it at the reduced price of $6,500 on account of the owner being transferred to another city. Can make a special price for cash or large cash payment.

No. 263 Clarke-Street

CORNER of Kelly street; five-room house on level lot; side street is paved with concrete, which is paid for; no assessments or bonds to assume; property is clear of encumbrances. We can make price $3,500 and give some terms.

No. 386 Central Avenue

THIS good-looking cottage is located between Richardson and Crumley streets, in easy walking distance of the center of the city; has seven rooms and bath. Rents for $45 a month. Price $3,750.

No. 254 East Linden Street

COLORED renting property located between Hunt and Nutting streets; lot is 58x85; contains a two-story frame apartment house accommodating four tenants at a monthly rate of $22.50 each, making the total annual rental income of $1,080. Each apartment has three rooms and bath, electric lights, hot and cold water. Price $7,350.

No. 458 South Boulevard

WE are putting this house on our special sale list because it belongs to a non-resident property owner who has been renting the house out and now wants to sell. This owner would like to buy a home in his own city and we have instructions to offer the South Boulevard place at a price of $7,850.

THE LONGING FOR NEW HOMES

LED the covered wagons westward. The pioneers of the 40's were willing to take all the hazards of the trans-continental trail—Indians, Mighty Deserts, Rivers—for the sake of the new country they were to call their own.

TODAY we honor their memory, because we know that not only did they brave the courage of their vision—but their vision was right.

HOMES THAT MAKE PEOPLE HAPPY ARE WORTH LIVING FOR.

EVERY effort that we make to secure the right sort of homes for our clients brings its own multiplied rewards.

KNOW ATLANTA HOMES

¶ Out of the eight outstanding show places on Pace's Ferry Road, five are hollow tile, concrete homes.

¶ Of the three palatial, gorgeous residences on Ponce de Leon Avenue, two are of this hollow tile, concrete construction.

¶ Hollow tile and concrete is not new construction. It is the oldest known form of permanent building. However, heretofore it has been used only by the rich and for office buildings, skyscrapers and big halls and public building.

¶ We are building small homes at moderate prices with this material.

¶ We are the first to bring this permanent House Eternal to the "home folks."

¶ Why build three or four houses in your life when one will do?

¶ Why move the children around from place to place during their growing life like nomads? We have long ago ceased to be Indian tribes!

Summer Home Lots, $20 Will Be $100 June 2d

Advertising prices on Mountain Park camp lots will be off June 2d. On and after that date there will be but two prices of lots, $200 for lake front and $100 for those near lakes. We still have 400 beautiful lots at $20 during this month. Ride out today and see them or call us and salesmen will take you any time during the week. Trips at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Mountain Park is the most famous summer resort in Georgia. 700 acres of land, 2,000 lots: 50 acres set aside for tennis, basket ball, baseball and other playgrounds. 100 acres for golf. 25 acres wooded parks. Five lakes, making 125 acres of pure mountain spring water. Garret Lake, 35 acres, now ready for use. Mirimichi Lake, 5,400 feet long with water 41 feet deep, will be filled by June 15th. 55 acres of water in this lake, water to be turned into it next Saturday.

Lots we offer at $20 average 50x150 in size. There are 14 springs in the whole subdivision, one mineral. Land is beautiful hills and valleys, lots covered with magnificent trees of every description. Just 26 miles from Atlanta, go through Roswell. Salesmen on property at all times, or call us for appointment. Special attention to those buying by mail. AUCTION

THE Oglesby Realty Auction Company, of Atlanta, presents the following facts for the consideration of the people of this city and the South, and we have the records and the facts to back up every word of this statement.

WE have sold a larger acreage in Georgia than all of our competitors combined.

WE have conducted more successful sales and secured better average prices for the property sold than any other auction concern doing business here!

WE have held a greater number of successful sales in Georgia than all other land auction companies in Georgia combined, and we have a larger list of satisfied patrons than all other auctioneers!

WE have records and facts in our files to prove every statement made in the lines above, which we will be pleased to produce for the inspection of any one interested in the sale of real estate by auction.

WE are one of the oldest, if not the oldest, auction company using modern methods for selling real estate; we have the largest staff of salesmen and workers, and our methods are the best that can be devised for selling real estate.

BY the auction method the buyer and seller are brought face to face in the open, and the buyer is privileged to purchase the property on the block for his own price. Everything is open and above board and both parties to the transaction are given the squarest deal possible.

WE have letters of testimony paying the highest tributes to our fairness and efficiency, and we can produce statements that can show our company to be the most effective land auction concern in the Southern States.

WE do not make any idle claims for our methods, but we are ready and willing to produce facts with which to prove what we say.

THOSE who have land to be either subdivided or sold as a whole should get in touch with us at once, and negotiate with us for its sale.

Believing in Atlanta and in Georgia Is Not New to the Atlanta Real Estate Board

SPEAKING before the Georgia Manufacturers Association on the problems and opportunities of Georgia, Eugene R. Black declared that the business men of the state must take more interest in public affairs, help to revise tax laws, strengthen the educational system of the state and help to develop the natural resources of the state.

He declared the prosperity of North Carolina, which is outstanding, was due to a sound governmental policy of school maintenance, road building and industrial encouragement. But with all of North Carolina's well-deserved prosperity, five hundred progressive farmers have moved from that state to Georgia to take up the cultivation of tobacco. Georgia's advantages as a tobacco growing state have been properly exploited. Georgia offers many other specialized opportunities of equal merit and other hundreds of progressive citizens can be brought here.

The Atlanta Real Estate Board is squarely behind every sound movement that has for its purpose a better and greater Georgia. It is heartily in favor of tax legislation that will provide ample state and municipal revenue, but which will be so distributed that it will not be an excessive burden upon industry, commerce or agriculture. It is in favor of presenting the industrial, commercial and agricultural advantages of Georgia in the same careful, intelligent, conservative and systematic manner that a successful manufacturer presents the superior merits of the products of his factory. It is in favor of any program that will help to develop any section of the state. Atlanta's own prosperity is to a large extent dependent upon the prosperity of the territory from which it draws its trade.

The Atlanta Real Estate Board is an organization of firms, individuals and corporations engaged in the business of buying and selling real estate. Its membership is a carefully selected one and its rigidly enforced code of ethics assures absolutely fair treatment of both buyer and seller. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board have the exclusive right, in Atlanta, to use the word "REALTOR" in connection with their business. This word is your protection.

Georgia Wins Three Out of Four From Jackets

Chambers Holds Jackets As Mates Slug to Victory, 6 to 4, in Final Contest

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

With Andy Chambers displaying superb form on the mound and with his teammates backing him up in almost flawless style, the third and deciding game of the Tech-Georgia series Saturday went to the cohorts of the Red and Black, 6 to 4, and soon after the last out, the cool evening breezes drifting this way from the Classic City bore faintly the triumphant chimes of the historic old chapel bell, as Georgia freshmen began their all-night vigil.

To every one of the 8,000 fans present there was an iridescent glamor connected with the game, the tense moments, hilarious enthusiasm that broadcasted to the world that Tech and Georgia, the leading institutions of the state and keenest of rivals, were tied up in a contest.

Ever since the two institutions severed relations in 1919, games of major importance have often been referred to as "typical Tech-Georgia battles." Those who have become intimately connected with sports since that time and who were present at the games in Atlanta, may easily see the significance.

Although the rivalry was the keenest possible and fans were delirious at several stages of proceedings, the best of sportsmanship predominated at all times. Before the game the Tech band rent the air with "Glory to old Georgia" and the Georgia band reciprocated.

Solemn Moments.

The most impressive moment of the afternoon was when the Yellow Jacket band struck the solemn chords of the Georgia Tech "Alma Mater." The Georgia team was in the field at the time and every player stood with heads uncovered, facing the music. It was likewise solemn and almost sacred when Georgia's "Alma Mater" was played and sung a few minutes later.

It was not "grandstand sportsmanship," but just natural. During brief intermissions when play was called for one reason or another, Tech players were seen joking and conversing with Georgia men; Georgia players were swapping repartee and pats on the back with Tech men. The teams were locked in combat. Georgia won, but no one was murdered and no shower of pop bottles or fist fights were seen during the afternoon.

Chambers Was Right.

To return to the game, it was won simply because Andy Chambers was right and because his teammates were behind him to perfection—save for a blow-up in the eighth inning—and the Georgia bats were working.

Johnny Snead started on the mound for the Jackets, but it was not his day. Middlebrooks, coming up as the first batter during the game, drew a pass to first. Satlof, following, waited until the count was three and two against him before slamming one past the race track in left field for a clean homer. He reached the plate standing up as the ball was returned to infield.

All the while Chambers was master of his end of the situation. It took Tech exactly three innings to bat around, and only 12 men faced the Red and Black ace during the first four innings. The only man to get a hit during these frames was Fred Merkle and he was thrown out trying to steal second. Georgia was also giving a wonderful exhibition of work afield and seemed as though the customers were in for a terribly one-sided battle, especially when Georgia scored two more in the fourth.

This was done after Moore had grounded out and Tully singled to center. Arenowitch grounded to Denicke, who threw wild to second in an effort to catch Tully and make a double play. The ball rolled to the outfield and Tully went to third, Arenowitch pulling up at second. Johnson grounded out, but Andy Chambers singled to left, scoring both Tully and Arenowitch.

Snead Retires.

Georgia was having things her way. In the fifth, with two down, J. D. Thomason singled to right and scored when Moore doubled in the same territory. Tully walked and Snead retired from the Tech mound in favor of Enloe, who walked Arenowitch and struck out Johnson with the bases full. Enloe's work was a gratifying improvement over that of his predecessor and the game took on new color.

In Tech's half of the same inning—the fifth—Angley doubled. It was the first time a Tech runner had reached second during the game. Wycoff grounded out to short, but Merkle doubled to center, scoring Angley. Merkle scored on Morgan's two-bagger to center.

Georgia's last tally came in the bloody seventh. Tully lived on Reeves' error and was sacrificed to second by Arenowitch. Johnson flied out, but Chambers again scored Tully with a double to center.

Chambers' Bat Effective.

It might also be truthfully said that the bat of Chambers had as much to do with the Georgia victory as his pitching. Twice he came up with men on and sent them across, his single and double accounting for three runs, more than the margin of victory.

The last scoring was done in the eighth, when Georgia's defense momentarily blew up. Enloe singled to left. Denicke grounded to Satlof, who threw wild trying to catch Enloe at second. The ball rolled to Arenowitch, who fell down when trying to retrieve it and then made a wild throw to the plate. Both Tech runners scored while the ball was making its journey around the park, but an argument and ground rules brought Denicke back to third to wait until Wilder hit a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Denicke with the last run of the game.

Jackets Die Hard.

The close of the game found the Jackets dying hard and with their boots on. Reeves, Morgan and Enloe occupied the paths with one down, but Chambers once more tightened up like a clam. He struck Denicke out and Wilder grounded to Middlebrooks to end the game.

No one man got over two hits during the afternoon. Those getting two were Richardson, Moore, Johnson, Chambers, Merkle and Reeves. Merkle turned in the best average, with two out of three. The home run off Satlof's bat was the longest of the day, while doubles were obtained by Angley, Merkle, Morgan, Reeves, Moore and Chambers.

Not only was the contest the last of the season, but it marked the final athletic contest of any description seven fine athletes should play for their schools. Four from Georgia and three from Tech are leaving.

Joe Palmisano's daddy has occupied a seat at Grant field every time Tech played in Atlanta for the past four years. Saturday he made his last journey for that purpose. The next time Captain Joe dons a baseball uniform it will be issued by Tris Speaker. His next game will be for the Indians. Skinny Denick, be for the Indians. Skinny Denicke. Enloe have also played their last for Tech.

Bill Munday Leaving.

J. D. Thomason, Andy Chambers, Middlebrooks and William Chenault Munday, Jr., will play no more for Georgia. It will be hard to think of a Georgia athletic team and leave Bill out of the picture. He has been traveling with teams as correspondent—when not playing—for many years, and they will miss him over at Athens next year.

Although Tech went down, the Jackets were not crushed. A yellow-topped freshman was heard to yell to a freshman wearing a red and black cap:

"We'll get you in football."

"Try and get us," echoed the red and blacker.

STATE TRACK MEET SET FOR MONDAY

The track teams of Tech, Georgia, Mercer, Emory and Oglethorpe will compete for honors in the State Invitation Track Meet to be held at Emory tomorrow, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. As this is the only state meet held in Georgia during the year, the school winning it has a clear claim to the track supremacy of the state.

This year will mark Mercer's first entry in the meet, and its showing will be watched with especial interest by Mercer supporters.

Events to be run off include the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, the low hurdles, the high hurdles, the shot put, the discus throw, the javelin throw, the 440-yard dash, the half-mile run, the mile run, the two-mile run, the high jump, the broad jump, the pole vault, the mile walk and the two-mile relay.

Georgia won the state meet last year, Tech having won it for the three preceding years. It was inaugurated four years ago, and is held at Emory every year. It, together with the state tennis tournament, is one of the four intercollegiate sporting events in which Emory is allowed to enter a team, the other three being Tech relays, the A. A. U. track and a dual meet.

BOWEN DRAWS WITH TENNER

Savannah, Ga., May 16.—Lukie Tenner, Southern junior lightweight champion, was held to an exciting draw by Andy Bowen, Washington contender, here last night in a 12-round bout. Although the ring decision was called a draw, the popular verdict went to Bowen, as did newspaper decisions. Tenner, however, maintained the American Legion belt and his title. Weights were announced: Tenner 127 1-2; Bowen 131 1-2.

'BAMA LAYS CLAIM TO TITLE

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., May 16.—(Special.)—With 13 victories and only three defeats to her record for this year, Alabama insists on being given serious consideration for the southern conference championship. And to listen to folks at the Capstone, if they don't give the rag to Alabama, whom will they give it to?

Maybe they don't keep up with everything that happens, but the Capstoners believe that their two defeats of Georgia, their split with Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech—in the face of the first Georgia-Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt-Tech series—is enough to give Alabama the coveted dish. And Georgia is apt to win one or more games against Tech this week-end.

Not content with this claim, Alabama has scheduled a game against Vanderbilt, to be played here during commencement. Some may say that this is a bad risk to such a claim to the championship as Alabama has, especially since Vanderbilt beat Alabama once this season, but the alumni have been clamoring for a game and think of what victory will mean—the championship, without much dispute.

Alabama has three victories against Mississippi A. & M., four against Kentucky, two against 'Ole Miss, two against Georgia, one against Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech to her credit. The Crimsons have also beaten Howard twice. Birmingham-Southern twice, S. P. U., Illinois twice, Ohio State twice, and the Birmingham Barons. Two defeats by the Barons and one by the Cleveland Indians are the only defeats of any kind suffered except the losses to Mississippi A. & M., Tech and Vanderbilt.

Coach Wade stated Tuesday that he thought Alabama would be well considered before the championship would be awarded to another team this year. Of course, a defeat by Vanderbilt may change the aspect of things, but no one at the Capstone thinks Vanderbilt will beat Alabama.

Tuscaloosa folks are preparing to make the affair a gala occasion. All stores will be closed that afternoon, special trains from all parts of the state will be operated to Tuscaloosa, and hundreds of alumni are expected to be present. The alumni banquet will be held immediately after the game.

Alabama has two championships of the three already decided this year. She copped the football championship and the golf team brought home team honors for its second consecutive year. The track championship has not been decided, but Alabama does not fare so well in track. Basketball went somewhere else, and now baseball. Where will it go if it doesn't come to the Capstone is what the Capstoners are asking.

NEW RELAY RECORD MADE

Manhattan, Kansas, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—A new world's record for the interscholastic 440 yards relay was established by Wichita (Kan.) High school in the annual Missouri Valley high school relay carnival for today. That time was 44.9 seconds.

The former record of 45.1 seconds was established at the recent Drake relays by Northeast High school, of Kansas City, which placed second in the race today. Junction City, Kan., was third, and Hutchinson, Kan., fourth.

SPORT SPECULATION

by George Congdon

A Romance of the Turf.
Jim Bagby Stars.
Georgia the Winner.

A ROMANCE of the race track was written Saturday at Louisville. It was written in the soft loam of Churchill Downs by the iron shoes of Flying Ebony, literally and figuratively a dark horse, but back of the pressing corded, quivering muscles of aristocratic horseflesh was the master of that race, Earl Sande, America's premier jockey, who barely beat death under the wire less than a year ago at Saratoga.

Incidentally, Sande Saturday clinched all his claims to the title of America's premier jockey, for he is the first man to ride to victory twice in Kentucky's storied classic in the 51 years it has drawn the cream of America's sporting society to form a glittering, golden border for the "in home"—it might easily be called that—of this greatest of living, breathing, pulsing games.

* * * *

BUT the romance of that race Saturday! Even from a distance of hundreds of miles, it is gripping. It was to save the life of Jockey Benny Breuning that Sande rode to his nearly-fatal fall at Saratoga last year. Then Sande picked Quatrain, by the same sire as Black Gold, as his favorite for the 51st renewal of the Kentucky derby, the event in which he rode Zev to a crashing victory in 1923. He offered Breuning $2,000 in addition to the $5,000 jockey's purse, if he won, to ride Quatrain.

Breuning owes his present good health, if not his life, to Sande, but he refused. Then it was announced that Sande would climb astride Flying Ebony, considered an outsider. He won. Quatrain, with Breuning up, finished a miserable twelfth. Maybe the finish would have been the same had Sande ridden Quatrain. It's hard to believe it, though, for Sande is a master of his art, if ever a jockey became that. A horse can run so fast, no faster, but we doubt if there's another jockey living who could have honeyed Flying Ebony to victory in that last dash with Captain Hal.

WELL, Jim Bagby done it! The old-timer—he hasn't white whiskers, but isn't a spring chicken as pitchers of baseball run—did something for the Crackers yesterday for which they should be eternally thankful. He gave them the best pitching they have had this season. Jim Bagby has a permanent berth around these parts if he'll continue to throw them by the boys the way he did yesterday. His record for the day looks preciously like the box scores in which old Benny Karr figured last year, and still is figuring this year, but as a Cleveland Indian.

Notice also that Nick Cullop is still on the warpath. Thursday Nick was tied with Haas, of Birmingham, for the Southern league home run record for the season. Friday Nick slipped one into Darktown for a round trip. That gave him a one-run jump on Haas. Yesterday he came along with that other shove that went clean over. That gave him nine homers in a month and a clear lead on the sluggers of the Martin society. Nick isn't fanning as frequently as he did, either. In short, Nick is getting right.

GEORGIA is in much the position of Flying Ebony this morning. The Bulldogs were rated by a good many to win three out of the four games from Tech, but there were just as many who are moaning this morning that Georgia sort of upset the dope Saturday. The games here gave a brilliant close to the college baseball season. It's a shame there weren't fewer errors, though. As college interest goes, the games were splendid. As exhibitions of baseball for the uninterested spectator, they were right miserable.

Maybe that's the reason college baseball, as a rule, doesn't hold a candle to the professional game. Professional ball players are in the game much as one goes into the banking business or starts up a grocery store. The case of Bill Doak the other day is a key to the question. "Baseball was a business with me," was Bill's reply to his old teammates, when they pleaded with him to come back. Cold calculation makes baseball a great game to watch. Effervescent college spirit doesn't make a game unless your whole heart is with one team or the other.

OUR boy, Clarence, always the sheik, handsome if nothing else, draws the package of groundglass chewing gum. Last night he dashed to the phone to answer a call he thought was one of his lady friends. "Who won the derby?" the voice at the other end asked, evidently. Dismayed, the closest Clarence came to "Flying Ebony" was the right short answer, "Flyin' Jinny!"

Colorful Crowd Witnesses Sande's Masterful Race

BY HOMER C. GEORGE.

Louisville, Ky., May 16.—(Special.)—It is a simple story—the running of the 51st Kentucky derby. Too much speed on the part of the winner, Flying Ebony, the eastern colt from the barn of Gifford A. Cochran, who also furnished the winner of the Preakness in Coventry. That's all there is to it except the excuses to be offered for several of the others who might have had a chance except for a jam at the first turn. But even so, the victory of Flying Ebony was well earned and true, for he is a great colt. Any Kentucky derby winner is great.

In addition to the honors which naturally fall to the winner, honors of the superior sort go to Earl Sande, who rode a masterful race in bringing home the bacon.

Running one of his really good races and fighting it out in the stretch like a really good colt, Captain Hal, the most talked-of colt in the race, aside from Quatrain, was second and Son of John, more or less an outsider, was third.

Lead All Way.

The three were in front all the way, Sande taking the lead for about three-quarters and then relinquishing it to Captain Hal, but always hanging close to the latter. Son of John was leading the others all the distance and thus the three escaped all interference and had a more or less easy thing of the contest.

It was a great day at Churchill Downs. A crowd estimated at 50,000 was on hand and this is probably the biggest crowd which ever saw a derby here despite the estimates in other years running as high as 75,000. It has been said that only 34,000 could be handled in the stands and fully 16,000 more covered the lawns, the infield and elsewhere. It was as colorful and brilliant as the other derby crowds, national figures from all walks of life being on hand with the ladies, God bless them, looking more lovely and more spectacular than ever in their variegated colors. From the infield the stand must have looked like a kaleidoscopic picture of a futurist artist. And that's that.

The derby was the fifth race on the card and long before it was called the crowds overflowed into the center field from the stands and clubhouse, the lawns were packed and the betting rings were places of suffocation. The day had started with a light sprinkle and then turned beautiful and then when the bugle sounded Old Jupiter Pluvius cut loose and the parade of the derby aspirants was in rain. To the post they went and for four minutes Starter Hamilton and his assistants worked with the 20 starters until he finally had them right.

They're Off!

Then came the shout which reverberated almost into the center of Louisville. "They're off!" Down the home stretch the field came with every jockey fighting for a position. Flying Ebony and Captain Hal had the speed of the party and they passed the stand in front. So they went around the first turn where all but the three leaders suffered a lot of bumping and jamming. Into the back stretch Sande led the field with Flying Ebony. Captain Hal was right at his saddle girth, with Sir John a length and a half back. The others were in all kinds of jams and trouble and were strung out many lengths. Sande let Captain Hal take the lead but he stuck close to him and thus they made the turns and started down the stretch. Here Sande cut loose.

Flying Ebony moved to the front and possibly bumped Captain Hal but the latter stuck to his job and down the stretch gave a fine fight. Finally he began to tire a bit while Flying Ebony came along to win handily by a half length. Son of John was gaining on Captain Hal but could not quite get up and the latter was second with Son of John third. Two length back of the latter was Single Foot, a good colt which showed a nice effort, in fourth place, with Step Along next and Bud Fisher's Swope sixth. Back in the ruck was Quatrain, the favorite, who broke a bit slowly, got into two jams and could never place himself as a contender.

It was a great race, won by a great colt, and there you are.

MICHIGAN WINS FROM ILLINOIS

Champaign, Ill., May 16.—Michigan tracksters won eleven first to nose out Illinois, 68 1-3 to 65 2-3 in a dual meet between the two universities for the first time since 1898. The Illini had not been defeated in a dual meet since 1920. Unfavorable weather harassed the athletes, so that no records were even equalled.

EBONY WINS KENTUCKY CLASSIC

every bit as black in color as this year's winner.

The race, witnessed by from 70,000 to 80,000 spectators, the greatest throng that ever witnessed a horse race in America, was decided under highly dramatic conditions. After a day of glorious sunshine, black clouds suddenly gathered in the southwest, threatening to deluge every second. When the officials saw the approach of the impending storm, it was hurriedly decided to advance the post time 20 minutes in an attempt to beat the oncoming downpour.

Shower Falls At Start.

About two minutes before the 20 thoroughbreds were lined up at the barrier for their start, a brisk shower started falling, driving the thousands of gaily attired spectators to the shelter of the already packed stands and betting sheds beneath. Then the shower suddenly ceased, but the instant the race was finished a heavy downpour came, soaking thousands.

Costly wearing apparel, designed along graceful lines, lost its grace, colors literally and actually ran riot, while the wearers, thoroughly miserable in the face of the pitiless downpour, scampered for shelter that was nowhere available.

Thousands of beautifully gowned women had to stand and face the music of the drenching rain, their fashionable creations drooping and ruined, and their clothes clinging to their rain-soaked bodies.

Society Leaders Drenched.

Leaders of society, gowned in creations designed by artists in Paris and New York, sat in the choice box seats out in the open, without the protection of the roof of the club house. When the storm broke they fled for shelter. Tears streaming shamelessly down the faces of many showed that the joy of a Derby day had turned to sadness.

As the rain fell down in sheets, the downpour was accompanied by flashes of lighting as vivid as the colorings of the costumes, and by rumblings of thunder heavier than the hoof beats of a thousand flying horses. The horses were called to the post, but the women were no longer interested. What they wanted more than anything else in the world was shelter and they began hunting for it, abandoning stately grace for speed.

Gowns that were a riot of squares, flowers, dots and other designs, quickly lost their shape, flowers faded, dots enlarged irregularly and the whole mass of colors ran down, completing the discomfort of the wearers by turning light-colored stockings into a conglomeration of pink, red, blue, black and blue, and every other color. Leghorn hats, pink milan hats, large white felt hats, and just hats, drooped; flimsy dresses clung closely to their humiliated wearers and fancy shoes soaked up a deal of water.

Clothes Worth Thousands Ruined.

When the rain finally ceased, it was all too late—thousands of dollars' worth of beautiful clothing had been ruined and thousands of equally beautiful women were miserable.

The race was a traditional struggle between east and west. The triumphant Flying Ebony, one of 11 eastern thoroughbreds in the 20 engaged in the contest, is eastern only in ownership. He was bred in old Kentucky, and is by The Finn-Princess Mary. The Finn was father of Zev, winner of the 1923 derby, and like Zev, Flying Ebony also was supposed to be only a sprinter. He had never raced over a route longer than six furlongs, and as a two-year-old won two out of five starts. He finished third once and fourth on the other two occasions.

Second Victory For Cochran.

Flying Ebony's victory gave the colt's owner, Gifford A. Cochran, his second turf triumph within ten days, as his Coventry won the $50,000 Preakness a week ago yesterday. A. A. Kaiser, of Louisville, owner of Captain Hal, which finished second, took a chance and both lost and won. The owner of Captain Hal, a comparatively poor man, had refused offers ranging from $50,000 upwards for the Son of Black Toney-Waverring, in order to start him in the derby. He lost the race, but he won $6,000 as second place money, and had the distinction of seeing his Derby candidate, the only one of the heavy favorites, to finish in the money.

The masterful ride of Sande undoubtedly was one of the principal reasons for Flying Ebony's triumph. When the barrier was sprung, the crafty Sande got Flying Ebony away in fourth place and quickly shot into the lead, holding it until the finish, except for a few seconds between the half and three-quarters poles, when Captain Hal displaced him. But when the mile post was reached, Sande had Flying Ebony back in the lead by half a length, and he clung tenaciously to this advantage.

Sande Begged for Mount.

It is strange to relate that Sande, who only recently returned to the saddle, after recovering from a broken leg, which doctors had told him would end his turf career, actually went from stable to stable, begging for a mount before being granted the privilege of riding Flying Ebony. He attempted to buy for $2,000 the mount on Quatrain from Jockey Breuning only last Thursday. After failing to gain a mount on one or more favored thoroughbreds, he succeeded in persuading Owner Cochran to let him sit astride Flying Ebony.

Sande had piloted Zev to victory in the 1923 derby and he was eager to participate in the 1925 classic to convince his friends that his distressing accident of last fall had not dulled his racing ability. Like Flying Ebony, Sande felt he was an outcast in today's race. Astride the Cochran colt, Sande was a soothing, sympathetic, encouraging comrade, accompanying Flying Ebony on his mighty mission—the mission of justifying faith of the few who believed in his ability to triumph.

Tribute to Trainer Duke.

Flying Ebony's race was a tribute to William Duke as a conditioner of horses. Duke only recently returned to America after spending several years in France as a trainer. Flying Ebony was perfectly trained. The time, 2:07 3-5, is comparatively slow for the derby, but the track was sufficiently sloppy to make footing treacherous, and Sande, who made his own pace most of the time, knew what it was all about all of the time. The fractional time was 23 4-5, 47 3-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 3-5 and 2:07 3-5.

Twenty-five horses were named to start over-night for today's race, but five were withdrawn before midafternoon. Reputation, the first colt to be entered in the derby, was the first to be scratched. The other withdrawals were Chantey, Reminder, King Nadi and Wasso.

Cochran Almost Drops Cup.

Cochran, the owner of Flying Ebony, together with Trainer Duke, witnessed the triumph of their horse. When they were called into the judges' stand after the race, with Sande, to receive the tributes of victory, Cochran was emotional, Duke wildly excited, and Sande too happy to talk. Mr. Cochran was handed a derby gold cup, valued at $5,000, by Senator Johnson M. Camden, president of the Kentucky Jockey club. He almost dropped it, but Sande steadied his hand. Then Duke came up. He, too, was asked by Cochran to hold the cup.

"What cup?" he asked.

Sande smiled a boyish grin, Cochran's face beamed and Duke was happy as they stood there, receiving the tributes that always go to derby winners. Cochran said that Sande would be rewarded handsomely for his ride, which was taken to mean that he would receive more than $5,000, the usual fee for piloting a derby winner. He said he was tremendously proud of Sande, the horse and Duke, the trainer.

Famous Jockey Takes Long Chance at Curve To Beat Captain Hal in Classic

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., May 16.—There are people in Louisville tonight who will tell you about a boy who could straddle a state fair hog, purr compliments in its ear, inspire it with confidence and make the beast outhike a motorcycle.

This young fellow whom they speak of so highly is Earl Sande, a bony little shad with silken yellow hair, who comes from Idaho. He won the Kentucky derby again this afternoon, bringing home a black colt named Flying Ebony from Gifford Cochran's stalls, while the horse he wanted to ride was nibbling grass somewhere far in the rear. You may recall that the other night Sande went to Frederick Johnson, the man who owns Quatrain, and begged him for the mount on the favorite. Sande, you remember, was told that the mount had been promised to his friend, Benny Breuning, so he offered Breuning $2,000 of his own money and promised him the winning jockey's purse of $5,000 in case he should win, if Breuning would let him take the saddle.

The deal fell through and Sande was on the curb looking for a camel, if nothing better offered, for he was game enough to mount the best available steed. He didn't do so badly when he finally made the deal with Cochran the night before the race. And when the horses went to the post after a sudden downpour of rain that made the going slightly soggy and upset everyone's plans he was on his way to outride Breuning in a most humiliating way.

Quatrain Out of It.

Quatrain never got up steam. He broke about nineteenth in a field of 20 colts, got into a pocket and lagged around the mile and a quarter track to finish twelfth, while the little black horse fought it out with Captain Hal, a Kentucky colt. It was a personal matter between Sande and Jake Heupel—Flying Ebony and Captain Hal.

Sande outrode Heupel and Flying Ebony outran Captain Hal. Some of the people in the tremendous throng on the lawns and in the stands who had their spyglasses on the leading pair at the far turn said they saw Sande's horse bump Heupel's when Sande had to take Flying Ebony very wide on the turn to go around Captain Hal. He may have. Heupel certainly carried Sande wide and Earl went around him with as little to spare as possible.

Captain Hal, who is owned by A. A. Kiser, a Kentucky horseman, had just a nose in front of Son of John, a Kentucky-bred horse in the colors of Sheriff Dan Scott, which was third.

The time was 2 minutes, 7 3-5 seconds. The mud on the track probably slowed up the horses.

Three Commanded Race.

These three horses commanded the race from the break. Flying Ebony was off in front as the barrier snapped and when Captain Hal came along from his position about one length behind to challenge for the lead Sande eased off and let Heupel make the pace. It was one of those daring moves which are so smart when they succeed and so stupid when they fail. Sande's horse had enough left to overtake Captain Hal when the time came, but it took a desperate dash when Captain Hal helped himself to a lot of the track at the curve. Captain Hal ran as gamely as Sande's horse, but Flying Ebony just seemed to have more run in him and perhaps the advantage of a smarter rider.

Son of John, which had been sticking close to Captain Hal, came up on the inside as the pack came drumming home and made a hard fight to catch the second horse, just barely failing.

Singlefoot was the fourth horse, saving his stake of $500. Step Along ran fifth and Bud Fisher's Swope was sixth.

Cochran receives $52,950 for the victory of his horse and has a new record for something or other by collecting his second purse in a major classic for three-year-olds in eight days. Another black colt named Coventry from his barns, won the preakness, a $50,000 race.

Took Next Best Hope.

If there seems to be more than plenty of emphasis on Sande's ride and not enough on Flying Ebony's run, it must be admitted that Flying Ebony was not ranked among the probable winners and that Sande has a knack of winning big horseraces. In this case he asked for the favorite, didn't land it, took the next best thing and won his second Derby in three years. He was the boy who brought Zev home in front in the 1923 race and it was only last fall that the doctors, on putting him together after his spill at Saratoga, remarked that he might ride a Pullman again with great luck, but never another horse.

No jockey ever rode before a greater crowd in America than the rich multitude of 80,000 which sat through a sweltering day and was caught in the rain to see the fifty-first Kentucky Derby. No rider ever attuned his ears to such a demonstration of friendliness as the one that Sande heard when he rode into the teeth of a gale of cheers to the judges' stand after the race was over. He was taken up to the stand and handed a couple of pecks of roses tied with a big ribbon. Then he was given the big gold pot, the Derby trophy which goes to Cochran. Then the movies fixed their sights on him and made a record for him to show his kids.

There were enough millionaires in the boxes to fill a good-sized theater, including almost all of the men who find it convenient to pay $50,000 now and again for a colt. Special trains from New York, Chicago, Washington and St. Louis, among other big cities, had brought thousands of people to see a race of less than three minutes.

DOUBLE BILL AT FORT TODAY

A doubleheader baseball attraction has been planned for Fort McPherson this afternoon, when the Fort team will meet the Atlanta Joint Terminal in the first game and the Southeastern Express company in the second game. The first game will start at 2 o'clock and the second will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

There is no admission charged to witness the double bill. Since there is no admission a nominal charge will be made for the use of the seats and the parking space on the sidelines and all of the proceeds that are derived from the parking space and seats will go into the firemen's relief fund now being raised.

Autoists are especially invited to spend Sunday afternoon at Fort McPherson. More than 500 automobiles can be parked on the sidelines and in the outfield and several thousand other cars can be parked within a few steps of the baseball field.

The Atlanta Joint Terminal and Fort McPherson teams played a series of games several weeks ago. The Fort is now one victory to the good.

Cordell and Holcomb will be the battery for Fort in the first game, while Atlanta Joint Terminal will use Jones and Sharpton as batterymen. Walter Capes will probably pitch the second game for the Fort nine.

STATE TENNIS MEET HERE MONDAY

The Georgia college tennis tournament will be held at Emory tomorrow, teams representing Emory, Georgia, Tech, Mercer and Oglethorpe being entered. Play will begin about 9 o'clock Monday morning, and will probably continue for the greater part of the day.

Both a singles and a doubles tournament will be played, each school to have one representative in the singles and one team in the doubles.

The tournament was won last year by Emory, who took the singles and was runner-up in the doubles. Her singles man, however, is not back this year, and it is an open guess as to how her present team will stack up with its opponents.

WALKER STOPS COOPER IN FIRST

San Francisco, May 16.—Mickey Walker, welterweight champion boxer, knocked out Lefty Cooper, of Minneapolis, in the first round of a scheduled 10-round bout on an outdoor card here this afternoon.

Lefty did not have a look-in, though he tried gamely. Mickey, wading in Dempsey-like, floored the challenger quickly. Cooper got up at the count of nine and rushed into the champion. Walker sent in another series of terrific jolts to the face, adding a right hook, under which Cooper fell again. He was trying to rise at the count of 10 and there were boos from the ringside when Larry McGrath, the referee, raised Walker's hand.

The title was not involved, both men weighing over the welterweight limit, Cooper 154, Walker 153.

GENE CALDERA GOES TO MOBILE

Mobile, Ala., May 16.—(Special.)—Gene Caldera, left-handed pitcher, formerly with the Memphis club, was turned over to Manager Kid Elberfield of the Mobile club this afternoon by Manager Clyde Milan of the Chicks. Caldera will report to the Mobile club at Little Rock Monday. Pitcher Toney Welzer of the Mobile club was turned back to the Muskegeon of the minor league.

WISCONSIN WINS QUADRANGULAR MEET

Chicago, May 16.—Wisconsin today won the quadrangular western conference track and field meet here with 63 1-4 points. Ohio was second with 48 1-4 points, Chicago third with 24 1-4 and Northwestern fourth with 18 1-4.

NINE CONFERENCE RECORDS FALL IN SEWANEE MEET

Five G. I. A. A. Records Smashed in Title Meet

Championship Again Goes To Smithies

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Tech High, piling up a total of 58½ points and breaking four association records, easily won the G. I. A. A. track title Saturday at Grant field for the second time. Lanier broke one record, bringing the total to fall to five. Newnan high was runner-up with a total of 16 points and Lanier High, of Macon, was third with 14½.

Other schools finished as follows: Monroe A. & M. was fourth, with 11 points; Boys' High, fifth, 10 1-2 points; Riverside, sixth, 9 1-2 points; Griffin, seventh, 1 point.

Three Tech High men were tied for high point place, while Nixon, of Newnan, was second. Cook and Ferger with a first and a second place each, and 1 1-4 points each for the relay, had 9 1-4 points apiece; Waugh, with two seconds and a third place and 1 1-4 points for the relay, also totaled 9 1-4 points. Nixon, with three seconds, had 9 points.

The Smithies were in top form, showing speed in the running department and plenty of pep in all the others. Ed Ferger was the first to put a new record in the book when he ran the 880-yard event in two minutes five and 9-10 seconds, six seconds better than the old record.

Captain Cliff Passon, of Tech High, in spite of a bum leg, was up to his usual form and gave another record tumble when he threw the discus for a total of 111 feet 10 inches, which is 3 1-2 feet better than the previous mark.

"Droop" Carnes got off to a running start and set a new record of 22 feet in the broad jump.

The half-mile relay team of Tech High, composed of Waugh, Ferger, Cook and Mayhew, ran its best race of the season, knocking down the former record and setting a new one of one minute 37 seconds in its place.

There was a Tech High man entered in every event and Tech High placed in every event.

The only other record broken fell when Johnson, of Lanier High, Macon, put the shot a distance of 45 feet 9 3-4 inches, bettering the old record by two feet six inches.

Underwood Hits Well.

In a rather slow game the Underwood Methodists came back from their defeat of last Saturday and swatted the Epworth Workers for a score of 9 to 5. The only feature of this game was the home run hit by Mayo, and the all-around hitting of the Underwood team.

Score by innings:	R.
Epworth Workers	100 02—3
Underwood Methodist	210 33—9

St. Mark's Upsets Dope.

St. Mark's upset the dope by spilling the Anchor Feds to a 7-to-6 defeat. Hart struck out 17 men for naught, but the other members of his team made errors when men were on the bases, and the St. Mark's players were hitting when hits meant runs. In the ninth inning with Anchor Feds having two men on the bases, Sewell of St. Mark's, made a beautiful shoe-string catch. Both teams played good ball, and had it not been for the errors that Anchor Feds made the story might have been different.

They Played Their Last Game of College Baseball Saturday

Here are four of the principal performers in the Tech-Georgia baseball series on Grant field Friday and Saturday in which Teth won one and lost one.

All four of these men Saturday played their last game of college baseball. All will be graduated this June. Saturday's game closed the college season.

These four men, principal performers in the Tech-Georgia baseball series, the first since 1919, Friday and Saturday at Grant field, have played their last game of college baseball. Andy Chambers pitched the entire game Saturday for Georgia, while Thomason, outfielder and pitcher, worked yesterday in the outer gardens. Denicke was Tech's second baseman, while Enloe went into yesterday's game as relief pitcher, as he did in Friday's game.

Yanks Rout Whitehill.

Detroit, May 16.—A slugging New York team battered the last place Tigers into submission today, winning a loosely played game, 12-to-3. The game was called when storm clouds, that had threatened throughout the game, broke in fury in the 9th inning after two Tigers had been retired. Two New York and three Detroit runs made during the ninth inning, therefore were not counted, the score reverting to the 8th inning.

AMERICUS WINS GOLF MATCH

Fort Valley, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Americus took an easy match from Hawkinsville in the second round of play in the Peach Belt Golf association tourney at Americus Thursday, by a score of 15 to 1. In the match played at Fort Valley, Fitzgerald won from Fort Valley, 10 to 6.

The approach shots of Emory Wilcox were the outstanding feature of the Fort Valley matches.

Matches are held every Thursday and several dealers have offered prizes for the season. The next matches are scheduled as follows: May 21, Americus at Fort Valley; Hawkinsville at Fitzgerald.

WOMEN PLAN FOR DIXIE TOURNEY

BY MRS. CLARENCE BRADLEY.

The next tournament of interest to the women golfers of Atlanta and the south is the woman's southern championship that will be played over the Belle Meade course at Nashville, Tenn., June 1-6.

This tournament promises to eclipse all former southern championships in number of entries and will be one of the classiest fields of women golfers ever assembled for this event.

The Atlanta entries are Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, southern champion; Miss Rosalie Mayer, runner-up in the southern championship last year; Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, Miss Douglas Paine, Mrs. L. J. Robinson, Mrs. John Hill, Miss Jimmie Pattillo, Mrs. L. H. Beck, Miss Lucy Marvin Adams, Mrs. Clarence Bradley, Mrs. T. T. Williams, Miss Mae O'Brien, Mrs. J. E. Jigoe, Mrs. Cyrus W. Strickler, Mrs. Tommie Wilson, Mrs. Eleanor McAuliffe and Mrs. L. Warren Granade.

Texas Sending Entrants.

Texas will furnish two strong contenders for the crown, Mrs. Louis Rinehart, formerly Miss Elaine Rosenthal, now of Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Rufus Scott, formerly Miss Priscilla Rogers, now of Paris, Texas.

Memphis will be well represented with ten entries headed by Mrs. David Gaut, former southern and former western champion. Birmingham will be represented by some of the best golfers in the south. Those who are registered from Birmingham are Mrs. E. M. Kilby, Mrs. H. S. Geismer, Mrs. Carl Leibold, Mrs. David Roberts, Mrs. Sam Nabors and Mrs. Paul Chalafoux.

Charlotte, N. C., will be represented by two fine golfers, Mrs. W. L. Pierce and Miss Dean VanLandingham. Greenville, S. C., will be represented by Mrs. W. A. Cooper and Mrs. John Milam. Knoxville, Tenn., will be represented by Miss Nettie Kern, Mrs. Edward Cates and others.

Among those entered from Chattanooga, Tenn., are Miss Regina Hahn and Mrs. Bernard Loveman. Mississippi will have two strong contenders in the field, Mrs. Dalton Raymond, of Baton Rouge, La., and Mrs. J. M. Taylor, several times city champion of New Orleans and also the winner of the Gulf State championship this year.

Nashville will have fifteen or more entries, among those being Mrs. Frank Berry, president of the Southern Woman's Golf association; Mrs. Oscar Noel, Mrs. T. I. Webb, Mrs. John Ventress, Mrs. Williams Grandeerry, Mrs. Francis Gardner, Miss Virginia Burton, Miss Helen Chatham, Mrs. J. S. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Homer Hudson, Mrs. Marvin Wiles, Mrs. John Vester, Mrs. A. J. Dies and Miss Sarah Rucker.

The Hermitage hotel will be headquarters for the visiting golfers.

PENN CREWS DEFEAT NAVY

Annapolis, Md., May 16.—Eight-oared crews of the University of Pennsylvania won two victories over the Annapolis midshipmen on the Severn river here today. The Quaker third varsity crew defeated a like navy team over the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths, winning by half a length. Time 8:2 1-5.

Penn's fourth varsity conquered the middy fourth varsity crew at the same distance, crossing the line three lengths in the lead. Time 8:11.

The water was extremely rough for both events.

Yale won the varsity eights race on the Housatonic river this evening, with Cornell second, a length behind, and Princeton third, five and a half lengths behind. Yale's time was 11:06; Cornell's time 11:11 and Princeton's time 11:25 4-5.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

Acosta Steady In Pinches.

Mobile, Ala., May 16.—Mobile won their first game from Memphis today, 2 to 1, although the locals were outhit nearly 2 to 1. Acosta, who was on the mound for the Bears pitched great ball in the pinches. Warmoth was beaten in the early innings of the game.

17 Innings and Still Tied.

New Orleans, May 16.—The Little Rock Travelers and New Orleans Pelicans struggled to a 2-to-2 tie for 17 innings here today, the contest being called on account of darkness. Brilliant fielding by Shortstops Smith, of Little Rock, and Myers, of New Orleans, when hits would have meant runs, together with the steady pitching of Scott and Robinson, both of whom went the entire route, were the outstanding features. Scott gave up only one pass.

EIGHT SANDLOT GAMES PLAYED

Eight games were played in the newly-organized Sandlot league Saturday morning. Some of these games were featured by close scores. The only game forfeited was the one scheduled for Baptist Orphans' Orioles and the Ponce de Leon Sluggers.

In games featured by close scores, the Grant Park Indians defeated the Briarcliff Tigers, 7 to 3, and the Grant Park Lions fell before the Oakland City Baptists, 7 to 6.

The other games were won by lopsided scores. The Bellwood Ramblers walloped the North Side Bulldogs, 17 to 3, the South Side Terrors frightened the Washington Street Colonials into a 11 to 4 score; the Red Hill Lions won from the Jonesboro Jaguars, 17 to 1; the Techwood Bears cats clawed their way to a 23 to 3 win over the North Side Wolves and the Norcross Aces defeated the Little Giants, 17 to 5.

BABE TAKES SHORT WALK

New York, May 16.—For the first time since being taken to the hospital April 9, Babe Ruth today felt the sidewalks of New York under his feet. The Yankee home run champion was permitted to take a short walk along streets near the institution, after which he joined Mrs. Ruth in viewing a police parade.

Ruth expects next week to leave the hospital, where he has been recovering from influenza and indigestion.

Foster, V. M. I., Runs 100-Yd. Event in 9.8; Miss. Aggies Claim Georgia Tech Trophy

Hardee Field, Sewanee, Tenn., May 16.—In a contest continuing until the relay race, the last event of the day, decided the issue, the Mississippi Aggies registered their third straight triumph in the Southern Conference track and field meet. The Mississippians, by making it three out of three, gained permanent possession of the trophy given by Georgia Tech to the annual champion.

The winners accumulated 29 points to nose ahead of Louisiana State, the runner-up with 26. North Carolina was third, scoring 21, and Vanderbilt finished fourth with 19 1-2.

The other teams scored: V. M. I., 17; Auburn, 10; Kentucky, 10; Washington & Lee, 8 1-3; Clemson, 6; Alabama, 5; Georgia Tech, 5; University of the South, 3; V. P. I., 2; University of Mississippi, 1 1-3.

The meet, with almost perfect weather aiding the shattering of records, resulted in nine new marks going on the southern conference books. Brady, of Kentucky, and Foster, of Virginia Military institute, each broke two records and led the high point men by scoring ten each.

Foster Runs 100 in 9.8.

Foster ran the 100-yard dash in 9 and 8-10 seconds twice during the afternoon, both in the preliminary and in the final. He also gave a new mark to shoot at in the 220-yard dash when he reeled it off in 21:6. The old records were 10 seconds and 22:7.

Brady, who won all the points credited to Kentucky, jumped 21 feet, 10 1-2 inches and made a new record in the pole vault by clearing the bar at 12 feet, 3 5-8 inches. The marks he bettered were 21 feet, 3 inches and 12 feet.

Sid Robinson, Mississippi A. & M., by running the mile in 4 minutes, 25 and 4-10 seconds, reduced the record of 4 minutes, 27 seconds.

Baskin, of Auburn, clipped two-tenths of a second from the old record with his time of 15:4 in the 120-yard high hurdles.

The record in the 220-yard low hurdles was reduced to 25:1 from 25:2 by Moore, of North Carolina.

T. A. Smith, of Mississippi A. & M., tied the record in the half-mile by doing it in two minutes and fourtenths of a second.

Louisiana State's relay team, made up of Chandler, DeGravelle, Brown and Cailleteaux, set a record for that event by finishing in 3 minutes, 26:4 seconds, the old mark being 3 minutes, 28:2 seconds.

Aggies Win in Relay.

At schedule time for the relay race the test had narrowed to a contest between the Mississippi Aggies and Louisiana State, with the Aggies needing to place in the event to win. They did that, the Louisiana Tigers breaking the record and winning, and the champions finishing second. The Baton Rouge team carried away the special trophy offered for the winner of this race. Second place, however, won the meet and the championship cup for the Aggies.

L. Smith, Alabama, put his university on the score sheet alone and unaided. He was the Crimson's only representative in the meet, but he won the two-mile race and five points, enough to give Alabama tenth place in the final reckoning.

Mercer Closes Season Defeating Auburn, 15 to 8

Auburn Held To Four Hits

Macon, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—If all's well that ends well, Mercer's diamond season has been a howling success, judging from the close today, which saw the lid jammed on tight in grand and glorious fashion.

For the second time in as many games, the Bears dosed the Auburn Tigers with defeat, it being a complete shutout this time, 4 to 0. Auburn also dropped yesterday's game, 15 to 8.

In whatever way it is that pitchers having of doing such things, Lewis Hamilton, squatty hurling ace of the Baptists, who was in the last college game that he will ever play, today rang down the Bears' curtain with a tribute to himself in almost every play.

He held the Tigers to but four hits, three of which were puny scratch grounders, besides he ranked first of the 18 men in batting, pounding his rival for three safeties from four up. One of the four was a double and besides, the chunky "Ham" countered exactly half of his team's four runs.

A Mound Duel.

Truly it was a mound duel between Hamilton and the lanky Sitz, the latter letting go nine hits. The Tiger tosser beat Hamilton in one respect only, in that he was stingier with his free bases. He surrendered only a trio, but "Ham" gave up a quartet.

The Auburn nine withstood the determined Bear attack resolutely, giving up only in the second, fifth and seventh periods.

Three times the visitors pushed men around the diamond to third base, only to have the inning go out with nothing to show for the trouble. Moulton, Auburn centerfielder, hit Auburn's only double of the day in the fifth, later going to third, but no farther. Stewart, third-sacker, and Maury, catcher, likewise rested on third. Auburn had only seven men left on bases, as against Mercer's eight, but the Bears were able to get farther occasionally.

Both the Tiger outfield and infielder handled the ball sluggishly more than once letting a Bear runner beat the throw to base. Mercer, too, suffered from a lack of enthusiasm, but the Bear spirit outdid that of the Tiger.

Playing Last Game.

Lewis Hamilton was only one of four Mercer athletes who played in their last college game today. "Shorty" Poore, one of these, who had led the Bears in the present baseball season as leadoff man, has directed the Baptists through one of the most difficult baseball seasons ever entered. He also has played football with Mercer.

"Crook" Smith, another Mercerian who saw his last performance today, possibly is wider known than any other Mercer athlete, being the only four-letter man from there in many years. He has captained the basketball team the past two years and for four years has been the guiding spirit of Mercer athletics.

Two Big Mainstays Right Now With Crackers Are These Boys

At the left is Nick Cullop, the pitcher, while in the center the same Nick, the home run-knocking outfielder. At the right is Jim Bagby, who in his first start as a Cracker yesterday, let the Nashville Volunteers down with three hits for a shutout victory. Nick Cullop, pitcher, and Nick Cullop, outfielder, one and the same, contributed many runs to the Cracker cause last week, and when pitching was poor, went into the box to hold the other side. Cullop was a pitcher last year. Bagby was bought from the Seattle Pacific Coast league club.

HONOR FEDS BEAT ALL-STARS

The strong Honor Feds at the federal prison, by being able to hit almost at will, beat Tubby Walton's All Stars Saturday by the lop-sided score of 13 to 1. The game was featured by much heavy hitting.

Touching Milligan and Hill, Tubby's best offerings, for 19 hits, the Honor Feds made them count for 13 runs. In the meantime Hunter was pitching great ball and was touched for eight hits. He kept these so well scattered, however, that they only resulted in one lone tally for the All Stars.

FRANCHISE GOES TO PROVIDENCE

New York, May 16.—The Newark International league baseball club and franchise will be transferred to Providence, R. I., as soon as the Providence park is ready for play, John Conway Toole, president of the league announced today. The change was authorized by the board of directors of the league.

NEW RELAY RECORD SET

Los Angeles, May 16.—A new world's record for the quarter mile relay was established here today by a University of Southern California track team when it ran the distance in 41 8-10 seconds in the Southern Pacific Amateur Athletic Union meet. This breaks the record of 42 seconds established by a University of Kansas team at the recent Kansas relays.

ARMY ATHLETES ARE DEFEATED

West Point, May 16.—Army athletes were defeated on the diamond and track today, losing to Fordham at baseball, 6 to 3, and trailing Georgetown in a dual athletic meet, 98 to 35. The Cadets defeated Penn State at Lacrosse, 15 to 1, but lost in tennis to Williams, 4 to 2.

Army golfers failed to score a single point against Yale, losing the match, 9 to 0.

SWEDEN WINS TENNIS SETS

Berne, Switzerland, May 16.—Sweden won both singles matches from Switzerland here today in the opening round of the Davis cup elimination tennis matches.

BENEFIT BOUT ON PROGRAM FRIDAY

In connection with the theatrical performance which will be presented at the Auditorium Friday night for the benefit of the families of the firemen lost in the recent Decatur street tragedy, a three-round boxing exhibition will be staged between Billie McGowan and Rocky Duncan.

The performance in itself will be elaborate in its scope, embracing much of the best talent in the south, and the boxing number will add considerably to the attraction.

McGowan is a well-known local light heavyweight, weighing 164 pounds, while Duncan, whose home is in Illinois, is visiting here. The latter rips the scales at 160.

Eddie Hanlon, official boxing commission referee, will handle the fight. Hanlon has served in that capacity in many of the bouts staged here during the past and has proved to be an efficient official.

All the principals connected with the show have volunteered their services free of charge in an effort to do something for the families of the noble heroes who lost their lives while fighting for the lives and property of Atlantans.

FRANK FRISCH BREAKS FINGER

New York, May 16.—Frankie Frisch, star second baseman of the New York Giants, fractured the third finger on his right hand sliding into home plate in the fourth inning of today's game with Cincinnati at the Polo grounds. An X-ray photograph of the injury revealed a complete fracture of the fourth carpax of the third finger of his throwing hand. Dr. W. J. Walsh, the club physician announced.

MEXICAN BANDITS RESUME ACTIVITY IN VERA CRUZ

Mexico City, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—The outlaws in the state of Vera Cruz have resumed their activities to such an extent that General Andrew Almazan, the Vera Cruz military commandant, has been ordered to return to his post, cutting short his leave of absence here.

Announcement is made that the warship Bravo captured the schooner Anita off Nautla in the gulf, carrying arms and ammunition for the Vera Cruz bandits.

The war department, though declaring that banditry is apparently the sole object of the outlaws, has directed that a careful watch be kept over former rebel generals and that they be arrested as soon as they show intention of again revolting.

LOUISVILLE SELLS BONDS AT PREMIUM

Louisville, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Louisville sold her paving bonds today at a premium of 104. The amount of bonds sold was $32,500 and the amount realized from the sale was $33,540. W. E. Bush & company, of Augusta, were the purchasers.

Work will begin in a short time on the paving program for which these bonds were voted some days ago.

BRITIST NET TEAM WINS

Warsaw, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Poland was eliminated by Great Britain in the Davis cup tennis competition when the British team won the doubles match here today. The British players took both singles matches in the opening round yesterday.

In today's play L. A. Godfree and C. K. Kingsley, of Great Britain, defeated Stajnert and Kuchar, of Poland, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Despite Britain's victory today, the finals in singles will be played tomorrow.

AUSTRIANS BEAT IRISH.

Vienna, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Austria won both singles matches from Ireland here today in the first round of the European zone eliminations for the Davis cup. Count Salm-Hoogstraten defeated Major S. F. Scroope, of Ireland, in the last three sets, 0-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3. P. Brick, Austria, beat L. A. Meldon, Ireland, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

ENGLISH WOMEN GOLFERS WINNERS

Troon, Scotland, May 16.—The English women golfers today won the annual international team contest by defeating the Welsh team, nine matches to none. They had previously defeated Ireland and Scotland.

Those entrants in the women's open championship tournament who did not participate in today's team play improved the opportunity of getting in a little practice.

Miss Joyce Wethered, the champion, played fine golf, except for some lapses on the putting greens.

Since the beginning of the week she and Miss Glenna Collett, the former American champion, separately have played several rounds over the course. Almost daily the British girl has covered the 18 holes in three or four fewer strokes than the American aspirant for her title. Yesterday, however, Miss Collett was at the peak of her game and took a 79. She did the first nine holes in 36.

Tomorrow being the Sabbath and this being Scotland, there will be no golf at all. The open championship tournament begins Monday.

TOOMBS TO HOLD "NO-FENCE" ELECTION

Lyons, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Toombs county is to have an election on fence and no fence laws on July 1, according to announcements and advertisements that are now out. Once before, when this question was up, it failed to carry, but some of the most ardent supporters of the fence law are now most active in getting this election called that they may help carry the no fence law. It is expected that the election will be very warm as such elections usually are but it is generally thought it will carry.

WILLIAM E. DUMAS DIES OF HEART TROUBLE

Thomaston, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—William E. Dumas died of heart trouble at his home this week, being found dead on his farm. He was 68 years of age and one of the county's best farmers. He was a member of the Primitive church. Interment was at Trice cemetery.

He leaves his widow, who was Miss Ella Holloway, and 12 children.

TO GOLFERS.

It may be your approach was dubbed,
Your putt stayed out; but, man alive,
Don't start explaining why you flubbed:
Go on and drive.

Look forward; do not let your eyes
Turn back to traps already seen.
Remember up ahead there lies
Another green.

What difference if each club you choose
Goes wrong, no matter how you try.
If you are losing, also lose
The alibi.

And, when the final stroke is holed,
If you are beaten in the fray,
Just grin and hope to be consoled
Some other day.

WE can't understand why some of these golf nuts haven't combined to build a course up north, where the days are six months long.

In the matter of direction most dubs have a lot of confidence. They know they'll never miss a trap.

Golf is pretty generally a match between Old Man Trouble and Lady Luck.

Johnny Anderson is now French amateur champion, while Eddie Van Vleck is champion of Cuba.

Any Scotchman can understand Mr. Anderson's French, but Van Vleck's Cuban is Havana wrapper with Long Island filler.

THE most absent-minded golfer on record is the man who, suffering from a cold, swallowed a golf ball and teed up a quinine pill.

The older golfers always have an ambition to play a round in a score corresponding to their own age. The nearest we ever heard of anyone accomplishing the stunt was a man of 68 who shot a 70, but many a duffer's score, after a tough round, correspond to how old he feels.

To surely make a hole in one
You first construct a gutter
Which gently slopes from tee to cup,
And then you use your putter.

Another way to lose a match is to let an enthusiastic friend caddy for you.

We are informed that the seed bill for a golf course averages $5,000. It would seem to be cheaper to keep a canary.

New Hurler Lets Nashville Down With Three Safeties; Cullop, Zoeller Hit Homers

JOE THORBURN SENT TO MACON

When the Crackers return here Monday to begin a full week of play on Spiller field, Jim Yeargin will be wearing the uniform of Joe Thorburn, who has been sent to Macon. George Pipgras, who was turned back to the Yanks to make room for Jim Bagby, has been turned over to Nashville.

The Crackers play Birmingham here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and the Nashville Vols come back to Spiller field for a series Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

BY PAUL WARWICK

Being a generous sort of individual, and having learned upon his arrival from Seattle that the Crackers were desperately in need of at least one well-pitched game along about this time, James Bagby, veteran right-hander, strolled onto Spiller field Saturday afternoon and treated the fans and his teammates to the very thing they needed most.

Encouraged by the fact that enemy base-hits were not annoying them, Mr. Bagby's new-found teammates unlimbered their formidable war clubs and did enough damage therewith to count seven runs, while Nashville was held to the traditional goose-egg—an all-too-rare delicacy these latter days.

Three hits only did Mr. Bagby permit—while Atlanta secured an even dozen, seven of them for extra bases, off the equally right handed slants—that's the right word, isn't it?—of Nashville's man Friday, who wasn't so good Saturday.

Cullop Slaps Homer.

Considering for the nonce extra base hits, Nick Cullop's ninth home run of the season was among those present. This larrup traveled over the left field stands, as seems to be the custom with Nick's knocks. Frankie Zoeller, Atlanta's youth's-size left fielder, smacked one to deep left center for the circuit. Red Smith and Boss Niehoff each had a pair of doubles.

Until the fourth inning got under way the Saturday afternoon affair was hitless and scoreless, for both participants. Lewis, who plays left field for Nashville and is even smaller than Frankie, started things by an infield hit. He stopped threatening, however, when he was thrown out on an attempted steal of second.

Bert Niehoff, in Atlanta's half of the first, decided that if his Jim Bagby could be hit, so could Friday, so he opened the session by a double down the third-base line. He took third when Good flied out to Davis in right field. It was then that Nick culloped into the region beyond the left field stands. Obviously, Bert scored ahead of him. That was all the scoring that inning.

Niehoff Recovers.

Things looked shaky in the fifth for the locals. Tolson opened for the visitors by annexing the second hit off Bagby. Eichrodt hit to Gazella for what looked like an easy double play, but Niehoff dropped Gazella's toss and both runners were safe. Parkinson hit to Smith, who tagged Tolson on the line.

Then Niehoff, regretting the fact that he had previously erred, perhaps, turned in a sparkling bit of headwork—to produce the game's only double play.

Burkett hit to Gazella, who threw to Niehoff to force Parkinson. Burkett being rather close to first, Bert turned and flung the ball to Red Smith, who placed it on Eichrodt, who was seriously considering a dash for home on the throw to first which the Cracker manager, it so happened, did not make.

Zoeller's home run was the only score of the sixth and the Vols did not threaten. In the seventh, Strohm, Vol third baseman, tripled with one out, but died on third when Bagby tossed Tolson's weak grounder to Murphy, then fanned Eichrodt.

Smith Squeezed In.

With Red Smith on third in the seventh, Johnny Brock did his part in the squeeze play well enough to net himself a single and Smith a run. Then Johnny had to spoil it all by getting caught napping off first.

A barrage of five hits in the eighth accounted for the other Cracker runs. Cheered by two hatsful of varied jack that appreciative fans had garnered for him after his four-bagger, Zoeller smote the first ball pitched for two bags and scored on Niehoff's second double of the day. Later Smith doubled down the third base line to score his chieftain and counted himself when Murphy singled.

HAAS OF BARONS CROWDS SMITH IN STICK WORK

Hard Work Best Developer for Athletes---Edgren

Frugal Finns Were Nurmi's Ancestors

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

I was watching Paavo Nurmi in a race. At my elbow a famous trainer muttered: "What makes 'em so tough, that's what I'd like to find out."

Paavo Nurmi, the Finn, was brought up with few luxuries. He didn't drive to school in a flivver. He walked or ran. He ate dried fish and black bread—the Finnish national fodder. He did a tremendous lot of running for years, and won a bunch of titles and records in Olympic meets. He has done enough running on American board tracks during the past winter to stale a regiment of men, and he's as nimble and enduring as ever. In America Nurmi has been eating American foods—even pie and pastry—but he hasn't shown any letdown in endurance or speed. He can still go as fast as he wants to at any time.

Heredity may have something to do with it. Paavo comes from a long line of black bread and dried fish eating Finns, who walked or ran when they wanted to go anywhere, and who took their baths, even in midwinter (and the Finnish winter is something to talk about) by going out in the back lot after dark and pouring a bucket of water over their heads.

Hard Work One Way.

Coach Knute Rockne once said to an interviewer: "Rich men's sons have a hard titme making the football teams these days. They ride in cars too much and they don't develop their legs. Notre Dame football men pick tough jobs for their vacation time, like working on lake steamer docks. Rockne used to do that when he was at Notre Dame, and he advises his football men to try it. Hard work never hurt an athlete. Red Grange, the gridiron sensation of the two past years, drives an ice wagon in vacation time.

Jim Duncan's discus throwing record of 156 feet 3-8 inches, stood for thirteen years before it was broken last month by Bud Houser, and by Glenn Hartranft the week following. When Jim Duncan was making world's records with the discus he worked on an L railroad in New York, inspection and repair job. Handling a big sledge hammer gave him a pair of huge and powerful hands, and big hands are needed to control the discus.

"What makes 'em so tough"

Jack Dempsey never knew how to order a hotel meal in his younger days. He worked in lumber camps, at road building, in mines, at driving horses, and on mechanical jobs on ship yards. He worked from the time he was eight years old. He lives on plain, coarse food. He didn't know there was such a thing as mushroom sauce or a river fattened oyster. He developed big lean working muscles and big hard hands—and became a world's champion when he tried ring fighting. Dempsey has been living softly for several years now, and but for his years of hard work would be in the musty stage. He knows how hard he'll have to work to get back into the condition he could reach in a week, five or six years ago. "I must have three months of hard training before I can fight," says Dempsey.

Rich Boys Handicapped.

How many rich men's sons make good in sports Not many. Tom Shevlin, of Yale, was a marvelous exception, but heredity counted there. Shevlin's father was a lumberman and Shevlin was brought up in the woods.

Martin Sheridan, once America's most famous athlete, came of a family of athletes in Ireland. Martin used to boast that his father could beat him jumping and throwing the stone. Martin worked hard as a boy and developed a great frame for sport. Martin told me one time that when he left Ireland he visited England before starting for America and ran out of money. Seeing a road gang working on road repairs Martin stopped and watched them.

"They were half loafing," said Martin in telling about it. "I walked over to the foreman and said: 'Put me to work, and if I don't do more than six of your men, don't pay me.' He gave me a shovel, and I had a strong back in those days. I did more than any six men on the job and set a pace they couldn't follow. It was my delight to outwork the Englishmen. When I left that job they tried to make me stay, but I was off for America."

In America Martin made a score or so of world's athletic records, won all-around championships and more Olympic championships than any other athlete except Ray Ewry, the famous jumper. I've seen many statements that Bud Houser is the first athlete who ever won the Olympic shot and discus events in the same meet. Martin Sheridan did that at Athens, and was placed in three other events besides. Bob Garrett, of Princeton, also won both the shot and the discus at Athens in 1896.

John DeWitt Exception.

There have been a few sons of rich men who became great athletes. There was John D. DeWitt, of Princeton, a tremendous man and still remembered for his great football play and hammer throwing. I don't know much about DeWitt's family, but it's a safe bet there were no idlers in it. He didn't get his huge physique by accident. You can see the mark of heredity every time.

Recently I walked through the grounds and some of the buildings of Stanford university with George Culver, dean of men in the university. We saw the fields where athletes were training under their coaches, the dormitories where they slept, the dining halls and the kitchens—all the places the boys frequented when outside the class rooms. They were at their various tasks with enthusiasm and rushing energy. It seemed to be I'd never seen finer youngsters anywhere in the world.

"Some people think of college students as 'rah-rah boys,'" said Dean Culver. "There may be a little rahahing at the football games and other events now and then, but the 'rah-rah boy' belongs on the stage and in the moving pictures. He isn't seen in the modern college. It takes work to keep up to scholarship requirements. And you'd be surprised if you knew how many of these boys are working their way through Stanford. Sixty per cent of them, I' say, working their way wholly or in part. It'd make you weep to hear them called 'rah-rah boys' when you know how hard some of these boys have to fight to get an education—working in the kitchens, waiting on tables, doing every kind of work inside and outside of college and working through their vacations on farms, in blacksmith shops—everywhere, and keeping up with their studies all the time. Those are the fellows who make real men. And say—do you know the best football players and athletes we have are the fellows who have to work hardest?"

NATIONAL LEAGUE

HARTNET GETS 10TH HOMER.

Philadelphia, May 16.—The Phillies gave the Cubs a 7-to-5 beating today, winning the series. Against the superfine hurling of Ring, until he developed a kink in his arm in the seventh inning, the Cubs did but little damage. They found Couch easier and in the ninth had the fans on edge until he was lifted. Two runs were across the plate and the tying tallies were on base when Decatur was called upon to face Pinch-Hitter Barrett, batting for the third out of the inning. Hartnett hit his 10th home run of the season.

Osborne Beats Cards.

Brooklyn, May 16.—With Tiny Osborne pitching, Brooklyn made it three out of four from the Cardinals, winning the final game today, 6 to 4. The Cardinals made eight hits off Osborne, and four of them went to Hornsby, a home run, a double and two singles. Leo Dickerman pitched for the Cardinals and the Robins found him for timely hits.

Frisch Breaks Finger.

New York, May 16.—New York made a clean sweep of the series with Cincinnati by winning the fourth game of the series today, 2 to 1. Snyder, as a pinch hitter, scored the winning run with a single in the ninth. Captain and Second Baseman Frank Frisch, of the Giants, had to retire from the game in the sixth inning because of a broken finger on his right hand. He was injured sliding into the plate in the fourth but played the fifth inning. He will be out of the game three weeks, doctors said.

Wall Street Predicts Creation of Largest Superpower Project

New York, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Wall street visualizes in the plan to sell Southern Power & Light company to the Electric Power & Light company, subsidiary of the Electric Bond and Share company, the creation of one of the largest super-power projects in the country, linking stations from Niagara Falls to Houston, Texas.

Companies owned or operated by the Electric Bond and Share company figure prominently in the development which will carry the grouping through 14 states. Among the properties involved are American Power & Light, National Power & Light, Southeastern Power & Light, American Gas & Electric, Carolina Power & Light, Lehigh Power Securities and the newly-formed Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern.

Another link could be established, it was pointed out, through the lines of the Southwestern Power & Light serving northeastern Texas. The recently-formed Mohawk & Hudson Power corporation has been mentioned as another probable connection.

There was no present intention of changing the corporate relationship of the various properties, it was said.

BIKE RACES WILL BE HELD HERE IN JULY

Wanted—a bicycle rider between the ages of 16 and 20 years; one who is willing to train and work, who believes that he has all of the qualifications that go to make a speedy rider, who can be developed into a world's champion to duplicate the record that was made by Bobby Walthour, Sr., who held the world's championship for 15 years.

Gus Castle, who developed, trained and managed Walthour is looking for another rider from Atlanta.

In order to give the local bicycle riders the opportunity M. D. Gleason, commander of the Dixie Division of the Maccabees, has arranged with Castle to hold a series of bicycle races for the Order of Maccabees at the Lakewood track on July 11.

The Maccabees will hold their 1925 convention in Washington, D. C., and the plans are for motorcades to start from all parts of the country and drive into Washington. Beginning July 6 the Dixie division of this motorcade will rest in Atlanta for three days. July 11 at Lakewood horse racing in charge of Billy Lotz will feature the entertainment. There will also be athletic events. The events for the bicycle races have already been arranged and will be as follows:

One-quarter mile sprint, one-half mile open, one-mile Atlanta championship, two-mile handicap. The finish of the bicycle races will be a battle royal between 20 colored riders in a two-mile dash. Entry blanks for the bicycle races are now in the hands of all of the local bicycle dealers. Riders who show the necessary speed will be sent to the velodrome in Newark, N. J., later in the season and matched against Bobby Walthour, Jr., in a series of races.

The bicycle races here July 11 will be repeated at Charlotte, N. C., Asleigh, N. C., Richmond, Va., and Washington, D. C. In the fall another big bicycle event will be staged in Atlanta and riders from the Newark, N. J., velodrome will be brought to Atlanta. Among them will be Bobby Walthour, Jr.

BRAKES AND BREAKS

BY H. McCOY VAN DEVENDER,
Automobile Editor

We are wondering just what the big guns of the automobile industry really think, and if they all got their heads together just what rating they would give these diggings where we live. Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., who is president of the General Motors company, headed a party of his business associates including C. S. Mott, John L. Pratt and Donaldson Brown, all of whom are vice presidents of the General Motors corporation; Wade H. Leach and John A. Ardis, special representatives of the corporation, and John J. Schumann, Jr., vice president of the General Motors acceptance corporation, the finance organization of General Motors.

These men are just completing a tour of some of the larger southern cities, and were guests of the different General Motors units here Friday. It must take the leveliest head imaginable to direct such a large organization as General Motors, for after observing local competition in Atlanta for the past eight years, we don't see how it is humanly possible for Mr. Sloan to keep 'em all in a good humor. But he does it. We must admit right here that he is the one man for the job.

Talk about a glutton for work! T. E. Cauthorn, president for the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, gets the "Cut glass ice pick." Mr. Cauthorn has successfully headed this company for the past five years. We asked him the other day how it was that he could hold his young looks and health so well under the strain that naturally exists in such a position. His reply was: "From 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. you will find me right here in my showrooms; work builds instead of breaking a man."

Let us introduce Warren A. Davis, who recently took over the advertising and publicity desk for the Ford branch here. Warren needs no introduction to the local automobile men, for he has been associated with them as the head of his own "Nickel Plating business for several years. If you happen to notice some unusual stunts for the Ford product you can just say, "Warren's on the job."

Success will never overtake you, you have to catch it. E. J. Clarke, Jr., a young man who has been selling used cars for the Flint Motor company for the last year, was promoted to the new car sales force recently. We are certainly happy to hear of this promotion and congratulate "E. J." upon his success.

"Fat, what's your weight?" How many times have you heard that. Well, we just want you all to know that E. H. "Fat" Elrod, erstwhile automobile and oil and gas salesman, is now peddling death insurance. Oh, yes; he is also insuring anything from income to plate glass, and "Fat" asekd me if we would just tell his old friends on the row to phone him for any kind of policy they want, cause he's liable to walk off some of his surplus fat trying to see 'em all. Then who would the fellows kid at the prize fights, etc.?

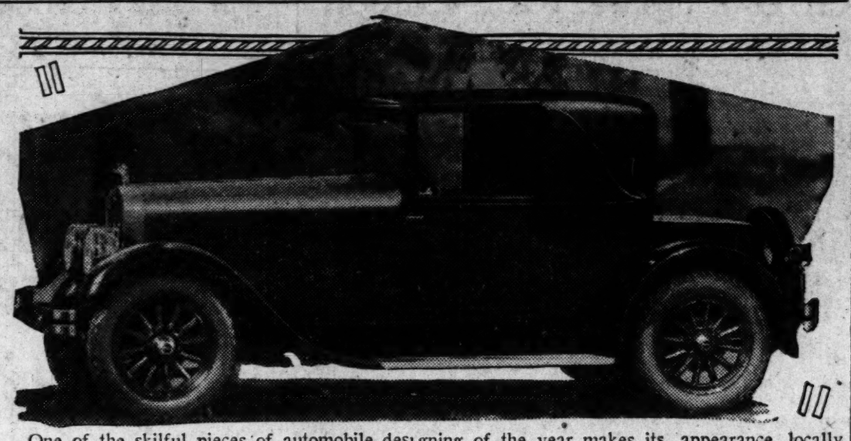
With a meeting of the special committee handling the Annual Summer Outing of the Atlanta Automobile association, of which D. C. Black is chairman, held during the past week, plans for the outing got off to a flying start. The outing will be held at Brookhaven Country club, either Friday, June 12, or Friday, June 19. The club grounds will be open all day to members of the association, although the outing proper will not start until about 1:00 p. m., the members closing their places of business at noon in order to allow their employees to attend. Tickets will be $2 each, for men, women and children, covering everything, including the dinner and dance in the evening.

For those who prefer golf, two tournaments are being arranged by Frank Spratling, chairman of this event—one in the morning and one in the afternoon. T. K. Johnson, of the Olds Motor Works, is vice chairman of this feature in charge of entries. Entries can be made by getting in touch with Mr. Johnson, telephone Ivy 0642.

Stunts will be arranged on the grounds by R. N. Reed and J. B. Moore, which will be participated in by children and others who do not care for golf. The tennis courts will be open to everybody, the lake will be open for swimming, and a bridge party is being arranged for the ladies. Prizes are being donated by a large number of the members, which will be awarded to the winners in all of the above events.

One of the most delightful features of the occasion will be an elaborate dinner which will be spread in the clubhouse promptly at 7:00 p. m., accompanied by a special entertainment, and followed by a dance, for which a special orchestra has been engaged. It is expected that at least 300 people will attend this outing.

Franklin Shows Brand New Coupe Design



One of the skilful pieces of automobile designing of the year makes its appearance locally for the first time with the display of the Franklin coupe recently at the Franklin Motor Car company, 151 West Peachtree street. According to de Causse, who styled this Franklin, the design involves all the elements of a personal car extending from sport and social use to business and professional purposes. In appearance, it reflects those characteristics of an importation which distinguish all the latest Franklin types.

CARDINAL ARRIVES TO DEDICATE CHURCH

New Orleans, May 16.—Cardinal Hayes arrived here today to preside tomorrow at the dedication of the new Roman Catholic church of Our Lady of Lourdes. He was accompanied by the Right Rev. Monsignor George Waring, vicar general of New York, and the Right Rev. Monsignor William M. Foley, vicar general of Chicago.

J. D. STEINHARD, SR., DIES IN LITTLE ROCK

News of the death of J. D. Steinhard, Sr., in Little Rock, Ark., was received in Atlanta Saturday by friends. Mr. Steinhard lived in Atlanta many years prior to moving to the Arkansas city. One of his sons, J. D. Steinhard, Jr., is a student at Georgia Military academy, College Park, and left Saturday for Little Rock to attend the funeral services.

CHURCH AND SMITH WITH WHITE MOTOR

H. D. Church, formerly chief engineer of the truck department of the Packard Motor Car company and for the past 18 months assistant chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor company, will go to the White Motor company on May 15 as director of engineering.

George W. Smith, formerly in charge of the experimental and research departments of White Motor has returned to the company as technical assistant to Vice President and General Manager Thomas H. White, and will have charge of the technical division of the staff.

Mr. Church, the new director of engineering, has had a wide and varied experience in the truck industry. After a long service with the Packard Motor Car company he joined Hare Motors, where for two years he was assistant to the chief engineer and later consulting engineer before going with the Chevrolet organization.

During the war Mr. Smith was assistant chief engineer of the naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia and when peace was declared, went with the Victor Talking Machine company. He was general superintendent in charge of all manufacturing and engineering for the Victor company at the time of joining White Motor. He is a graduate of Worcester Polytechnic institute.

EVOLUTION TEACHER TO FIGHT TO FINISH

Paducah, Ky., May 16—John Thomas Scopes, who is to be tried for teaching evolution in violation of a Tennessee law, will "stay in the fight until the end," he said today. Scopes, an instructor in the Dayton, Tenn., high school, is visiting his parents near here.

"I didn't know I had started anything," he said. "I did not know I was violating the law of Tennessee, but as they seem to think so, I am willing to stay with them until the end."

NEGRO SLAYER OF POLICEMAN GETS DEATH SENTENCE

Chicago, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—William Sams, negro gunman, was sentenced today by Judge Hoza Wells to be hanged on June 19 for the murder of a policeman on August 24 last and the prisoner complained that he was not receiving justice.

"Last week two white men who killed a policeman were sentenced to life. Yesterday a colored boy was hanged for the same thing. I want justice."

Sams was serving a life sentence for killing another man and was brought back from Joliet prison and tried for the killing of Policeman Cornelius Broderick.

GRAHAM BROS. REDUCE PRICES

Notice was received today by F. E. Maffett, Inc., 167 West Peachtree, local Dodge Brothers dealers, of substantial reduction in the prices of Graham Brothers trucks.

The one-ton Graham Brothers chassis, which formerly sold at $1,175, f. o. b. Detroit, is reduced to $1,095 and the 1 1-2-ton chassis, which was $1,375, is cut to $1,280, f. o. b. Detroit. Other chassis prices are reduced proportionately.

"In view of the recent announcement that Graham Brothers in the first quarter of 1925 built more 1 1-2-ton trucks than any other manufacturer in the world, and were second in the 1-ton and 1 1-2-ton truck fields combined," said Mr. Maffett, "the reduction is readily explained. It has always been Graham Brothers' policy to pass along to the consumer immediately any savings effected through increased production and other factory economics. Only last September they made a sharp price cut in their 1-ton chassis. In the face of this previous reduction the present additional cut of $80 is almost unbelievable.

"Graham Brothers have advanced astonishingly in the past three years. After hearing the comments of the Graham Brothers truck owners we have sold I can understand why. There is no limit to their enthusiasm and admiration. The truck is exceedingly attractive in the first place, and in addition is exceptionally rugged and powerful. There seems to be no road, no hauling condition, that it can not master. Moreover, the initial cost is extremely low and it serves the owner faithfully over a much longer period than one usually expects a truck to function.

"Graham Brothers also have another important advantage which had a tremendous influence on their quick ascendency to leadership. This is the fact that they market their product through Dodge Brothers dealers all over the world. They are thus provided with an organization much larger and more capable than the average truck manufacturer can hope to establish. All Dodge Brothers dealers also have highly competent and well-stocked service departments—and service is of vital importance to truck owners.

"These facts have found recognition everywhere. They are responsible for Graham Brothers' present large production and for the substantial cut in prices."

Coastal Highway Bonds Offered at Savannah; Many Bidders Present

Savannah, Ga., May 16.—Bids for the $900,000 coastal highway district bond issue for a permanent road from Chatham county to the St. Mary's river were opened Friday by the dis-

The 10 commissioners were all present. They decided to reject all bids and to call for new bids, giving bidders until 12 o'clock tomorrow to make new proposals.

The Citizens & Southern company did not make a flat bid, but offered to pay $1,000 higher than any bona fide bid received. On the basis of the bids received this was a bid of 101.569.

The Robinson-Humphrey company made a bid of 102.666, offering to take $135,000 with the privilege of taking $765,000. The alternative bids of this company were $913,221 or $923,994.

Other bids were: The Exchange bank, National City company; Harris, Fales & Co., 101.339—$912,051.

J. H. Hilsman company, 101.187—$910,683.

Trust company of Georgia, 101.111—$909,999.

Hibernia Securities company, $909,720.

The commissioners spent all this afternoon signing the bonds. Each bond carries the signature of each of the 10 commissioners of the zone, four from Chatham, two from Glynn, and one each from Bryan, Liberty, McIntosh and Camden counties.

The bonds will probably be sold tomorrow to the highest bidder and will be put at once on the market.

Plans Made at Meet At Monticello To Form Kiwanis Organization

Jackson, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) As the result of a meeting in Monticello Friday night, attended by 43 members of the Jackson club and representatives of the Eatonton club, steps were taken to organize a Kiwanis club in that city.

Temporary officers named were Dr. C. H. Jordan, president, and Professor R. H. Harris, secretary. The Monticello club, which will be the fifty-first in Georgia, will be formally organized within the next few days, it is expected.

Friday night's meeting was one of the most enthusiastic civic club meetings ever held in middle Georgia. Talks were made by J. D. Jones, W. E. Watkins and W. A. Dozier, who is lieutenant governor of the central Georgia district of Kiwanis clubs, of Jackson; J. J. Duke, of the recently organized club in Eatonton, and W. W. Mundy, of Cedartown, governor of the Georgia district of Kiwanis clubs. A field representative is assisting in perfecting the organization.

O. A. Pound, president of the Jackson club, presided, and talks were made by a number of Monticello and Jasper county citizens, all pledging their best efforts towards the organization of a Kiwanis club in that community. Much interest was manifested and the Monticello club will rank with the livest organizations of the kind in the state.

Thomasville District Of Methodist Church Opposed to Unification

Thomasville, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—The conference of the Thomasville district of the Methodist church, held at Pavo this week, was very largely attended and was of more than usual interest owing to the fact that delegates were to be selected to represent the district at the annual meeting of the South Georgia conference in Macon in November, when the vote will be taken for or against unification of the northern and southern Methodist churches.

The eight delegates elected to represent the district were all opposed to unification and were: E. S. Hodges, Cyren; Mrs. Homer Williams, Thomasville; J. Frank Harris, Pavo; J. R. Pinson, Baconton; D. Owens, Albany; S. R. Cain, Cairo; J. D. Gardiner, Camilla; C. H. Cross, Colquitt. Alternates, W. C. Holman, Albany; W. J. Bush, Colquitt; W. R. Talley, Dixie; J. D. Haddock, Damascus.

This will make a solid delegation opposing unification.

The next meeting of the district conference will be held in Cairo.

Divert Air Passengers.

London, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—In the future airplane passengers who become bored while flying may be able to take in a movie during the voyage. One of the large Paris-London air expresses was recently equipped with a movie picture projector, and, during a trial flight, a film was flashed on a screen inside the cabin, with 12 passengers as spectators.

STEADY IMPROVEMENT AIM OF OLDS FACTORY

Following its announced policy of constant improvement without yearly changes in models, Olds Motor works has during the past year incorporated numerous mechanical revisions in the power plant and chassis of the Oldsmobile six. These changes have been in line with recent engineering development, and have resulted in even smoother and more powerful engine operation.

Adoption of low-pressure balloon tires has brought about a change in the steering mechanism so as to insure easy steering. At the same time the steering column has been made adjustable so that the wheel can be set at the correct height for any individual owner. Spark control has been made automatic, and with the elimination of the hand spark lever, the hand throttle has been removed from under the steering wheel and placed on top and in the center of the steering web

A change that will be much appreciated by automobile owners has brought about the elimination of the need for lubricating the clutch throwout bearing. This has been accomplished by substituting a compressed graphite bearing for the usual annular bearing, the graphite bearing being self lubricating.

The wheel base has been lengthened one-half inch, now being 110 1-2 inches. The frame has been further strengthened by increasing the size of the rear cross member which now completely covers and protects the gasoline tank.

Changes in the cooling system allows water to enter at both the front and rear of the cylinder block simultaneously, thus insuring the same temperature at all six cylinders under all running conditions. Ample space has been allowed for water circulation around the valve seats and barrels.

Other engine changes include a modification of the oiling system, which guarantees full lubrication as long as any oil remains in the well; added rigidity to the tappet cluster brackets and the lengthening of the connecting rods from 8 1-2 to 9 inches. Pressed-in bushings have been placed at the head of the riser from the carburetor, and heat may be applied around the riser as desired by the manipulation of a wing valve.

Several other minor changes have been incorporated, all tending to increase the smoothness of operation. Body designs remain unchanged, and Duco finish, introduced last summer, is continued on all models.

HUPMOBILE LEADS STRAIGHT-EIGHT FIELD

The new Hupmobile Eight is today America's largest selling motor car of the eight-in-line type, according to announcement made in Detroit yesterday by O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation.

Newcomer in the field of eights, it has taken Hupmobile only four months to reach first position in that class.

"Ever since its first display, when 400,000 people went to our various distributors' and dealers' showrooms to see the car within 30 hours—exceeding all previous records for interest—sales of the car have grown at a remarkably fast rate," Mr. Hutchinson said. "Output this month will be the largest yet reached. The car's unusual features have attracted to it more attention than has been accorded any new model in the last year or more, regardless of price.

"Reports from owners as to the remarkable results they are receiving from the eight continue to pour into the factory and our dealers. Its compactness, insuring easy parkability, its genuine ease of handling, unique smoothness and flexibility of operation and its dignified appearance, have created a wide appeal. With the Hupmobile reputation behind it, durability, freedom from service difficulties and operating economy have been taken for granted.

"Sales of the eight have already exceeded 5,000. Monthly orders are now beginning to approach 1,500, as the abilities of the car become more widely known."

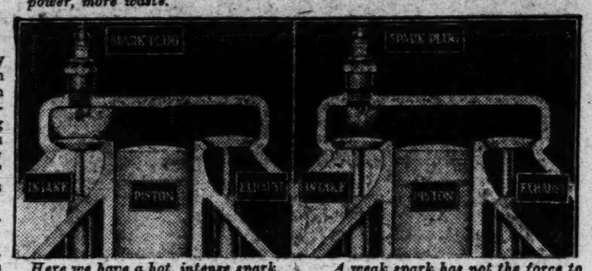
Government Gives a Spark Plug Lesson

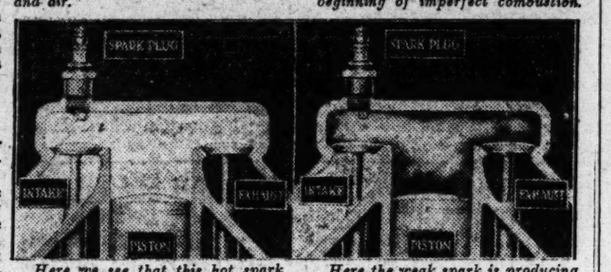
Tests Show Why Replacement Should Be Made Every 8,000 to 10,000 Miles

These pictures are worth studying. On the left is shown how a gasoline engine should operate to attain maximum power and economical operation. On the right is a lesson in inefficiency—less spark, less combustion, less power, more waste.



Here we have a hot, intense spark, igniting the cylinder mixture of gas and air.

A weak spark has not the force to fully ignite the mixture. This is the beginning of imperfect combustion.



Here we see that this hot spark has resulted in the cylinder mixture being entirely burned. Complete combustion shown by white.

Here the weak spark is producing so much slower burning that combustion is not completed, as at the left. White shows consumed gas.

Here the burned gas is being forced out through the exhaust valve (AA). Full power is shown, no live gas escaping.

Here loss of power shown by slow burning is confirmed because live gas is actually being expelled through the exhaust (AA)

UNCLE SAM has become vitally interested in the conservation of gasoline and has begun an educational program which is to embrace the entire range of gas saving ideas. To the spark plug the Bureau of Mines has devoted a photoplay called, "The Story of a Spark Plug." From this film come the illustrations and facts presented here.

A hot, intense spark means economy.

A hot, intense spark means power.

A hot, intense spark means a live engine.

When a spark plug loses intensity because of the great stress to which it is subjected in engine operation, it fails to give complete combustion of gas in the cylinder. These things then happen:

Power is lost.

The engine is sluggish.

Gasoline and oil is wasted.

The engine brought daily nearer to expensive overhauling and consequent loss of use of car.

The lesson to be learned is: "Watch your spark plugs." They are vital to good car service. The best engine in the best motor car in the world is no better than its spark plugs. It is real economy to inspect spark plugs frequently and to replace them just as soon as they show signs of a weak spark—generally somewhere between 8,000 and 10,000 miles.

Most car owners have little real conception of just how their engine operates. It is a widespread belief that a series of explosions, taking place in each cylinder, makes the engine run.

This is not true. What really happens is:

1 As the engine turns over, gasoline passes through the carburator where air is mixed with it, the mixture entering the cylinder in the form of a highly inflammable gas.

2 The valves close and the piston moves upward compressing this gaseous mixture.

3 At a certain point in the operation the compressed mixture is ignited by a spark leaping across the gap between the electrodes of the spark plug.

4 The gas burns with extreme rapidity and in burning expands, forcing down the piston and thus generating power.

When your engine does all these things in full vigor, i.e., with a hot, intense spark, you're getting economy and power. When there is poor or incomplete combustion there is waste in power, gas and oil. Study the pictures.

Revival at Gainesville.

Gainesville, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—A revival meeting, which began two weeks ago at Carey's chapel at Gainesville cotton mills, has developed into one of the most remarkable meetings ever held in this section of the state. Already 200 have professed religion, as many as 50 joining at one service.

Rev. I. J. Lovern, Methodist, and Rev. A. H. Holland, Baptist, are doing the preaching.

BUTLER 'Y' DRIVE TO OPEN MONDAY

The campaign for 500 new members to be added to the roll of the Butler Street branch of the Y. M. C. A., will begin Monday night and will run until May 30. The two teams, one representing the "Americans" and the other the "Nationals," are under Captains W. S. Cannon and H. C. Davis. Each team will wear an appropriate campaign button prepared for the drive.

S. S. Abrams, director of the campaign, is leaving no stone unturned to make the campaign a big success.

The campaign committee has just issued a report of the work done in this association for the past year.

Association Notes

BY C. V. HOHENSTEIN,
Executive Secretary.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association Thursday resolutions were unanimously adopted in support of the attitude taken by the Atlanta Garage association, a division of the automobile association, in opposition to the passage of an ordinance by the city of Atlanta which would require garages and service stations to report to the police department all automobiles entering their places of business which seem to bear signs of injury, accident damage, or having been engaged in criminal operations. It appeared that such an ordinance would place an undue hardship not only upon garages, but result in considerable inconvenience and embarrassment to motor-car owners. A special committee from the garage association, accompanied by a special committee from the board of directors, presented resolutions of the automobile association opposing the adoption of such an ordinance, and upon a full hearing before the ordinance committee of city council the matter was adversed.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association Thursday the board unanimously approved and accepted the offer made by Bolling H. Jones, proprietor of the Ivy Street garage, whereby the automobile dealers and allied trade lines of the automobile association will exhibit in the Ivy Street garage automobiles, accessories, etc., during the opening of the garage the week of June 2.

The Ivy Street garage, back of the Hurt building, is one of the largest and best equipped garages in the world. The opening will be extensively advertised, special music will be provided, and with the added attraction of what will amount to practically a complete automobile show, it is expected that thousands of visitors will visit the garage during the opening week.

The Atlanta Automobile association, at its board of directors' meeting Thursday, went on record as favoring a state-wide law passed by the state requiring drivers of automobiles to secure a license indicating their fitness to drive a car. The board of directors also went on record as being opposed to the passage of a municipal ordinance by the city of Atlanta requiring drivers of automobiles to secure a license, because the proposition could not be handled fully, completely, and satisfactorily through the medium of a city ordinance.

New Price for HUDSON COACH (Was $1345)

Today's Hudson Super-Six Coach costs less than half the price at which the open models have sold. With the world's largest production of 6-cylinder cars, quality is constantly improved and therefore Hudson is more than ever

"The World's Greatest Buy"

Hudson's leadership is based upon ten years' concentration in refining a great car around the famous Super-Six motor. This exclusive invention added 80% to motor efficiency, yielding 76 horsepower without added weight, size or cost. It almost doubled car endurance. No design, however costly, has been found to excel Super-Six smoothness, reliability and performance.

There has been constant improvement in every detail. Easier steering, greater roadability, more comfort, better materials, finer workmanship, handsomer appearance, and more lasting finish. In all ways it is the greatest Hudson and the lowest priced Hudson.

HUDSON SUPER-SIX SEDAN
5 Passenger $1695 (was $1795)—7 Passenger $1795 (was $1895)

BAGGS-LANKFORD FIRM SIGNS BILL M'GOWAN

Bill McGowan, well-known in southern heavy-weight boxing circles, has quit the ring for the time being and is now connected with the Baggs-Lankford Motor company, Ford dealers, at 137 South Pryor street, it was announced Saturday.

"Billy has started off with a bang," an official of the company said," and is setting a fast pace for some of our old men."

McGowan is a native Georgian, heralding from Dublin, in Laurens county. He has been in Atlanta for the past two years and has fought some of the best heavyweights in the country. His most recent setto was with Slattery, the Buffalo, N. Y., scrapper. Billy lost, but only after he had floored Slattery in the first round and pounded him severely.

Bill will be glad to see is friends at his new office.

Pierce-Arrow Again Makes Half-Million Reduction in Loans

Buffalo, N. Y., May 16.—President Myron E. Forbes, of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company, announced yesterday the payment of another half-million dollars of the company's bank loans, which reduces the total outstanding bank loans to $1,200,000. This is the second payment of $500,000 within two weeks. Cash on hand at the close of the day's business was $1,849,792.55.

The strength of the company's financial position is brought more sharply into view when it is recalled that in April, 1923, the company's indebtedness totalled $3,500,000, at that time secured by first mortgage bonds.

Under President Forbes' management the company not only has reduced its loans to the present low mark, but has expended more than $1,000,000 in machinery and tool equipment for the production of the moderately priced car which was introduced last year. In addition to this the company invested $625,000 in its finance corporation, besides providing the substantial cash expenditures necessary for the establishment of factory sales branches in Boston and Chicago.

The company's big plant at Buffalo is operating on full schedules to meet the demand for its passenger cars, motor trucks and motor busses, which is the largest in the history of the company's domestic business.

CO-OP ASSOCIATIONS WILL STUDY CREDITS

Washington, May 16.—Credit problems of cooperative associations, both from the viewpoint of the borrower and the lender, will be considered at the summer session of the American Institute of Cooperation at the University of Pennsylvania, July 20 to August 15, Nationally-known authorities on cooperative business will address the convention.

Reviewing the rapid rise of cooperative associations in the United States, the institute in a statement issued here tonight said that, on the basis of a preliminary report being compiled by the department of agriculture, the amount of business done by such association in 1924 will reach $2,500,000,000, an increase of approximately $300,000,000 over 1921. The associations now number more than 12,000, with a membership of about 2,500,000.

DOBBS SELLS MANY HEAVY DUTY TIRES

"Newspaper advertising certainly does bring results—that's the way to put 'em over," says Jim Dobbs, of the Dobbs Tire company, when asked as to how the public had responded to the advertising of the Goodyear Heavy Duty cord tires—the latest product of the Goodyear plant.

"This heavy duty idea seems to have come at a time when everybody was, or thought he was, a hard driver. We have had inquiries and sold tires for practically all classes of cars and literally have our place littered with old tires which we have displaced with them."

A very strong appeal in this new tire is to the man who owns and operates delivery trucks in the city. Delivery wagons are subject to the very hardest of service; stops and starts constantly and always running on the pavement which is equivalent to the abrasion of a grindstone, particularly the cement pavements.

One prominent owner of delivery trucks, the Red Rock company, has just adopted Goodyear heavy duty cords and placed them on their new trucks delivering bottled drinks in and around Atlanta. This firm's tire bill is enormous and it is expected that with the adoption of the new tire the savings in this department will be considerable.

Rows of Cheap Houses Are Being Erected On Historic Site

Washington, May 16.—Voracious real estate dealers are putting up dreary rows of cheap houses on the historic site of Fort Stevens, where Abraham Lincoln went to watch the Union soldiers hold off the Confederates who were beleaguering the capital in the darkest days of the war.

The critical battle came July 11, 1864, when General Early, who had brought his Confederates up the Shenandoah Valley to attack the city, assaulted Fort Stevens, one of a ring of 68 forts which were thrown up to protect Washington. The site now fronts on Georgia avenue, near Walter Reed hospital.

Lincoln witnessed the engagement and for a brief time was actually under fire. An army surgeon standing nearby was wounded.

WAYNESBORO BUILDS NEW MODERN HOTEL

Waynesboro, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—E. E. Chance, of Waynesboro, is building a new hotel that will represent an investment of about $150,000 on the old Arlington hotel site. The contract has been let to J. M. Mobley and the work has begun. The hotel when finished will contain 50 rooms, steam heat, baths, and all the appurtenances of a modern hotel.

This new hotel will fill a long-felt need in Waynesboro. It will be open t the public in the early fall.

STEADY SALES INCREASE REPORTED BY MARMON

April sales of Marmon cars showed an increase of 91 per cent over sales in April, 1924, and continued the consistent and record breaking sales climb begun when the new Marmon models were announced last November, according to information received by Marmon Atlanta company, local Marmon dealer, from the Nordyke & Marmon company factory in Indianapolis. Factory shipments have increased accordingly and the present outlook points to an increase in shipments in May, over May, 1924, of not less than 250 per cent.

Records show that sales and shipments of Marmon cars since the first of the year have increased steadily and in some instances have reached new high points. Retail sales in March were greater than in any March since 1920 and were greater by 45 per cent than the sales in February, the preceding month. The best evidence of the popularity of the new Marmon models is gained from statistics recently gathered which show that many of the largest Marmon dealers and distributors have sold so far this year as many and in some cases more Marmon cars than were sold in their territories during the entire year of 1924.

Officials of the Nordyke & Marmon company who have spent much time on the road since the first of the year visiting dealers and distributors and studying trade conditions have given exceedingly optimistic reports of the future. Colonel E. S. Gorrell, vice president in charge of sales and service, recently returned from a trip through the far west and H. H. Brooks, sales manager, has returned from an eastern trip. The close relation thus established between the executive branch of the factory organization and the dealer and distributor organization has enabled the factory officials to obtain at first hand actual evidence of the acceptance of the new Marmon models by the public.

"Before the beginning of the spring selling season, Marmon had passed marks in retail sales established in former years at the height of the spring season," said Mr. Thompson. "The future holds promise of new sales marks. Although the factory is at capacity production, it has scores of unfilled orders on its books. The factory has had more driveaways in the last few weeks than in any similar period in its history. Marmon owners have traveled great distances to the factory to obtain cars and have driven them to their homes even, in some instances, when the trips occupied more than a week's time.

"A number of months ago we said the sun was shining on Marmon. It is shining now on Marmon with greater intensity than ever before. The future, indeed, is promising."

In addition to the announcement of the April sales record, Nordyke & Marmon company announced that it is exhibiting on its showroom floor at the factory the Marmon "Wasp" the original one-man racing car which won the Memorial day race on the Indianapolis speedway in 1911, and the original Marmon—Marmon No. 1—which is of interest when compared with the limousines which also are on display. The display was arranged in connection with the preparations for the "open house" to race drivers, Marmon owners and others which is held each year at the time of the Memorial day race.

Senior Class of Hearn Stages Successfully A Dramatic Production

Cave Spring, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—The senior class of Hearn academy presented the well-known play, "The Path Over the Hill," to a large audience in the auditorium of the Consolidated School building, Saturday evening. The play was under the direction of Miss Willie Ruth McKinney, a member of the faculty and a resident of Cave Spring. Miss McKinney is a graduate of Brenau college, and in the training of the actors in the difficult cast she sustained the reputation of Brenau's dramatic department.

The parts of Miss Minnie Hintz, as "Ruth Conrad;" Cleveland Barrett, as "Robert Post," and Tom Collins, as "Granddad Crawford," were especially notable. Two negro impersonations added a touch of genuine comedy. The play in every way was a success and the academy is to be congratulated on the seniors' creditable performance.

Entertainments in Vienna.

Vienna, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Denying that Vienna is dead socially, Herr Breitner, city councillor, declares there were 7,120 entertainments in the city between January 1 and March 20. All paid amusement taxes despite the economic crisis through which Austria is passing.

Scots Desert Porridge.

Edinburgh, May 16.—Ham and eggs have replaced porridge as the popular breakfast dish in Scotland. The decline of the use of porridge, it was brought out recently at a board of agriculture inquiry, is attributed to a change in the national diet and began 10 or 12 years ago.

HUDSON, ESSEX BREAK PRODUCTION RECORD

The biggest month's production of six cylinder cars in the history of the industry was scored in April by the Hudson-Essex organization, according to officials, who announced that 24,000 Hudson and Essex cars were made and shipped.

Even this production, according to word received by J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.-Grant Co., distributor for Hudson and Essex in this city, was far from sufficient to meet the enormous demand which has developed all over the country. Mr. Goldsmith said that he could use 50 per cent more cars than are coming to him, and that he is doing everything in his power to obtain cars for immediate delivery.

"Our business has been most active all spring," he said, "but it was still further increased when the price on Hudson Super-Six cars was reduced to the lowest point in the history of these cars. The public knows of the Hudson Super-Six as one of the world's fine cars; and this price reduction made it also a car with a most moderate price. The Super-Six coach now sells at less than half as much as the Hudson open cars of only a few years ago, and yet the present Hudson car is superior in every detail to the products of former years.

"This betterment in every detail and this reduction of price have been made possible simultaneously because of the vastly increased Hudson-Essex business. Hudson-Essex is now by far the largest six-cylinder manufacturer in the world, and is one of the five companies in the industry making 1,000 car a day or more.

"The reduction in the price of the Hudson Super-Six is simply an instance of how the benefits of this great volume of business are passed on to the public.

"Better quality, lower prices when possible, and superior values are the keystones of the policy which have brought Hudson-Essex to six-cylinder leadership. The specialization on coaches has helped vitally in manufacturing economy. Ninety per cent of business is in Hudson and Essex coaches.

"May and June look like wonderful automobile months. Cars like Hudson and Essex which offer great values and which therefore deserve success, are going to continue to have good business right through the whole year."

Franklin Production Reaches Highest Point With May Schedule

Syracuse, May 16.—Franklin production, which is being regulated entirely by orders, exceeded the 1,000 mark in April. Schedule for May calls for an increase of 10 per cent, and for June a still further increase.

Franklin's unfilled orders on May 1 were enough to take up production to July 15. They have now reached the highest point since the introduction of the new style car and are steadily increasing despite the increase in shipments.

Indicative of the determination of dealers and owners to obtain quick delivery is the report that 34 per cent of the firm's shipment since March 1 have been factory driveways, with either dealer or customer coming to Syracuse for the car.

Triple Action
Shock Absorber
for Fords

The Correct Combination

Wagner "Triple Action" Control with Balloon Tires

TO get the full benefit of balloon tires, you should use Shock Absorbers that will permit the easy cushioning action for which balloons are designed, but will control the galloping and rolling at high speeds.

That is what Wagner "Triple Action" does. Wagners control when control is needed, and allow full play of springs and tires when full play is necessary to comfortable riding.

The Central Friction Head with the Two Arms—an exclusive feature of Wagner Shock Absorbers—retarding or snubbing both ways, down and up, completely and smoothly stops the galloping or pitching caused by balloon tires. It eases these severe actions and checks the spring rebound; traveling at high speeds is made safe and comfortable. Body roll and sidesway are effectively but gently eliminated.

Wagners are the only Shock Absorbers that correctly control the action of balloon tires, and still permit them to function properly.

This combination—Wagner Triple Action Shock Absorbers with balloon tires can't be beat for real riding comfort. Installed in 30 minutes. See your Ford or accessory dealer today, or send us the coupon below.

BOSCH OFFERING UNUSUAL POWER TO FORD OWNERS

Magneto Service Station Distributes Popular Line to Many Satisfied Owners of Cars.

Automobile owners are complimenting the effects produced by the additional power afforded to Ford engines by means of the Bosch ignition equipment which is installed by the Magneto Service station, at 518 and 520 Peachtree street, Atlanta. This Bosch line is said to give to Ford owners as high-class and dependable ignition as will be found in many of the higher-priced cars.

The Bosch ignition system for Fords, known as "Type 600," has been entirely redesigned, and many improvements incorporated. The system, as now offered to the trade, has so many changes that it virtually constitutes an entirely new system.

The spark advance in the new Bosch-Ford ignition system is fully automatic, being controlled by an ingenious new governor, designed and built especially to suit the Ford engine characteristics. When the new type 600 is installed on a Ford engine, the Ford spark lever is disconnected altogether, because it is not used at any time—even when starting.

The new system provides for timing at the head—an improvement which greatly simplifies and expedites the installation, and makes it possible to time the system quickly while the engine is running.

To time the system, it is only necessary to grasp the head of the unit (which contains the interrupter mechanism) and rotate it against the cam. When it is rotated to the point which gives the smoothiest firing of the engine, you tighten the screw in the clamp, and the timing is completed. No amount of vibration can develop looseness of the head, or throw the unit out of timing.

Another new feature of the improved type 600 system is a small key on the distributor cap, and a keyway on the interrupter housing. These insure correct location of the cam. Similarly, correct location of the rotor is insured by a flat on the top of the governor shaft, and a corresponding flat-sided hole in the shank of the rotor. A tight fit of the rotor is assured by the spring slot in the top of the governor shaft.

Good ground between the interrupter cup and its housing is assured by two springs on the side of the cup. This insures a tight fit at all times.

The interrupter mechanism used with this system is exactly the same as that supplied with the standard Bosch systems when supplied to the leading car manufacturers. The same is true of the distributor cap, which has unusually high towers to prevent current leakage.

Even the appearance of the system has been changed, the head of the new type 600 being finished in a bright red, while the rest of the unit has a black satin finish. This makes the whole system unusually attractive, and it is especially helpful in making displays in show windows, showcases and on the dealer's counter.

Georgia Manufacturers See Atlanta as Industrial City

Members of Association Are Impressed by Activities and Predict Great Progress in State.

At the tenth annual convention of the Georgia Manufacturers' association, delegates from various sections last week enjoyed an opportunity to inspect Atlanta as an industrial center. Confidence was expressed in the future of the city and in the coming of agricultural prosperity to the state at large.

The principal address of the final dinner was delivered by Eugene R. Black, president of the Atlanta Trust company, head of Atlanta's great Community Chest campaign and director of the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta. Mr. Black was honor guest of the association.

Mr Black discussed the subject "What's the Matter With Georgia?" and he did not mince words in giving his views of what must be done, what has been done and what has not been done in this state to move Georgia forward or to hamper it in its progress.

"The time has come when our faith in our state is to be put to the test," he said. "What are you business men going to do?"

Mr. Black then told the business men what he believed should be done.

"You have got to get around a table and face this problem squarely," he stated: "You've got to work out a fair tax program that will give Georgia what Georgia needs and deserves. You've got to resuscitate the farmer of this state before you can help yourselves. You've got to put your state educational institutions in a position where they can compete with the institutions of other states. You've got to give your peach-growers, your diversifying farmers, your apple-growers and your melon-growers adequate marketing facilities. When you do this you will have a state."

Mr. Black told of recent visits to North Carolina and Florida and of the wonderful progress he found in both states.

"We can talk all we want to about the boom bursting, but you won't hear the people of North Carolina talking about the North Carolina boom bursting and you won't hear Florida people talk about the Florida boom bursting. They are working as one man for their states. They have faith in their states. North Carolinians are building North Carolina and Floridians are building Florida."

Mr. Black then told a story in contrast of a visit to Early county, where he was scheduled to deliver an address. He was entertained by an old friend who introduced him to the audience.

"He presented me to the crowd with the remark that he had lost faith in Early county and was going to move to Florida. That caused me to wonder if we have lost faith in Georgia," he said.

Mr. Black said the agricultural problem is the one big problem that must be solved first if Georgia farmers are to get back on their feet.

"Farmers have had four years of famine and we can't expect them to come back in one year. They will do well to come back in four years. When the farmer comes back, the whole state will come back, and the farm values of old will be restored. One solution of the farm problem lies with the individual farmer. He must work and he must economize. The United States government in my opinion has done too much for farmers. The government has petted and spoiled us. Wherever you find a farm in Georgia pot mortgaged you can hardly find money enough to buy that farm. It is only the distressed farm lands that show falling values. When we say farm lands in Georgia have no fixed value we are talking about distressed farm lands and not the farm lands free of mortgages and debt."

Mr. Black urged busines men to take more interest in public affairs of the state. He said there has been only one change made in the tax laws of the state in 48 years and this was creation of an assessment board. He said that the legislature immediately took the teeth out of that law.

Educational institutions are in a starving condition, according to Mr. Black, who cited cases where students are paying tuition to attend state institutions.

"If students were not supporting our state institutions, they would have to close tomorrow," he said.

He urged business men to aid farmers in putting farms on a business basis.

"I am not a pessimist," he concluded. "I believe there is a great future for Georgia. I would not swap one red nill of Georgia for all the sand hills in Florida. Our fathers did well with Georgia. They did not cry and they did not quit. I have supreme faith in Georgia. From now on, we will fight not so much for self but for our state."

VOL. LVII., No. 338. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1925.

Thousands of Yards of Summer Cottons Specially Priced!

Days are waxing warm in Dixie! Thoughts are turning swiftly toward cool, light frocks — frocks that will tub again and again and still be pretty—frocks of lovely summery cottons. You'll need a whole armful of them. And —when you once get inside of Keely's immense Cotton Goods Room, a great surprise awaits you. You'll find so many delightful cotton fabrics to choose from—at such astonishingly little prices—that you can buy all the dresses you need for summer and still have spent very little money. Below are just some of the many things you'll find specially priced tomorrow in Keely's Cotton Section to prove our statement.

She Must Graduate in Footwear of White

Her graduation day is going to be to her—the Day of Days! Everything must be perfect from the tip of her sleek little head to the toe of her immaculate white shoes—the very shoes of which we write.

She'll want them to be unusual in style, to be different. They will be, if she chooses them at Keely's, for Keely's takes pains to choose shoes a bit out of the ordinary.

At $10 to $12.50

She'll find novelty step-ins, cut-outs and pretty strap styles of the finest white glazed kid. In all white or white with patent leather inlays. Heels are high or low.

Fine White Silk Hose for Commencement Day

To match her white shoes, she must have gleaming white silk hosiery of fine texture. From long years of experience in outfitting the girl graduate, Keely's knows just what she wants and suggests these appropriate white stockings from its stocks of well-known brands.

To $3.50 Qualities

Silk Prints $1.98

You couldn't choose a silk more fashionable than printed silk for that new dress you're planning. And think how little your frock is going to cost if you choose it from this special lot tomorrow at Keely's.

Printed crepe in a wide variety of designs to choose from—dots, spots, floral and vine patterns, odd tracery designs and conventional effects. Just about any color and color combination you choose to seek. 40 inches in width.

54-inch Silk Prints $6.75 to $8.95

Some of Fashion's most striking dresses are made from these! The border is used at the bottom of the frock and it gradually diminishes into a solid tone at the shoulders and neck.

This is a new shipment just in and they come in a wide variety of colors. Takes just a yard and a half for a dress!

White Silks for Graduation Frocks

Crepe de chine and flat crepe of pure white will be the silks most widely used for the graduation frock. You'll find Keely's well prepared with just the quality you want to find. Many different grades to choose from. 40-inch. $1.98 to $3.50 yard.

Solving the Graduation Gift Problem With

Silk Underwear

Just another week or so and she graduates. You've been wondering what to give her. You can't go wrong if you decide to give her a dainty piece of silk underwear. All girls adore it. They can't get too much of it. If you come to Keely's tomorrow, you'll be able to choose your gift at a special price!

$5 Quality Crepe de Chine Gowns Are $3.95

Made of a splendid heavy quality of crepe de chine in a variety of styles. Some of them are all frilly with lace and net, some have inserted stripes of Valenciennes lace, some have medallions and insertions of real filet—and some are in plain tailored style with band top caught with ribbon flowers. In green, flesh, peach and maize.

Georgette Teddies, $4.95

Specially priced, but you'd know it the minute you saw them. They're especially pretty with their pleated-in tucks, their inserted laces and their ribbon sashes to hold the pleats in place. In a variety of styles—flesh, peach, blue, orchid and green.

Silk Teddies, $3.95-$4.95

Lovely things of heavy crepe de chine and satin. Trimmed with embroidered net, lace and net footing. Straight styles and tight waist styles with full skirts. Peach, flesh, maize and Nile.

SELF DENIAL—Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. Mark 8:34, 35.

PRAYER—We thank Thee, O Lord, for the lesson so marvelously illustrated in Thy life: except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit.

THE BIG PROBLEM.

While the enforcement fleet holds the so-called "rum row" in a tight blockade off the New Jersey coast, at enormous expense, another rum-fleet is outwitting the few patrol boats in the enforcement service along the Pacific coast—the smuggling ships being of the transoceanic liner types, loaded with immense cargoes of the contraband.

While the prohibition navy is concentrated in the New York, Atlantic City blockade, the great Atlantic and gulf coasts, reaching two-thirds around the American continent, are comparatively open, or certainly in their normal condition of resistance only.

When one takes these facts into consideration, with the further fact that the Canadian-American border is 700 miles long, approximately, and that the Mexican border is 900 miles long, both of which are but poorly patrolled at best, it is not difficult to see that, in the fundamental purpose of putting a stop to illegal whisky importations into the United States as a whole, the seige off New York is of itself of little practical or potential service.

As a matter of fact it is an old strategy in war to concentrate the ehemy fire so as to relieve other avenues of advance. Analyzing the situation from a cold-blooded standpoint of effectiveness, it is debatable as to whether the New York blockade is not in reality assisting the whisky smugglers to quietly slip in at other ports not in the blockade, and at least in making shoal landings with small boats.

The analytical mind, appraising the situation from a cold-blooded standpoint will go further. The overwhelming volume of whisky, or other intoxicating concoctions, consumed in this country is made in this country.

The blockade at New York does not touch that situation, which is really the most alarming, for "home-made hooch" is usually the rankest of poisons, and is exacting a greater toll of life today and every day, than was ever exacted in relative time by any war in any country. It tears down the manpower, impairs business and industry, and strikes deeply at the morals, especially of the young.

If such a thing as making the sea and land both secure at one time from smuggling invasion, the wealthy tipster would merely have to cultivate the taste for "white lightning," or some of the other half hundred named varieties of "booze" that come out of the valleys from among the hills, the swamps in the lowlands and the cellars and blind alleys of the towns and cities.

The law against trafficking in, making and possessing intoxicating liquors in the United States should be rigidly enforced, but it not only is not enforced, but the situation is not improving.

The Detroit Free Press, one of the great newspapers of the middle northwest, published in the shadow of the Canadian border, has been and is one of the strongest and most earnest advocates of enforcement in the United States. It frankly admits that enforcement thus far is a monumental failure. In a recent editorial it says:

"Enforcement of the prohibition law has utterly fallen down.

"Millions of people in the United States, including a large proportion of 'best citizens' and many officials of high station and large responsibilities, are open and persistent violators of the dry law. Judges ascend the bench after drinking bouts to try other men for doing what they themselves have just been doing.

"The nation as a whole has repudiated prohibition.

"It is a sad, depressing and disappointing fact that the 18th amendment has brought no blessing to the youth of America. It is a fair contention that on the contrary it has brought a curse.

"The fearful increase of drinking and the consequent deterioration of morals and standards, to say nothing of health, among boys and girls of high school age, and even of more tender years since the reign of the bootlegger commenced, is as deplorable an evil as ever has fallen on this country.

"We are a nation of hypocrites and habitual law breakers. Our youth is being ruined."

This is strong language, and is perhaps inspired by conditions in Michigan that are more extreme than in this section and yet it is foolish to argue that prohibition is a success in Georgia—or in any other state in the union. It is foolish to argue that the hip-pocket flask—usually of the "home-made brew" that is sold by walking bootleggers in almost every block of any city, and even in the smallest of rural communities—is not striking most alarmingly at the morals of the young. The highways are menaced by rum-runners. The streets are unsafe from whisky-fired drivers. It is so in Detroit, and it is so in Atlanta.

The Free Press goes further:

"Reluctantly this newspaper arrives at the conviction that the 18th amendment was a fearful error, and that the most pressing domestic problem before the United States today is how to get rid of prohibition in its present extreme form and substitute for it moderate but effective liquor legislation that will have the support of public sentiment and above all will save the youth of the nation from its present peril."

We cannot agree that the amendment was "a fearful error." Public sentiment sustains it. That is evident at every election certainly. But the public that honestly believes in prohibition does not honestly cooperate in its enforcement.

In the operation of the prohibition law too much is expected of the law by the public, without the cooperation of the same public in making the law efficient.

Prohibition enforcement, to become efficient, must begin with the individual conscience, and the individual home.

It is a great problem, and one that must be met. But one cannot meet it by shutting one's eyes to the facts as they exist.

Did the country go too far in the adoption of the eighteenth amendment?

That is the question to be answered. If "yes," the remedy must be found in the enactment of legislation that will have the support of the public back of it. If "no," the law, as it stands, must be enforced at any cost.

THE HARVEY CASE.

Ex-Governor Wilson G. Harvey, of South Carolina, in pleading guilty to a technical violation of the banking law and paying the nominal fine of $400, imposed by the judge—which was paid, by the way, by friends who refused to let him pay it—displayed the elements of manhood and character that are worthy of emulation.

During his term of office as lieutenant governor, his bank which he organized about 29 years ago, together with some five other local banks, yielded to the depressed conditions of 1921 and 1922, when the closing of European markets precipitated serious economic conditions in this country, and especially in the cotton states.

By reason of his prominence some of his factional political enemies seized the opportunity for reprisal, and charges of violation of banking laws were filed.

It is alleged, and very probably correctly, that conviction on any of the counts was never anticipated, but the publicity of the prosecutions was looked upon by political enemies as punishment sufficient to destroy him as a political factor. In the first two trials, the second resulting, it is alleged, from the unsatisfied determination of enemies to carry the persecution of the former governor to the extreme, he was promptly acquitted. The final indictment was brought at Allendale, and involved only a technical violation of the banking law—that his bank had loaned to a corporation, of which he was a stockholder, more than the $7,500 maximum provided by law. Governor Harvey declared that he could not conscientiously contest such a charge, and made the "guilty" plea to the technical violation in order to save the expense of a trial, and to courageously do what his conscience dictated as the right and scrupulous thing. The charges did not involve the moral turpitude of the defendant at any time.

Judge Wilson in imposing the nominal fine, as was necessary under the law in view of the plea, made the following statement:

"I must say that this is the manly thing to do. You have heretofore been known in private and public life as a manly and courageous man and at this trying time you have again shown yourself a man. I approve of your conduct and I will be just as lenient as I possibly can under the circumstances. You are sensible, however, that as judge I cannot treat the matter too lightly . . .

"I must say that you have done the manly thing I repeat, not to come up and take the chances of a long trial; well aware that you are technically guilty, you have not come here and asked a jury to find for you contrary to the facts. That would have been wrong. But you have taken the proper and manly step and the people of South Carolina, I believe, will so consider it."

In the financial difficulties that overtook Governor Harvey in the dark days of the 1921-23 depression he lost heavily, his own large estate yielding to his frantic efforts to save the investors and depositors in his bank. Much was saved for them to his personal sacrifice. That the end of the persecution of him has been reached, and that Governor Harvey stands without a blot against his moral character, is gratifying to his hosts of friends in South Carolina, Georgia and throughout the south.

GEORGIA IS THERE!

The Southern exposition is in full swing at the Grand Central Palace in New York. Thousands of people from all sections of the world are flocking to see the exhibits, according to dispatches.

Georgia is not only there, but according to dispatches, is making a splendid showing in comparison with the other of her sister states.

Says a dispatch to The Constitution:

"Atlanta and Georgia are prominently and creditably represented. The main Atlanta booth is in the hands of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. It is one of the largest and most complete in the exposition, stressing not only the vastness and variety of Atlanta's manufactories, but also including a striking pictorial display, with elaborate maps and data. Georgia's mineral and agricultural resources are set forth commandingly in specimens and interesting literature."

A replica of Stone Mountain, which is a part of the Georgia exhibit, is attracting thousands of people daily.

The Constitution earnestly urged this exhibit and feels already that as a result of the same, creditable as it is, Georgia will reap a rich harvest from the human tide that has now turned southward.

SOUTH OF TOMORROW.

It was a notable address that Theodore Price, editor of Commerce and Finance, of New York, made at the convention of the Atlantic Cotton association in Savannah.

He is a southerner whose recognized talents have been devoted for more than a generation to agricultural economics with a special study of statistical cotton.

But Mr. Price did not discuss cotton further than to commend the south for its present tendency to break away from the single crop slavery that held it in its clutches so long as cotton was regarded as the one and only money crop.

The speaker is quoted as saying:

"It is no longer true that 'cotton is king,' as first proclaimed by Senator Hammond, of South Carolina, in 1858. The socalled cotton states have been emancipated from the tyranny of that merciless ruler. He now governs only by consent of the governed and the delusion that his sovereignty gave his subjects the power 'to compel the allegiance of the world and bring a subsidy from every nation on earth' is gone.

"But in its stead has come a vast improvement in economic conditions. Comparing the past with the present it is quite natural that we should ask whether the past was more desirable than the present and whether the material progress achieved has involved the sacrifice of anything more essential: I cannot see that this is the case.

"I do not share and never have shared the apprehension that is felt in some quarters lest the south soon become less agricultural. The south has become intelligent, discriminating and independent.

"The south of tomorrow will be as much ahead of the south of today as the latter is ahead of the south of yesterday."

The emancipation of the southern farmer from cotton slavery has accentuated those conditions that Mr. Price sees as so favorable for the tomorrow. The system of balancing has resulted from education, and from the application of sounder business methods to farming—that is to say, the making of farming as a producing industry, as much a business as that of the conduct of an industry for converting the raw into the finished.

The progress of the south has been rapid, but every economist of note in America, including Mr. Price, sees in the future the growth of the south, along every material line, at a more rapid pace than is recorded for any section of this country at any time.

The system of more intensive cultivation has been largely responsible for this agricultural progress. The old days of the plantation of broad acres have given way to the new days of less acres to the given product, but more production per acre. This makes the balanced program possible, for with 40 acres under intensive weevil-control cultivation making more raw cotton than 100 acres formerly made, it is easy to see that the 60 acres of surplus land can be utilized in the growing of those commodities that the proceeds from the entire cotton farm of 100 acres formerly had to be used in purchasing.

Better schools, better roads by which the urban and rural populations can be brought together, better living conditions, better community spirit, more inviting farm life and business and science applied to farming—these are the present-day tendencies that are combining to make the south the most attractive section of the United States.

REOPEN COX COLLEGE.

It is hoped that the efforts to reopen Cox college at College Park may succeed. It is magnificently located, and the buildings and equipment are ample for an institution of a high curriculum carrying an enrollment of from 200 to 250 boarding students.

Cox college should be made an advanced institution for women, featuring particularly those cultural courses in which Atlanta has taken, in recent years, such conspicuous leadership — music, art, drama.

For many years this institution stood for the best in the educational training of girls. Some of the south's most distinguished women are members of the alumnae.

The financial or other reasons for its closing need not be discussed. There is a place for the institution, especially if reorganized along the lines suggested.

DR. AND MRS. B. W. HUNT.

Dr. and Mrs. B. W. Hunt, of Eatonton, will today celebrate the 49th anniversary of their wedding. Dr. Hunt will enjoy the additional privilege of celebrating his own birthday.

Any couple that has traveled along life's path together for nearly a half century, checking against all but one of 50 milestones, cannot be young in years.

But service is neither measured, nor arrested, by age. In usefulness, not only to his fellow man but to his state and section, Dr. Hunt is as virile and vigorous and active and resourceful today as in the dark days of Georgia's reconstruction from civil war, when he began to serve as a state and community builder in the spirit of a new south—a service to which his talents have been dedicated ever since, and in which his big, unselfish heart has found its greatest comfort. He is the father of the agricultural reconstruction of Georgia. To him is largely due the credit for having initiated pure bred stock growing in the state. His foresight and resources brought into action Georgia's first creamery. In every progressive, forward-looking movement for the advancement of Georgia he has been a potential factor for more than half a century. He was born in New York. He moved to Georgia after the war. He entered heartily, confidently and in the right spirit in the state's agricultural and economic reconstruction. No native son has given more unselfishly to the state's welfare, nor is there a native Georgian who loves Georgia better.

The love of this dear old couple for each other, unbroken and unscarred during all of their long and inspiring association, is as proverbial among their large circle of friends as that of Robert and Elizabeth Browning. May the link remain welded for years yet to come.

Our sincere good wishes go out to Dr. and Mrs. Hunt—as lovable and as well loved a couple as there is in Georgia.

PLEDGE OF SECURITY.

In his address opening the "finals" of the national oratorical contest on the subject of the federal constitution, President Coolidge said:

"Turning our eyes to the future, who can doubt that these studies of the underlying elements of our government constitute a pledge of security for those institutions in all the years to come?"

The young speakers were the survivors, through various stages of sifting, of more than 1,500,000 pupils in 12,216 American high schools, that many having participated in the original local contests throughout the United States. Georgians will recall the intense interest shown in these studies and contests in this state recently.

The significance of this contest, forcing as it did a close study of the constitution by a million and a half boys and girls upon whom the responsibilities in government as well as in finance, industry and commerce, will rest, cannot be overestimated. The president caught the significance, and emphasized it in his characteristic, incisive speech.

These boys and girls have learned what every high school ought to teach from this time forward—the true nature of American institutions, not alone as regards the general scheme of government, but respecting the constitutional guarantees of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Under these guarantees the American citizen has reached a standard of living attained no where else on earth.

The speeding autoist frequently gives the train the right-of-way, but the innocent pedestrian rarely escapes.

Recently the Prince of Wales composed a poem and, worse than that, he read it to a crowd that couldn't get away.

The Farewell Door

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

I.

We drift away
In darkness, dreaming of Eternal day;
From the dim valley to the hills of light,
Life the red rose, and Death that wears the white,—
Bids life and love goodnight!

II.

We drift away
From stormy winter and from love-born May,
Victor or vanquished in the ended strife,—
To ruined gardens, with the red thorns rife,
Give back the Rose of Life!

III.

Yet, Dear, be this
Life's recompense:—Your hand to clasp and kiss:
To dream in your dear eyes that made the bright
Of Morning when life's storms put stars to flight,—
To dream, and kiss Goodnight.

Among Us Georgians

Some Observations

BY W. C. WOODALL.

Old colonel—, of a Georgia town that shall be nameless here, was about played out. A lawyer of force and brilliance in his prime, time and other things had done their work only too well, and at 77 he was just the mental and physical specter of the man who a quarter-century before had thrilled juries in that court; and, what was even more important, had secured the signature of their foremen to the right sort of verdict on the dotted line.

One day old Colonel Blackstone, as we shall call him, strolled down to the courthouse, the scene of his former glory. As he entered the courtroom a negro was being arraigned for some minor offense. He had no lawyer and the court was casting about for an attorney to defend him.

"I am going to provide counsel for you," said the judge to the defendant. "Fortunately, Colonel Blackstone, one of the oldest and most distinguished members of this bar has just entered the courtroom, and you will have the benefit of his able advice and defense."

The case went to trial. Evidence was circumstantial, although the negro probably was guilty. Colonel Blackstone asked the witnesses a few rather aimless questions when cross-examination time came, and then made a short and decidedly rambling argument. To older attendants on the court who recalled his former brilliance, the scene was almost pathetic.

The charge, as we say, was not particularly serious, the evidence was almost altogether circumstantial. The jury retired, quickly formed and executed a pleasant little conspiracy, and within five minutes returned to the courtroom—bringing in a verdict of "Not Guilty!"

It was a compliment, pure and simple, to that doddering old lawyer! The court, quickly sensing the situation, announced a recess of ten minutes.

Judge, jurors, attorneys and court officials crowded around Colonel Blackstone and congratulated him on his masterly, brilliant argument.

At his prime, they said, he had never been clearer, stronger, more logical or more irresistible.

Tears flowed freely down the old man's cheeks as he acknowledegd this unique tribute.

"I know that you are lying, boys," he exclaimed brokenly, "but say it again—it sounds good!"

It is said that Banks pond, at Milltown, Ga. is the largest artificial lake in the United States—still another Georgia distinction! It is seven miles long and four miles across at the widest point.

William Clark Bradley, of Columbus, chairman of the Coca-Cola board, never took a drink of Coca-Cola until he became officially connected with the company a few years ago.

Thinking that it was high time he sampled his wares, he indulged in a Coca-Cola.

"How did you like it?" a friend asked Mr. Bradley curiously.

"I found it distinctly palatable!" replied the new Coca-Cola official.

H. B. Hoppendietzel, well-known public works contractor of Macon, had a severe case of hiccoughs when the hiccoughs epidemic was sweeping through Georgia, and through the country, some months ago. He hiccoughed almost continuously, day and night, for a week. He had always heard that if you get a shock or be caught by surprise, or something, you will so concentrate your thought on the surprise or the shock that you will fail to hiccough; but, try as earnestly and persistently as he could, he couldn't work up a surprise or a shock that would supplant the hiccoughs. Then, one night, he overheard two doctors discussing his case. They got into quite an argument, one of them claiming that he was bound to die, the other maintaining that he had a fighting chance! Mr. "Hop," as his friends call him, got so interested and concerned that the hiccough chain was broken and that night he slept as sweetly and soundly as a baby!

The average Georgian traveling in the north or middle west is both surprised and agreeably impressed at the extent of interest in the Stone Mountain memorial, and the quality of that interest. The project has captivated the fancy of the nation! A man from middle west says that he and his folks have come to Georgia three times, just to see Stone Mountain. This great enterprise—unique in conception as it is grand and inspiring in thought and imposing in physical proportions is like Stone Mountain itself, we sometimes think: You have to get away, quite a distance, to gain a true perspective of its immensity, and its majesty!

* * * *

The city of Columbus votes to exempt new industries from taxation for a period of five years—the first large city in the state to take such a step. The almost unanimous ballot by which this invitation was extended to new industries typifies the present friendly spirit in Georgia toward capital, the earnest desire for mutual constructive effort, and the sentiment over the state—a sentiment gaining in strength daily—for more liberality in tax laws. Georgia wants new manufacturing enterprises and is going to make the setting just as comfortable and attractive as possible. The present sentiment is splendidly illustrated by the action of Elberton and Clumbus in waiving city taxes over a five-year period.

* * * *

The Kimball House, Atlanta, Ga., traditional headquarters of Georgia politicians, with a glad hand and a smiling welcome for all folks and all factions, wishing everybody well, playing no favorites, and perfectly impartial between the state and the accused, is so careful to show no favoritism or discrimination that it even divides fairly, between the Atlantic ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, the water that falls on its roof! The Kimball is on the dividing line of the watershed, and it is said to be a fact that water that falls on one side of the roof finds its way into the Chattahoochee river, and thence into the Gulf of Mexico, and that rain falling on the other side of the building gravitates into the Ocmulgee river and thence into the Atlantic.

If you can get it down to a finer point than that—but it just can't be done!

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE PATHOPHILE.

The pathophile is not in the dictionary, but he would be, never fear, had Dr. Webster been a little more liberal with symptoms. The pathophile has very little use for the dictionary—that's one thing ails him. He much prefers to browse in other tomes, and he likes 'em illustrated with good red ink flowing in the arteries and indigo in the veins. As for the rest of the works, the more colorful the better. Likewise with the words.

This extraordinarily brief communication from a pathophile affords an insight into the nature of the affliction:

Dear Sir: As a daily reader of your articles will you tell me what may help, relieve or cure colds, catarrh and laryngitis of the throat? Am also troubled more or less with irdigestion and nervousness. I have weak spells and at times . . . and various ailments which I have doctored for considerable. Have almost decided to go to a warmer climate, can you suggest the best and nearest for my condition? Very truly,

"WORRIED."

That signature is genuine, all right. The wonder is that some doctor has not already consigned the man to a warmer climate. But that isn't what he means by "doctoring;" he means tinkering. A pathophile loves to tinker with his metabolism just as you and I love to tinker with the old boiler. The most soothing heartening experience he can have is to meet one of his own kind who will swap symptoms and treatments with him. Such a meeting constitutes one of the most delightful episodes in the play called "The Nervous Wreck."

Charlatans of an elder day, outspoken, honest quacks they were, gentlemen of a sort, trailed fair game in the open, used standard ammunition, ethically refrained from condemning other hunters and their methods, and blazed away with the blunderbuss at sight. The symptoms and ailments they did furnish generally came with the first bottle of medicine and therefore could not be deemed directly responsible for pathophilia, but simply a contributing or secondary factor. In these degenerate days the superquacks get the symptoms and ailments over to the prospect with such commodities as soap, shoes, cereals and sundries. Perhaps the old timers were responsible for much pathophobia (that means abnormal fear of disease), the modern quacks derive much greater profit from the propagation of pathophilia (that means abnormal love of disease.)

Any one, even a trained physician, who undertakes to diagnose his own illness or to determine for himself what is the matter, with a view to "trying" some kind of treatment which he thinks would be advisable, is pathophile and no mistake. A course of real old-time quackery might do such a fool good by arousing a wholesome fear of disease in his mind, at lest sufficient to keep him from trifling with it.

Probably the psychologists could tell us precisely how pathophobia differs from pathophilia. My own notion is that pathophobia arises from a smattering of pathological knowledge upon a foundation of frank ignorance of physiology—ignorance which the individual himself frankly admits; pathophilia, on the other hand, arises from a similar smattering of morbid information upon a foundation of conceit—the victim having studied some "physiology" in school or fishiology elsewhere, thinks he knows about as much as a doctor of the ordinary garden species.

America Lectures Europe Again

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

Mr. Houghton, our newly-appointed ambassador to Great Britain, made his debut at the Pilgrim's dinner in London, with somewhat the air of a new teacher who is just taking charge of the schoolroom. Waving aside the usual diplomatic phrases of national good will, with a somewhat contemptuous manner, he assumed the role which European peoples have usually assigned to the American, that of a corporation director. "Let us get down to business," or to "brass tacks," his manner suggests. Then he proceeds, with his purpose thinly veiled in euphemistic phrases, to talk money.

Ambassador Houghton, minister plenipotentiary of the United States government to Great Britain, very distinctly tells the nations of Europe that unless they improve their ways America will not loan them any more money. The question arises, for whom does Mr. Houghton speak? Is it for the government of the United States? Certainly no one dreams that this government will lend foreign governments any more money, under any circumstances. The sole anxiety expressed in our foreign policy for the past seven years has been the collection of money already loaned. Surely the ambassador did not mean to hold out the hope that should European countries follow the advice of the United States, there would be any more loans to be made, or the curtailment of any of the debts already made.

Whom Does He Represent?

Every chancellery in Europe is carefully scrutinizing the language of our ambassador, seeking to know whom he represented and what those words really mean. It has been semi-officially given out from Washington that he did represent Mr. Coolidge. "Mr. Coolidge hopes that the speech of Ambassador Houghton at the Pilgrims' dinner will have a beneficial effect," says one Washington correspondent, close to the president. Since we cannot entertain for a moment the idea that President Coolidge is speaking for the United States treasury, in these inferential financial hopes and threats which Mr. Houghton voiced, we are forced to believe that the ambassador spoke, with the approval of the president, as the representative of the private banking interests of the United States.

It is pretty generally estimated that since the close of the war, American financiers have invested something like $5,000,000,000 in the countries of Europe. This has been done in the hope that it would contribute to the peaceful reconstruction of those unhappy lands, and thus restore to the world a normal commercial equilibrium. Now there has arisen a very grave suspicion that much of this money has gone directly, or indirectly, to the support of the militaristic plans of some of these European nations. Mr. Houghton's warning, therefore, is that this must stop or the sources of supply will be cut off.

My protest is not against the principle involved in this warning. I, too, believe that not a dollar of American money should go for the support of the armed jealousies and hatreds of Europe, but why this miserable diplomatic indirection, not to say hypocrisy, of our American representative? As a government we left the diplomatic councils of Europe with the declaration that we would assume no responsibilities or obligations, which might involve us in the political issues of foreign nations. We left at a moment when our advice and influence would have been most potent in pointing the pathway of peace. We left when our prestige was so great, that we might frankly and directly have dictated conditions for our cooperation, which would have compelled the serious consideration of every government on earth. What right has our government now, while definitely, and almost brutally, disclaiming any responsibility whatsoever, to seek indirectly, by controlling the acts of our private bankers, to dictate the course of European governments?

Backdoor Diplomacy.

Our ambassador closes with a pious and fervent exhortation for peace, but he quickly adds the reservation, "Now with the working out of that problem in its details, the American people have no will or desire to meddle." Yet since 1919 we have done nothing but "meddle." In interpret the word "meddle" to mean, to participate in affairs in which one has no business. We have declared, with sickening reiteration, that the political affairs of Europe were no business of ours, and then in the role of "unofficial observer," we have proceeded to eavesdrop at council doors, peep through diplomatic keyholes, and whisper with thinly veiled financial threats, in every chancellery of Europe.

Mr. Houghton well says, "Peace can come only through mutual and hopeful endeavor. Peace is an adventure in faith." It is just this "mutual and hopeful endeavor" in which we have refused to give. It is just this "adventure in faith," which our political leaders have been too cowardly to make, which keeps the world today trembling upon the brink of another catastrophe.

Possibility of Finding Great Continent At North Pole Lures American Scientist To Fly With Amundsen for Earth's Summit

BY LINCOLN ELLSWORTH.
(Special Dispatch to The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, May 16.—The spectacularity of the aerial dash for the North Pole has overshadowed the scientific aspects of this great venture. I would be unwilling to risk my life for a mere stunt. It is only because of my belief in the scientific results of the flight that I am now toeing the mark for the hop-off.

My foremost interest in the expedition is geographic. I am fascinated by the million square miles of territory that stretches about the pole. What exists there is a question. There may be only snow, ice and water or perhaps a great continent.

Dr. Harris, tidal expert of the United States Geodetic Survey, whose ideas greatly interested me in the geographic phases of Polar exploration, believes there is either a submerged reef or an expanse of land near the pole, as the tides lag five hours coming around the Alaskan coast.

Our expedition may also learn of the mysterious drift from the northern Pacific to the northern Atlantic. If we find open water during our flight we should be able to determine where the drift crosses over the hemispheres. The place must be fairly near the pole as the drift takes only three years.

The meteorological data obtained by the expedition will be of great value. Our two meteorologists at the improvised station established on our convoy ship, the Farm, the most northerly weather bureau that ever existed, have already gathered information that promises new light on Arctic weather conditions. We six men in the two airplanes may make further observations of the most vital importance. These may be of purely scientific value, but they may also be of practical use.

Our present data indicates that only light, variable winds exist in the Arctic and that air pockets are unknown, due to the equableness of the temperature as a result of the sameness of night and day. It is possible that the weather in the Arctic is ideal for aviation.

We in the two airplanes will possibly be the pioneers for great airships that may some day run between New York or London and Asia over the North Pole route. Stefansson, writing recently in the Geographical Review, takes the view that such an air route is practicable. It is little more than one-half as far between London and Hongkong over the pole as around the earth's girdle.

Every explorer and geographer knows the value of even the sparse data obtained by Peary, Nansen and others. Yet their observations were limited by their being on foot or aboard ship. What we who get the first aerial perspective of the Polar regions may or may not see is doubtservations are great.

The North and the South Are One

Asleep far over the ocean,
Where thousands of crosses rise,
Lie wards of our heart's devotion
Beneath the eternal skies;
Where poppies their beauty shed,
Kissed by the smiling sun
And freedom guards her dead,
The north and the south are one.

The robes of the Union wearing
To the Union's hopes allied;
To the foe their bosoms baring,
They suffered and bled and died:
Where poppies their beauty shed,
Kissed by the smiling sun
And freedom guards her dead,
The north and the south are one.

Above them "Old Glory's" kneeling
Alike o'er each silent grave;
Expressing a nation's feeling
For deeds of her honored brave:
Where poppies their beauty shed,
Kissed by the smiling sun
And freedom guards her dead,
The north and the south are one.

To Argonne America's mothers
Shall go through the passing years,
The dust of their sons and brothers,
To wet with affection's tears:
Where poppies their beauty shed,
Kissed by the smiling sun
And freedom guards her dead,
The north and the south are one.

And sweet with their offerings blending,
The dew of the morn shall fall;
While heaven above them bending
Shall sorrow alike for all:
Where poppies their beauty shed,
Kissed by the smiling sun

And freedom guards her dead,
The north and the south are one.

No more shall estrangement sever
Or hatred our land divide;
These all perish forever
When they for the Union died:
Where poppies their beauty shed,
Kissed by the smiling sun
And freedom guards her dead,
The north and the south are one.

Cogitation on Cotton— A Diversification Epic

Uncle Remus you look perplexed, an' blank an' sorter dumb,
You'all don't 'peer to know nuthin' not wheffo or huecum.

Yo' looks reminds me ob dat wall-eyed ole man Hanger,
Who uster cogitate on things wot didn't hab no answer.

Run on, said Uncle Remus, 'fore Ah bam yo' black an' blue,
Cause Ah gotter study heavy, an' den some 'for Ah'm thru.

Ah'm cogitatin' on cotton, an' dat's huecum Ah'm dizzy,
Ah've time fo' nuthin' else, cause dat sho' keeps me busy.

'Peers to me de mo' Ah has, de richer off Ah'd be,
Seems mighty simple, same as two an' one makes three.

But in figgurin' out on cotton, dere's sompin' powerful funny,
'Cause de mo' cotton dat Ah gets, de less Ah has in money.

When everyone says he'll do his bes' an' raise a great big crop,
Jes, dat alone's sho' ruinous, 'cause on de price dey hop.

If ma crop looks mighty peart, an' seems all dat's nice,
Den dey go an' spile it all by aloweriu' de price.

De mo' we raise, de less we gets, 'cause de lesser it bring mo',
Dat's huecum Ah can't figger it out, an' ma calculation's so po'.

Fo' fifty years all Ah has raised, is mortgages an' cotton,
An all dat time Ah've busted been, an' finances been rotten.

So Ah su'mise things ain't jes' right, an' Ah spec it sho' you'se born
An' Ah'm studin' had Ah better raise less cotton an' mo' corn.

Dat's why Ah'm a calculatin', wid papers, pens an' ink,
An' whyn Ah looks so worried, it's cause Ah'm tryin' to think.

After all dis trouble an' beatin', hadn't Ah better try,
De plan de white folks urges, wot dey calls "Diversity."

WEEKLY BIBLE TALK

Saul Begins His Great Career

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

TEXT OF TODAY'S BIBLE TALK BY MR. BRYAN.
(Acts 9:20-31.)

And straightway He preached Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God.

But all that heard him were amazed, and said: Is not this He that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ.

And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill Him:

But their laying await was known to Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

Then the disciples took Him by night, and let Him down by the wall in a basket.

And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the disciples; but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

But Barnabas took Him, and brought Him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to Him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

And he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem.

And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians; but they went about to slay Him.

Which when the brethren knew, they brought Him down to Caesarea, and sent Him forth to Tarsus.

Then had the churches rest throughout all Judaea and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified; and walked in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied.

Last Sunday we discussed Saul's dramatic conversion; today we see him begin his great career of establishing in the hearts of men the religion he had so lately tried to stamp out of existence.

After his baptism, for "certain days"—the exact number is not known—Saul was with the disciples at Damascus.

The commentators have engaged in speculation as to the subjects discussed by him with the disciples during this interim between his baptism and the beginning of his work. Such discussion is harmless even when not profitable.

As they were all human beings, notwithstanding their consecration to a great common purpose, it is not unlikely that two themes were prominent in the disciples' conversation because of the deep impression they had made.

The Christians at Damascus were certainly relieved when their most dreaded enemy became one of their number. If there were any Thomases among them, they doubtless pressed Saul with questions to satisfy themselves that he was dead to his former self and alive to his new found faith. They would not hesitate to admit the fears they had entertained now that their chief antagonist had become their friend. Saul would naturally narrate to each newcomer the wonderful story of the light that blinded him, and the question, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" must have been echoing still in his ears.

Enlightened Conscience.

But such an energetic soul as Saul could not long be content with conversation with friends, delightful as that conversation must have been; he must be about his Heavenly Father's business. The conscience is not always a discerner of truth; it is rather the invisible force within that compels one to follow the truth as he sees it.

Saul was conscientiously hunting down the Christians, thirsting for their blood, because he was of the strictest sect of the Pharisees and a believer in the law delivered to Israel by Moses and reinforced by the prophets. He regarded Jesus as an impostor and believed Him guilty of blasphemy when the latter "thought it not robbery to be equal with God." Feeling that Israel was in danger, he was doing the best he could to ward off that menace by putting to death those who represented Christ.

But now that Saul was converted, his enlightened conscience coerced him into pursuing the opposite course. Receiving his message from the Messiah Himself, his zeal burned within him and he was impatient to begin the work of establishing the religion that he had labored so diligently to overthrow.

No Half-Hearted Gospel.

"Straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God."

It is interesting to note the first words of Saul's message; he asserted the Deity of Christ. He was not a half-hearted man, neither did he preach a half-hearted gospel. He was not bothered by doubts as to the supernatural character of Christ; he was convinced from what he had seen and the experience through which he had passed. His faith had been further strengthened by communion with disciples who could tell him of Christ from personal acquaintance.

It never occurred to Saul that his belief that Jesus was the Son of God could be unbecoming in a scholar or a reflection upon his learning—that is a very modern conception.

Those who heard him were amazed. "Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem"?

Yes, it was the same man outwardly, but inwardly it was entirely a different person. Saul had been born again, and he was never ashamed to have his former life referred to.

A Glorious Spectacle.

When a man changes for the better, his sins are no more a reproach; they are forgiven and forgotten—at least, the recalling of them strengthens the new purpose instead of causing mortification. It was an embarrassment to Aaaron to have the setting up of the golden calf thrown up to him because it was a gross sin, but Saul was ready to face his accusers and plead for himself the forgiveness that, as Christ's messenger, he preached for all.

"But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dealt at Damascus." What a glorious spectacle—a great intellect aflame with a holy purpose.

Religion decides the path that one shall follow, but learning can enlarge the capacity for service. Saul's path was decided upon at Damascus and his scholarship enabled him to outstrip others not so well qualified for the work. His masterful logic swept away the sophistries of his opponents; they could not stand before him. He proved that Jesus was the Christ.

"Kill Him!"

We do not know the exact length of his stay in Damascus, but when "many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him."

That is the method of the wicked when they are outmatched by the righteous. "Kill him!" is the final demand of those who are vanquished in argument. Saul was not afraid of death, but he had a mission and he felt that his time had not yet come. When the plot of the assassins became known to Saul, he permitted his disciples to let him down by the wall in a basket. So he escaped and proceeded to Jerusalem.

But here a new experience awaited him; "he assayed to join himself to the disciples; but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple."

Saul could hardly complain of the suspicion that the disciples felt. His ardor as a persecutor had made a deep impression upon them and their fears made them cautious. They must have seemed very unreasonable to Saul whose heart had been so completely emptied of his former hatred and so completely filled with love for his new found Savior. Conscious of his rectitude and overflowing with devotion to the risen Redeemer, he was doubtless greatly distressed at the attitude of the disciples in Jerusalem, natural as that attitude seems to us.

Saul's Sponsor.

At this point Barnabas steps forward as sponsor for Saul. Commentators speculate upon the early acquaintance that may have existed between Saul and Barnabas. It is thought that they may have been school day friends. At any rate, they were friends from this time on until a difference as to church policy arose between them. Barnabas narrated to the disciples the incidents connected with the marvelous conversion of Saul. He also called their attention to the boldness with which Saul had preached Christ at Damascus. His guaranty was accepted and Saul was with the disciples, "coming in and going out at Jerusalem."

If one had been called upon to make a prediction as to Saul's future career, it would have required divine foresought to discern anything extraordinary. We may be sure that many unconverted Jews who had known Saul when he was a "promising young man," enthusiastically carrying out the policy of the high priest, shook their heads and expressed disappointment at the inglorious ending of his work.

"How unnecessary," they would say to each other; "how foolish for him to throw away an assured future by linking himself with the hunted outcast who espouse the cause of the son of Joseph, the carpenter.

Paul's Sincerity."

Lord Lyttelton, in his "Observations on the Conversion and Apostleship of St. Paul," answers the questions raised as to Paul's sincerity by saying (in substance) that he could not have been influenced by the ostentation of learning, because he cast aside all that he had been taught by Gamaliel or acquired through long years of study and took up the opinions of fishermen of Galilee whom he had scarcely ever seen and who had never been educated in the schools. It could not have been love of power, because he abdicated in a moment the authority which he possessed for power "over a flock of sheep driven to the slaughter, whose shepherd himself had been murdered a little before."

It could not have been love of wealth, for he joined himself to people who were poor.

It could not have been love of fame, "for his prophetic power must have been marvelous indeed if he could look beyond the shame and scorn which then rested upon the servants of a crucified Master to that glory with which christendom now surrounds the name of St. Paul."

Nursery for Great Thoughts.

It was a dark hour for him—but it was the darkness that comes just before the dawn—when, after two attempts to raise "the blood stained banner of the cross," he found it necessary to seek seclusion in Tarsus, the city of his birth. But in this dark hour he must have been strengthened by his experience of three years of solitude in Arabia following his first public acknowledgements of Christ as the Son of God.

Solitude is the nursery of great thoughts. It required time for Paul to co-ordinate the two parts of his life so that his pre-Christian experience could be made valuable in his preaching. When he again appeared as a defender of the faith he was ready for all emergencies.

Canon Farrar, in discussing Paul's retirement into the desert, quotes some lines on solitude which form a fitting conclusion for the Bible talk today:

"Sit on the mountain stone
Like Elijah at Horeb's cave alone:
And a gentle voice comes through the wild,
Like a father consoling his fretful child,
That banishes bitterness, wrath, and fear,
Saying, 'Man is distant, but God is near.'"

MOTOR BUSSES OPEN UP RESIDENCE AREAS

London, May 16.—Motor omnibuses have done wonders in England to build up the country districts in the movement started years ago to relieve the housing problem in London and other cities.

According to recent estimates there are approximately 55,000 miles of omnibus routes in the various parts of England. The tendency throughout the country has been to extend these services, and a noticeable growth of houses has been reported along the new lines.

Things New and Old About The Bible

Biblical Difficulties and Interpretations

BY REV. W. P. KING,
Pastor First Methodist Church
Gainesville, Ga.

I.

The scientific setting of the Scriptures was of necessity the scientific knowledge of the day. It is unfortunate that a reactionary party in the church today refuses to profit from the lessons of the past. Wherever interpreters have laid claim to the scientific authority of the Scriptures, they have been compelled to make an inglorious retreat. This is the inevitable result, since it is a mistaken view of the function of Scripture and claims for the Bible what the Bible never claims for itself. It is a futile effort to attempt to harmonize the first chapter of Genesis with the modern scientific idea of the process of creation. The author of Genesis evidently uses the term day with the ordinary significance, otherwise the rest on the seventh day has no significance and "the evening and the morning are meaningless." The purpose of this majestic opening passage of the Bible is fulfilled as it brings us into the presence of the Creator-God.

Dr. G. T. Ladd writes: "In the strictest modern conception of science the Bible teaches us little or nothing that can properly be designated by this name." This fact is due to several causes, chief among which are the following: The design of the Biblical writings is directed towards moral and religious ends, and it's writers look upon the phenomena of nature almost wholly from the moral and religious rather than the scientific point of view. Moreover the Hebrews showed the same ignorance of the methods, conception, and conclusions of modern physical science which characterized all the ancient Oriental people. The failure to recognize this manifest fact has brought about the harmful conflict of theologians and scientists in which both have fallen into the error of involving the vale of the religious revelations with the scientific accuracy of the Bible. The Bible interpreter will never be free to unfold the real glory of the sacred pages so long as he is fettered with the unreasonable and unscriptural notion that the Bible is a scientific textbook.

It goes without saying that God could have dictated scientific knowledge to the inspired writers, but it is equally true that it was far from His purpose to do so. To frankly acknowledge this is to recover one of the age-long difficulties in Biblical interpretation.

Victim of Ideas.

The philosophical viewpoint has a direct bearing on the problem of Biblical interpretation. There is the pantheistic tendency which ascribed to God good and evil alike. "I make peace and create evil." We find a variation of philosophical ideas within the Scripture themselves and this difference affords explanation for certain irreconcilable discrepancies. The same facts receive different interpretations. In 2 Samuel 24:1, "The anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them saying, go, number Israel and Judah." The author of Chronicles 21:1 tells us "Satan moved David to number Israel." There was the fact that David numbered Israel, but each author makes his own interpretation. The earlier idea did not hesitate to ascribe all things evil included to the direct agency of God. With growing insight into the character of God it became impossible to impute an evil act to God, so that the later writer attributes the wrong act to Satan.

We read in Samuel 21, that because of a wrong committed by Saul against the Gibonites, God sent three years famine upon Israel and that not until Saul's seven sons had been sacrificed would he be entreated for the land and stay the famine. The fundamentalist holds not only to the history itself, but to this untenable interpretation of the history. He proceeds in an effort to reconcile the divine demand for the slaughter of the seven innocent sons of Saul with the goodness of God. He will go to the most absurd length in playing the part of a reconciler, and even in the incident of David numbering Israel he will still insist on a reconciliation when the two explanations are entirely contradictory.

We can no more hold to the philosophical infallibility than to the scientific infallibility of the Scripture.

Again we make a philosophical approach in the explanation of miracles. There is the problem of the relationship of God and nature. In a study of the miracles there is the necessity of discrimination. First, there is the miracle which is without any apparent moral purpose as for example, Elisha causing the axe to swim.

Certain Miracles.

Second, there is the miracle which is the result of turning poetic imagery into prose, "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, moon, in the valley of Aijalon." This song is quoted as "written in the book of Jashar." The writer of Joshua construed it as a statement of fact; "And the sun stayed in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day." In the third place, a supposed miracle may rest on wrong translation of a word. In Judges 15, there is given the exploit of Samson with the jawbone of an ass, and according to the authorized version a miracle is contained in Judges 15:19. "But God clave an hollow place that was in the jaw, and there came water thereout." In the revised version the reading is, "God clave the hollow place that is in Lehi, and that the word in the A. V. rendered jawbone should be Lehi as in R. V. is very evident since the verse concludes in each version with the declaration that the spring is in Lehi unto this day. The story described the origin of spring or well, at Lehi and not the creation of a fountain of water out of a jawbone.

In the fourth place there is what may be termed the providential miracle where the ordinary processes of nature coincide with some emergency. According to Hebrew philosophy there was no recognition of secondary causes but only primary causes, or the direct agency of the divine will.

Under this classification would doubtless belong the plagues of Egypt and the deliverance at the Red sea. In the fifth place God, is who is immanent in the world with no violation of laws of nature and in harmony with His spiritual purpose of redemption, may make an extraordinary use of the forces of nature. This constitutes the miracle in its true significance. As G. T. Ladd writes, "The real miracles are not to be regarded as violations or even to be regarded as violation sor even suspension of the laws of nature From the Biblical as well as from the truly philosophical point of view the laws of nature are themselves only the orderly and wise modes of the operation of the divine will. If in an emergency (as it were, and to speak humanly) His mode of operation is different from that ordinarily followed, this is not a violation of nature. If He so connects together a system of extraordinary occurrences in the realm of visible and tangible events as to make them show forth His character, for example, as the system of Biblical miracles shows God forth as the Redeemer of mankind, this is not to be spoked of as though the divine will did an occasional violence to the world of physical substances, forces and laws The truth is that this false theory of the miracle is itself a product of the very same way of regarding the relation between God and the world as that adopted by the Deism which the theory tried to controvert."

The Commandments.

Again philisophy is brought into exercise when it comes to the determination of the divine method of suddenness or gradualness for example in giving to mankind the ten words of the moral law. According to the customary idea since the Decalogue was written with "the finger of God" on tables of stone, it was an entirely new revelation of God to man. We now know that some seven or eight centuries before Moses, some three or four of the commandments dealing with human relatiohships were given in the famous code of Hammurabi 2250 B. C.

An insuperable objection to the verbal dictation theory is found in the fact that there are irreconcilable differences in the language of the two versions of the Ten Commandments as given in Exodus 20, and Deuteronomy 5. Is the moral law any the less binding because it came gradually to the heart of humanity and not in a sudden and spectacular way—Dr. George Jackson writes. "We prosaic westerners with our stubborn common sense and matter-of-fact ways, which turn the gossamer threads of fancy into the steel cord of fact, seem born to misunderstand a book which comes to us steeped in the sunshine and poetry of the east—Is it any exaggeration to say that one-half the blunders that we make about the Bible are due to sheer want of imagination?"

Furthermore, the highest evidence of the supernatural is not found in the sensational and spectacular. The character of Moses is far more wonderful and far higher expression of divine power than multiplied signs and marvels. The character of Jesus Christ is a far greater miracle than any miracle He ever wrought. "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign."

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

Two New Books of Verse

BY CLYDE PETTUS, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

A most commendable lapse on the part of the imagist poet is the occasion when forgetting to be an imagist he becomes a poet; when his creative imagination is charged with an emotional voltage urging it past dilletantish adjectives and heaped up nouns to burst forth irrepressibly in vigorous verbs. From time to time even the imagists do this—then remorsefully remembering their credo append a line of whites and golds and bloodreds wherewith to bring themselves again inside the safe circle of a definition.

With the exception of "H. D.," who without forsaking imagism has yet made of "Heliodora" an exquisite example of pure poetry, there are few of the school who so admirably illustrate the success of falling from grace as does Richard Aldington. It is a difficult business, for the disciples of modern tendencies take their craftsmanship far more seriously than their art—and err painstakingly. Mr. Aldington, at any rate, has now ceased to call his poems images and a few in the new book can readily, without stretching a point, be so described.

"Exiles and other poems" is divided into two sections—the second and less interesting portion comprising "Songs for Puritan" and "Songs for Sensualists," titles which a nice discrimination might find more accurately descriptive of their contents in reversed order. In pseudo-pastoral vein these little verses relate the perfections of Chloe and Dorinda—musically, if with a somewhat crude self-conscious armorousness.

The best of Mr. Aldington's latest book is the section from which the title is chosen; thought the poem "Exile" scarcely merits first place. In this the emotional force is marred by a repletion of adjectives—"alien, brutish, base"—"chaste, proud and remote"—"many-colored, triumphant, austere." In putting the imagist foot foremost the poet has obliterated the outlines of his poetic conception, creating a chaotic assemblage of word grouns. Much more convincing is "Bones," though in this as in "Eumenides" and "Having seen men killed" there is the bitter after-taste of the war:

Which cannot move from where they root)
On open hills or low, damp hollows,
Wherever war has struck them down:
And some bones after many years
A waggish bomb digs up . . ."

By contrast with the English flowers—thin anemones, primroses and larch buds, how much more horrible are the cellars of Maroc and the gas bombardment of Vermelles. "Having seen men killed . . ." by wholesale how insignificant is the sight of a new grave on the hill top and the sound of the tolling bell. The long, long thoughts of the youths who saw the great war are less concerned with the "poor apparatus of death" than with the God whom Einstein does or does not prove.

The last poem is a happier fancy—the book-lover's joy in "A Winter Night" spent with the glowing spirits of his choice. In vain the rain betas against the windows, and a cold wind makes the willow branches groan. Within the house there is royal good cheer:

"What stately pleasures I command
With all Eliza's wits at hand
And how it charms my amorous looks
To see such ranks of noble books—
For some sweet god to ease man's curse
Gave him the gift of choice old verse."

Words of Welsh.

From the simplicity of this closing poem the transition is not so difficult to the recently collected work of Robert Gilbert Welsh. In many ways there can be no point of comparison between the writing of the English poet and that of the dramatic critic whose verse composition was an avocation. Yet it is interesting to notice how similar were the views concerning death held by these two men who had met it face to face. "To die," Robert Welsh said to his friend, "is so little." He was at that time preparing to go to France, from which he returned only to give his life later in an effort to save another from drowning. The verses in "Azrael and other poems" collected by Charles Hanson Towne were gathered from various old periodicals in response to the requests of many who knew the writer better than they knew his work.

Some of the poems suggest the subject matter of Clinton Scollard in which the fascination of the east is felt. The crippled feet of "The Traveller" suffice for a spirit journey to Fez and Suakim, and those who enter Sa'di's Garden" pass by the shuffling camels at the gate of Shiraz.

"Under Arabia's sky,
We'll read the Prophet's scroll,
Thou hast two loaves, sell one buy
Jacinths to feed thy soul.'
When cherry blossoms fall
Late in Provencal spring,
We'll wait by Laura's garden wall
To hear Petrarco sing."

Religious Themes.

Other poems of the collection have religious themes—"A Vision in the City" of a passerby who found in the surging crowd faces of the disciples; a story of the childhood of Jesus and Judas Iscariot; an Easter legend of a repentance accepted. The most noticeable characteristic is simplicity—the meters are conservative—there is no striving for effect. One feels that the poet wrote as he thought, sincerely and without artifice and that his legacy is a sheaf of songs that will live long in the memory of others.

In the matter of books the two poets are in perfect accord, but for Mr. Aldington's solitary enjoyment Mr. Welsh would substitute a shared delight. In the thought provoking poem, "Readers," he describes those called by that name who are the imperfect audience for the masters of the world who in their places on the shelves await the coming of an understanding friend. "Azrael," the first poem in the book, is the most beautiful of all. The legend goes that of the angel-hosts there is but one face that does not reflect God's smile—the "unwelcome, the unbidden" angel of death. The wings of the angels are tireless, shining, purposeful—

"Save one, all unavailing
(The Prophet saith),
His wings are gray and trailing,
Azrael, Angel of Death.
And yet the souls that Azrael brings
Across the dark and cold,
Look up beneath those folded wings,
And find them lined with gold."

GEORGIA YOUTH GETS FELLOWSHIP AT YALE

The National Research Council of America has recently announced the appointment of Ulric B. Bray, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Bray, of Norwood, Ga., honor granate of Emory university and for the last three years a graduate student in chemistry at Yale university, to a National Research fellowship in physical chemistry. Since only advanced students who have received the degree of doctor of philosophy are eligible for these fellowships, the appointment has been so made that Mr. Bray may begin his fellowship activities whenever he wishes after he receives the Ph. D. degree. It is expected that Mr. Bray will receive this degree from Yale university in June.

The National Research gellowships are given through the National Academy of Sciences in conjunction with the Rockefeller foundation for the purpose of increasing scientific knowledge through research and of providing further training for Ph. D. graduates who have shown particular ability for carrying out scientific research.

Let Tanlac Restore your Health

IF your body is all fagged-out and run-down, if you are losing weight steadily, lack appetite, have no strength or energy why not let Tanlac help you back to health and strength?

So many millions have been benefited by the Tanlac treatment, so many thousands have written to testify to that effect that it's sheer folly not to make the test.

Tanlac, you know, is a great natural tonic and builder, a compound, after the famous Tanlac formula, of roots, barks and herbs. It purges the blood stream, revitalizes the digestive ogans and enables the sickly body to regain its vanished weight.

You don't need to wait long to get results. Tanlac goes right to the seat of trouble. In a day or so you note a vast difference in your condition. You have more appetite, sleep better at night and the color begins to creep back into your washed-out cheeks.

Don't put off taking Tanlac another precious day. Step into the nearest drug store and get a bottle of this world-famed tonic. That's the first important step back to health and vigor.

Tanlac Restored Her Health

"Typhoid fever reduced me to 95 lbs. and left me weak as a rag. Failing to get relief from other sources I tried Tanlac and after 6 bottles had gained 20 lbs. Now I enjoy a fine appetite and feel like a new woman. As nurse I give Tanlac to all my patients."

'Welcome Home' at Howard Theater Stars Lois Wilson

"Welcome Home," the James Cruze Paramount production, which is to be shown as the feature picture at the Howard all next week is one of the most pleasing home-life comedies that has ever been shown on a local screen.

The story, "Welcome Home," which features Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter and Luke Cosgrave, is based on the immensely popular Broadway play by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman. It was adapted for the screen by Alfer Woods.

"Welcome Home" tells of an old man—a likeable old fellow—who goes to the city to live with his son and daughter-in-law. He really has the best interests of the young people at heart, but he does not seem to realize that his ways are vastly different from theirs consequently he gets himself in trouble at every turn.

One of the most interesting situations in "Welcome Home" is when Nettie Prouty (Louis Wilson) prepares very carefully to entertain the members of her club, a very important affair. Just before the meeting begins Old Man Prouty (Luke Cosgrave) comes in with two old men that he has met in the park. When tea is served for the ladies he invites his two old men friends to join them. After tea when the club affairs are being discussed he and his friends join into the very heated discussion. Quite naturally this throws the whole meeting into disorder. Finally, the ladies, indignant, leave, assuring Nettie that no more meeting will be held at her home. The girl controls herself until her husband arrives, then bursts into tears and the family quarrel starts: she insisting that one of them will have to leave—Cosgrave or herself—he can take his choice. Naturally the husband wants to please both his wife and his father, but—how is he going to do it. "Welcome Home" gives one of the reasons why there are so many divorces in the United States today. Every married couple should be sure to see "Welcome Home." It is a picture you are sure to enjoy, full of heart-tugs and human interest that will appeal to everyone. The comedy is injected in just the right amount as only James Cruise can do.

The musical attraction on the stage this week will be provided by Miss Anita Rosa, soprano, a young artist who has become popular in the middle west and east because of her delightful voice, sound musicianship and pleasing personality.

Born here, of foreign parentage, Miss Rosa has had the advantage of splendid training and teaching by the famous Oscar Saenger and of appearances with Andreas Dippel's American Opera company. She has also appeared in special presentations at several of the finest motion picture theaters in the country. She comes to the Howard direct from the Capitol theater in New York. This attraction is sure to please all who attend the Howard next week.

The "Poet and Peasant Overture will take a new lease on life as interpreted by Alex Keese and played by the Howard symphony orchestra under his baton. Throughout the entire field of overtures, "Poet and Peasant" still retains its popularity with theatergoers everywhere.

The comedy, "My Boy Friend," featuring Larry Semon gives the Howard Jass Unit an opportunity to show their versatility in a series of late popular hits, featuring "Ah-ha" and "Tell Me More."

The feature picture "Welcome Home" is very carefully scored music of the lighter type predominating.

A very pleasing novelty in slide form is presented by Mr. Keese under the caption of "O Kathrina," the musical hit from Balieff's "Chauve Souris."

The entire bill at the Howard this week shoud prove to be very entertaining.

"Pampered Youth."

(At Alamo No. 2)

"Pampered Youth," a picturization of Booth Tarkington's well-read novel, "The Magnificent Ambersons," will be shown for the first time in Atlanta at Alamo No. 2, on Monday, where the Vitagraph special is booked for three days. Charlotte Merriam, popular with Atlanta society, is starred in this picture, it having been completed just prior to her visit here last winter. Booth Tarkington, who, everybody agrees, is the greatest American novelist, won the Pulitzer prize as the best American story of the year with "The Magnificent Ambersons." The story is thoroughly American. It treats of real human "homey" folks in a representative American town—a drama of today, depicting lives of the third generation. The film is alive with thrills. A most realistic fire scene is said to be the greatest ever screened. And again, like in all rural plays, there is the great "hoss" race. Alice Calhoun, Ben Alexander, (the child actor), Otis Harlan, Cullen Landis and Allan Forrest are the principal players.

An Alaskan drama, "The Lure of the Yukon," featuring Eva Novak, is scheduled for Thursday and Friday. This picture was photographed on the Yukon river. It shows a herd of reindeer, numbering close to 10,000, in one scene, while another shows one of the dreads of the far north, an avalanche.

Constance Talmadge "Learning To Love" At the Metropolitan

The younger generation of today, like the younger generations of yesteryear, and of the yester-year before that, believes firmly in the supremity of its own wisdom. The exuberance of youth is immortally unconquerable.

While totally without logic, this fact paradoxically is one of the bulwarks of life. It spurs youth to enter the bitter world of strife unafraid.

Such is the underlying thought in Constance Talmadge's new comedy, "Learning to Love," at the Metropolitan. Constance thought a sub-deb just out of boarding school, is a wiseacre in matters pertaining to love. What she doesn't know about love—well, just simply isn't. The profound willingness of her numerous college boy admirers to trade their hearts for one flash of her flirtatious eyes; a soft-spoken word and, perhaps, a kiss, convinces her of that fact.

And so she dashes gaily into the whirlpool of New York's society with an all-conquering spirit—the exuberance of youth.

It is an ideal characterization for Constance — flippantly flirtatious, daintily daring. It affords the star unlimited scope for the portrayal of those delightfully absurd sophistries of the younger generation which she interprets so well.

And the story, prepared by those skillful technicians of screen drama, John Emerson and Anita Loos, provides a rapid-fire series of highly amusing situations. Having lashed five fiances to the mast of her charms, Constance finally meets a real man (Antonio Moreno).

And because he sees through the tinsel of her flapperish onslaughts and refuses to become impressed, she loves him. In fact, she determines to win him as her husband. It's the way with women—spurning what's at their feet, yearning for what they can't get.

Constance gets her husband, even as the cast-off fiances do battle-royal on her doorsten, but scandal arising from her past frivolities separates the couple on their nuptial night. Paris and its divorce courts follow, then the true love which transforms her from a "flapper-vamp" into a woman. Then happiness.

In view of the approaching season of light opera Enrico Leide has selected "The Mikado" for the overture this week. It contains all of the most popular strains from the comic success and it is brilliant in its orchestration. The theme for the feature picture is Irving Berlin's latest song, "Listening," and the comedy presentation will be interspersed with hits from the current Broadway shows. As a novelty the song, "Just a Little Drink," will be illustrated on the screen.

A Mack Sennett comedy, "Good Morning Nurse," and the Metropolitan News and Views complete the program.

Tyrone Power, now playing a featured role in Paramount's "The Wanderer," has been called "the Emil Jannings of America." He comes of a family of distinguished stage actors. Power's grandfather, after whom he is named, was the first European star to join the American stage.

Edward Sedgwick is in Portland, Oregon, for the purpose of making final arrangements for the Norman Kerry Roundup story which will be called "Under Western Skies," one of the second White list pictures.

'CROWDED HOUR,' WITH BEBE DANIELS AT RIALTO

Bebe Daniels comes to the Rialto theater this week in her latest starring picture for Paramount, "The Crowded Hour," atop a fine program which includes "Love Goofy," a Christie comedy, and a musical offering conducted by William Whitney Hubner.

Miss Daniels has the role of Peggy Laurence, a telephone operator who aspires to a career as an actress. T. Roy Barnes, her pal, also has a yen to act, and they try out their talents on New York's Bowery crowd.

Kenneth Harlan, a rich young fellow from upper Park avenue, falls for the pretty Peggy. He has a wife, played by Helen Lee Worthing, former "Follies" beauty. But their married life is not congenial. Even Frank Morgan, as a friend of the family, cannot get things straightened out.

Harlan gets Bebe a job in the "follies," with Barnes as a foil. Then the war comes and Bebe and Barnes go to France as "Y" entertainers. Bebe's real purpose, however, is to be near Harlan, who has enlisted. She entertains the soldiers in the front line trenches, goes through a gas attack and makes a wild ride on a motorcycle in an effort to save an ammunition dump before the enemy can reach it.

While in a field telephone dugout, Bebe realizes that there is something more in life than the love for one man and instead of warning Harlan of the attack she plugs in on an open line and saves an entire division of French troops. Bebe is blinded by an explosion that follows and is taken to an excavation hospital where Harlan's wife nurses her back

FOUR GOOD PICTURES AT PALACE THEATER

"East Is West," the picture version of the outstanding stage success of the same name, with Constance Talmade in the stellar role, is the attraction at the Palace theater, Inman Park, Monday, and Tuesday. Constance Talmade takes the part of Ming Toy, the role made famous on the stage by Fay Bainter. An all-star cast will be seen in support of the dainty star.

Evelyn Bret and Monte Blue are scheduled Wednesday in "Loving Lies," a screen adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's sea story, "The Harbor Bar," an unusual heart interest tale of a young couple combined with the absorbing atmosphere of the sea.

The initial appearance in Atlanta of the photoplay version of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's widely read poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," is announced for Thursday and Friday. It will present Charles Ray in what is said to be his greatest film role and when it had its world premiers in Los Angeles the critics paid the star a wonderful tribute. The film, which deals with one of the most important events in history, the coming of the pilgrims on the illustrious Mayflower, is said to be replete with glorious adventure, thrills and suspense, and tells a great love story.

Douglas Fairbanks will be seen Saturday in a return engagement of "The Mark of Zorro," his greatest action picture.

A hilarious comedy will also be included on each program.

Producer Sam Rork is in New York with the completed print of "The Talker," in which Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone have leading roles.

'FORBIDDEN PARADISE,' NEW CAMEO PICTURE

The new Cameo theater, located at 61 Peachtree street, in its second week open to the public, offers a splendid variety of subjects for its patrons. Monday and Tuesday the Pola Negri light comedy success, "Forbidden Paradise," is the feature. Wednesday and Thursday Corinne Griffith and Milton Sills are co-starred in "Single Wives," and the Thomas Meighan picture, which was made in Birmingham, Ala "Coming Through," will be the offering Friday and Saturday.

Certainly the above array of productions bears out the slogan of the Cameo that it "brings the big ones back." It brought three big ones back last week and in an environment of refinement that has given confidence in the success of this, Atlanta's newest theater.

Located in the heart of the shopping center of Atlanta and with the popular price of admission that prevails the Cameo has proven all that its name implies.

Many favorable comments have been passed on the splendid projection being rendered in this house The newst type moving-picture machine has made this one of the outstanding points of the houses.

The Cameo promises many more big ones back again for the future and the picture-going public may well watch with confidence for the weekly announcement each Sunday in the papers for its program.

When a woman begins to notice every act of a man she has begun either to love or hate him.

"BROADWAY BITS" HITS HEAD BILL AT LOEW'S

Headed by a funny musical revue, "Broadway Bits and Hits," offered by Malvin Franklin and company, the new bill at Loew's Grand this week contains an unusual amount of variety offerings. The revue is one of the best revues in vaudeville, is presented by capable players headed by Malvin Franklin and introduces five pretty girls, who excel as singers and dancers. The revue is elaborately mounted and some pretty scenic effects are presented.

Advance notices contain press reviews from other cities are all strong in their high praise of "Broadway Bits and Hits." It is described as a miniature vaudeville bill in itself. A special musical score was composed for this production and there are half a dozen big song hits presented.

The excellent bill at Loew's Grand will form a part of the monster super-vaudeville bill which will be offered at the auditorium at 10 o'clock on the night of May 22 for the benefit of the firemen's relief fund. Most of the actors on the Loew bill will present something entirely different from their regular acts in the big benefit show.

One of the most popular acts on the new bill is that of Jimmy Locke and Joe Verdi. Here are two "wop" comedians who know how to "commede." A good "wop" artist is hard to beat as a funmaker and here are two of the best tied up as partners in one act. Locke and Verdi also are splendid singers and offer some of the latest song hits in their turn.

Loring Smith and Natalie Sawyer have a clever little comedy skit entitled "Sunkist Satire." They are clever singers and dancers and bring a refreshing line of new comedy with them. Smith and Sawyer are well known as entertainers and always bring "up-to-the-minute" material with them. They have added some singing and dancing specialties to their act this season.

Bert Grant is the "composer" and Mildred Feely is the "Colleen" in their pianologue novelty, "The Composer and the Irish Colleen," which they will offer on the new bill. Mr. Grant is a talented musician and presents a pleasing cycle of pretty songs. Miss Feely is a good looking assistant, who keeps a rapid-fire of patter going between song numbers.

The Osaka Boys have a sensational Japanese novelty act on the new bill. They are wonderful foot jugglers and risley artists and are rated among the best Japanese performers in this country.

"Zander the Great," a stupendous motion picture production, with Marion Davies and an all-star cast, is the Loew feature picture offering for the week.

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE," ATLANTA THEATER SOON

Anne Nichols' world-famous laugh producer, "Abie's Irish Rose," the comedy which has justly earned the soubriquet, "the perennial wonder," on account of its marvelously successful lengthy runs in the larger cities of the United States and Canada, will be presented at the Atlanta theater for the week starting Monday, June 1.

Whoever heard of a play which would test the capacity of theaters in Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Columbus, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Montreal and Toronto from 12 to 42 weeks in each place, to say nothing of over 60 weeks to sell-out performances at the Studebaker theater in Chicago, while another company is just starting its fourth year in one theater on Forty-second street, New York city, thus adding many new pages to theatrical history, that will undoubtedly go down in the annals as the greatest success in the history of the stage.

Miss Nichols is presenting to the theater-goers of this city her company which is an exact duplication of the production now playing in New York city. Full particulars will be announced shortly.

Henry James Forman, co-author of "The Pony Express," which James Cruze is going to make into an epic eastern picture for Paramount, is now in Hollywood working on the script. Forman won international recognition from remarkable propaganda work for the United States during the war. He was stationed at Berne, Switzerland.

Left to right, top, Anita Rosa, soprano, at the Howard. Center, Cullen Landis in "Pampered Youth," at Alamo No. 2. Right, Nick Hufford, famous blackface minstrel this week at the Forsyth. Lower left, scene from "Abie's Irish Rose," coming June 1st Atlanta theater. Lower right, Muni Rollins at Loew's Grand.

Corinne Griffith has completed work in "The Marriage Whirl," an adaptation of J. Hartley Manners' play, "The National Anthem." It will be an early First National release. Her next starring vehicle will be Edna Ferber's "Classified."

PALESTINE TENT LAYS PLANS FOR BIG SHOW

Selection of "Miss Palestine" to represent Palestine tent of the order of Maccabees, in the big Maccabee Jubilee in Atlanta July 9-10-11, and later to participate in a round of affairs at the national convention in Washington on July 16, is beginning with exceptional interest and spirit, according to those in charge.

Entrants for the honor thus far accepted by the committee include Miss Silvia Fein, pretty and prominent in Y. W. H. A. and Junior Hadassah work in the city; Miss Tillie Alterman, president of the Young Judeans and one of the prettiest girls in the city, and Miss Lottie Bryan, active in Jewish club circles and a recognized beauty. Others have offered their names and will be formally accepted at a meeting later this week and their names announced at that time.

A special committee, headed by Mrs. S. I. Leaf, will have direct charge of the contest to decide a winner. Mrs. Sam Chomsky and Mrs. Charles Green are other members of the committee. All features of the affair will be handled by this committee and final selection will be determined when they shall have counted all votes.

In conjunction with this feature, preparatory to the big meeting in July, another committee of Palestine members and a woman's auxiliary are working on details for the July jubilee which will include an old-fashioned barbecue; harness and bike racing, sight-seeing tours and other features. Other Maccabee tents in the city and throughout the state are concentrating efforts at this time on this preliminary event to the national convention in Washington.

Another activity of Palestine tent at present is centering around plans for a huge benefit show, the proceeds to go to the fund now being raised for the dependent families of six firemen who lost their lives recently in the Decatur street fire. The auditorium will be the scene of this affair and a galaxy of the city's most accomplished artists will appear under a benefit banner—dancing girls, vocal and instrumental stars and other entertainment features. The date and program for this event is in course of arrangement at this time and will be announced early this week, officials stated Saturday.

Selection of "Miss Palestine" is in connection with selection of pretty girls in more than 100 Georgia cities and towns. "Miss Peach," "Miss Apple," "Miss Melon," "Miss Cotton," and other 'Misses" represented in Georgia products, will accompany "Miss Palestine" to Washington and participate in the gigantic parade in that city as the opening feature of the national convention.

John Francis Dillon has been selected to direct "The Half-Way Girl" for the Earl Hudson units of First National productions. He is due in New York within a few days and will start work on the picture within a week, according to present schedule. Doris Kenyon and Lloyd Hughes will have the principal roles.

WARNER BROS. RETAIN VITAGRAPH MARK

The purchase of the Vitagraph company of America by Warner Brothers, which startled the motion picture world last week, does not mean that the old company is to pass out of existence, according to Harry M. Warner.

Mr. Warner stated that the Vitagraph trade mark would be continued with a bigger and better program in addition to the 40 pictures already announced by Warner Bros.

Warner Bros. will finish the pictures now in production on the Vitagraph schedule and carry out all plans made by that company backed with a big advertising and exploitation campaign the same as is being prepared for the Warner program.

All Vitagraph business will be in charge of the departmental heads of Warner Bros. and conducted from the home office of the Warners, 1600 Broadway.

Harry M. Warner is now in Los Angeles to check up on the Vitagraph production schedule. Before leaving New York he said:

"The purchase of Vitagraph by Warner Bros. means that Warners becomes a tremendous factor in distribution as well as production. In addition to our own 40 pictures, we will go ahead with production under the Vitagraph trade mark and as far as possible carry out the plans under way by that company when the purchase was made.

WARNERS START FIRST 'SYD' CHAPLIN PICTURE

Every effort to give "Syd" Chaplin, who is to appear in a series of special comedies for Warner Brothers, the best support possible is being made by the company, it was stated at the New York office today.

In addition to securing Fred Newmeyer, Harold Lloyd's director, to make "The Man on the Box," Mr. Chaplin's first picture, the firm also engaged Charles Francis ("Chuck") Reisner, who is responsible for many of the gags in Charlie Chaplin's pictures, to assist in preparing the script, which was completed last week, and production started at the Warner's Hollywood studio on April 18.

The Warners state they have obtained an exceptional cast for the principal roles which, in addition to Mr. Chaplin, will include a number of real stars.

"The Halfway Girl."

John Francis Dillon, director of "Flaming Youth" and 'Chickie" is to direct Doris Kenyon in her next picture, "The Half-Way Girl," according to an announcement by Earl Hudson, head of First National's eastern units, who will supervise the production.

Dillon came east last fall when the Hudson units moved to New York from Hollywood. He directed Anna Q. Nilsson and Ben Lyon in "Dne Way Street," and then handled the megaphone in the filming of 'Chickie," which was completed several weeks ago. Dillon returned to Hollywood to rest. He is due in New York now and will start work on "The Half-Way Girl" within a few days, according to present schedule.

Work on "The Half-Way Girl" has been delayed six weeks, due to the illness of Miss Kenyon who was stricken with appendicitis the day the picture was to have gone into production. Miss Kenyon says she is feeling better now than she has felt for months.

Milton Sills has reached the final scenes of his first starring picture, "The Making of O'Malley," at the New York studios of First National where the Earl Hudson units are working. The picture is scheduled to be completed this week, immediately following which Sills will leave for Hollywood for a rest of several weeks. When he returns to New York he will start work in his next starring vehicle, "The Come-Back," which will go into production the latter part of May.

NICK HUFFORD TOPS KEITH'S FORSYTH BILL

A program of black-face comedy and songs, sprinkled generously with dancing and acrobatics, will be offered the first three days of this week at Keith's Forsyth theater with Nick Hufford, minstrel comedian, keeping things merry as the headlining feature.

Nick Hufford has often been called "The Pacemaker" of minstrel comedians. In other words, he sets the speed for others to follow. His patter is of a novel and entertaining brand; his songs are catchy and he has a voice that makes them all the more enjoyable.

He has been in Atlanta on several occasions before, both in vaudeville and with famous minstrel organizations, and his appearance at the Forsyth the first part of this week guarantees some big-time fun for every performance.

In addition, the program also includes the Mitchell Brothers, singing banjoists, who "hail from the south." Their banjo stepping smacks of plantation days but only because a banjo was the instrument of instruments on the plantation. They are real musicians. They play anything on a banjo from a classical aria to a shuffle.

They sing and play their own accompaniment, using a variety of sunny southern songs. The Mitchell Brothers have just signed a long term contract to make records for an important phonograph company.

Parker, Rand and Cagney have a novelty skit entitled "The Try Angle" and it illustrates what a big difference one letter can make.

The triangle as applied to the theater usually stands for a three-cornered dramatic triangle. The Try Angle as applied by Parker, Rand and Cagney is a three-cornered comedy tangle—a tangle made up of innumerable strands of fun. Parker, Rand and Cagney are the three corners and include in the skit delightful song numbers as well as their inimitable comedy.

Dainty and captivating Miss Corinne and her partner Dick Himber offer "Coquettish Fancies" with Ben Oakland at the piano.

This team is a clever, versatile, juvenile group who provide a fascinating combination of life, color and action. Mr. Himber will probably be remembered as the professional associate of the inimitable Sophie Tucker.

"Jim, Jam, Jems," a trio of comedy gymnasts, offer some splendid clowning and acrobatics as the closing feature.

A Pathe newsreel and a Felix Cat comedy also are attractions.

Ben Lyon of Atlanta.

Ben Lyon, First National Pictures' meteoric juvenile star, is keeping pretty busey these days. Six months ago Ben left Hollywood for New York to appear with Anna Q. Nilsson in "One Way Street." Between this play and "The Necessary Evil" in which he was co-featured with Viola Dana, he hurried to Atlanta, Ga., (his home town) to make personal appearances. Back in New York he was active at the studio numerous nights as well as days, completing his very active part so that he might return to Hollywood to play Pierce Phillips in Frank Lloyd's production of "Winds of Chance," by Rex Beach. Arriving in Hollywood from New York at two-thirty in the afternoon. Ben was rushed to the customer's for a fur garment, then to the tailor for a business suit and left at 6:15 the same afternoon for Truckee, where Dr. Lloyd had rebuilt Dawson City as it was in the gold rush days. And before Ben finishes his part with Mr. Lloyd, he will have to make a trip to Portland, Ore., another to Seattle and another to Vancouver, B. C., after which he will hasten back to New York.

Pat O'Malley, who is featured with Claire Windsor and Robert Frazer in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The White Desert," which Reginald Barker is directing from the story by Courtney Riley Cooper, recently remarked at studio—

"Do you know how to approach a girl with a past?"

"No," replied Frazer, "How?"

Said O'Malley—

"With a present."

"ZANDER THE GREAT," LOEW'S GRAND FEATURE

Atlanta amusement lovers will have their first opportunity of seeing "Zander the Great" this week when that stupendous picture production comes to Loew's Grand for its first local engagement. No expense was spared to make this picture perfect in every detail. Marion Davies is the star and she is supported by an able company of players.

Perhaps never in her career has Miss Davies been so admirably cast as in the role of "Mamie," the demure, whimsical, yet humorous, heroine of "Zander the Great."

A different angle and a new twist has been given the play by the introduction of several comedy characters, who divide the picture equally into two portions—one devoted exclusively to the comedy element and the other to an epic drama of the far west.

The quick moving plot is punctuated with the swifter moving action of cowboys, bandits and rum-runners, who engage in a tremendous battle in the sweeping spaces of the Mojave desert.

This provides the western sequence, which is enacted against the towering walls of high mountains and on the broad expanse of desert, with a sandstorm of blinding intensity.

With Holbrook Blinn, Harrison Ford, Hobart Bosworth, Harry Watson, Jr., Richard Myers, Emily Fitzroy, Jack Huff, Hedda Hopper and others in the cast, "Zander the Great" moves dramatically, yet with many funny touches to relieve it, across the silversheet—a drama of intense and concentrated energy, and which is said to provide something different for blase picture goers. It is a Cosmopolitan production released by Metro-Goldwyn.

"Zander the Great," the Cosmopolitan production, starring Marion Davies, which is distributed by Metro-Goldwyn, was originally a New York stage success, written by Salisbury Field. It proved an extremely popular play which ran for more than a year on Broadway.

Weak After Operation

MRS. R. E. LIGGETT

Savannah, Ga.—"After I had an operation I was in a very weakened state of health, just could not regain my strength. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it made me well and strong. Then before my little girl came I got terribly rundown again, was so weak and nervous I could scarcely get around. I was nauseated, had severe pains and my back ached something awful. I was in distress all the time until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it straightened me right up, relieved me of all distress and pains and I kept well and strong right to the last. I had comparatively no suffering and had a strong, healthy child. 'Favorite Prescription' helps to alleviate suffering and enables the mother to regain her strength." Mrs. R. E. Jan.	21.87	21.78	21.73	21.73	21.73

New York, May 16.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet today with price movements correspondingly narrow and rather irregular. After selling up to 22.37 at the start, July eased off to 22.18, but recovered part of the loss, closing at 22.26, compared with 22 20 at the close of the previous day. The final tone of the market was steady with last prices net unchanged to six points higher. .. ...

The opening was firm at an advance of six to sixteen points, more active positions showing net gains of 10 to 17 points in early trading on covering for over the week end. This buying was stimulated by relatively steady Liverpool cables, and apprehension of cooler and unsettled weather with possible showers in the southwest over Sunday.

More immediate weather conditions in the south were considered favorable, however, while there was much talk of probable increased domestic mill curtailment, following recent complaints of an unsatisfactory demand for cotton goods in the domestic markets, and prices turned easier after the initial demand had been supplied. Reselling by recent buyers for a rally, and some selling for southern account on the setbacks carried prices off from 22.20 to 22.10 for May and from 22.10 to 21.93 for October. The market steadied around yesterday's closing quotations however, and last prices were several points up from the lowest on renewed covering.

Private cables from Fall River, estimating cloth sales in the market for the week there at 30,000 pieces, said that print cloth mill curtailment was estimated at 65 per cent and that the curtailment of fine goods mills was placed at 30 per cent.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 81,952 bales against 72,208 last year. According to private reports reaching here more new crop cotton is expected to move in the lower Rio Grande valley during July this year than last season.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, May 16.—Cotton, spot, quiet; middling, 22.65.

TAME AFFAIR AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, May 16.—The short Saturday session was rather a tame affair except for the spurt of activity near the close when disappointed recent buyers who had bought on the hope of a week-end rally liquidated. The market started out moderately higher owing to firm Liverpool cables. First trades showed gains of 13 to 15 points and July soon traded at 22.49 and October at 21.77, or 15 to 16 points above yesterday's close. From this prices eased off until near the end, July traded at 22.32 and October at 21.58. The close was near the lows, showing 2 points net loss on October and December and no change in other active positions.

The firmness of Liverpool was reported by private cables as due to trade calling and some demand for spots. Early weather reports were generally favorable and that caused a slight setback right after the firm opening. The weather map confirmed the private reports and the market continued to ease off slowly.

The market rallied about the end of the first hour on the official forecast for generally showery weather and colder in the western belt, but the improvement did not hold as the expected covering by shorts failed to materialize. Instead recent buyers sold rather freely in the last quarter of an hour of trading and this selling wiped out all the earlier gains and established new lows for the day in the last few minutes of trading.

Private advices indicated that the crop was making favorable progress and there was a disposition to look for a rather high condition average when the first government report of the season is issued in June.

Exports today 9,907.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, May 16.—The cottonseed oil market today was steady for spots and May contracts, but later months were rather heavy under selling by cotton houses and in absence of demand. The close was 10 points net higher, to 5 points lower. Sales, 1,700 barrels. Prime crude, nominal; prime summer yellow, spot, $10.00; May closed, $10.83; July, 10.20; September, $10.73; October, $10.54, all bid.

ADVANCE IS SEEN IN WHEAT MARKET

Chicago, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Predictions of unseasonably cold weather and frost in the Dakotas and Nebraska together with likelihood of a decided falling off in the amount of wheat on ocean passage led to higher prices today for wheat. Chicago closing quotations on wheat were firm at 1 to 2 1-2c net advance, May 1.70 1-2 to 1.71 and July 1.53 3-8 to 1.53 1-2. Corn finished at 7-8c to 1 5-8c gain; oats unchanged to 3-8c up, and provisions unchanged to 47c higher.

Upturns in wheat came after a temporary downward trend, associated with extensive rains, which gave relief from semi-drought conditions in the central west. Furthermore, Liverpool prices today were lower than expected. Offerings here, however, lacked volume, and the market quickly responded to buying based on forecasts of frost and on talk of a probable decrease of 9,000,000 bushels Monday in the aggregate of wheat afloat on the ocean.

Indications that on Monday a good-sized curtailment of the United States visible supply of wheat would be shown had also considerable to do with the upward swing of the wheat market. Because of shrinkage of domestic stocks, millers were only buying for immediate needs. Exporters were doing likewise.

Frost fears outranked other news in the corn market, as well as in wheat. The corn market was helped upward, too, by a rise in hog values and by general belief that the visible supply statement on Monday would show a fair decrease both for corn and oats.

Provisions reflected the strength of hog values and of corn.

Ashburn Hatchery Sets 30,000 Eggs During Season

Ashburn, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) When the present hatch is taken out of the Ashburn mammoth hatchery the present season will end. It has been a successful season and indicates how intrenched poultry growing is in the operations of the Tuner county farmer.

Approximately 30,000 eggs were set this season in the hatchery, which is a splendid showing. Especially when it is taken in connection with the fact that with the exception of 100 baby chicks, everyone of them remained in Turner county.

Great Improvement Made In Schools of Hancock; Many Are Consolidated

Sparta, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—Probably the greatest improvement in recent years in Hancock county has been made in the erection of modern school buildings in different sections of the county. This can be more fully realized by seeing a series of photographs in the office of County Agent Truitt showing the old log school houses of one or more rooms as compared with the latest one built—the Mayfield school—which is a modern brick structure built along the most approved lines of architecture.

Other fine buildings, housing consolidated schools, are located at Culverton, Devereux, Powelton and Linton. This county, no doubt, has made greater strides in this direction than any other, as it was the first in the state to establish consolidated schools under the superintendency of Professor M. L. Duggan, now a well-known state school supervisor.

The county schools will close the later part of this month after a full nine months' session.

NEW SUBDIVISION OPENS AT THOMASTON

Thomaston, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—The property on the north side of Thomaston is being surveyed and laid out for a big residential section. This property is owned by Mrs. E. T. Nottingham and Hightower Brothers. Several handsome homes will be erected this summer, and it is expected that it will be one of the most attractive residential sections in the county.

The new highway passes through the property and this road will be paved at an early date. Nottingham springs adjoins the section and a beautiful pine grove surrounds it.

Sparta Shipping Lumber.

Sparta, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—The lumber industry in Hancock county is now at high tide, although it was thought by many that all of the timber had been cut. Sveral planing mills located here and at other points in the county, are running full time and shipping numbers of cars daily to the northern and eastern markets.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York May 16.—The market is in a waiting attitude with averages hovering around the high levels of the year, although several individual stocks are selling several points below their points. Fundamental and technical conditions are favorable to a further advance and with the continuance of cheap money, we still believe that the next movement of importance will be on the upside. We favor rails, oils and selected individual stocks which exhibit good earning statements.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, May 16.—The industrial list got into new high ground in the first hour thi smorning with some rather sensational moves in special stocks such as Motor Wheels, Certainteed Products and Union Bag and Paper. The feature, however, was the strength shown by leading stocks such as steel common, Baldwin and American Can Buying was a little better distributed than has been the case recently, but still stock movements are largely under the influence of pool operations and cliques. In the last hour some natural profit-taking came in and the market in absorbing it showed a very firm tone. Stocks look higher.

JNO. F. CLARK & CO.

New York, May 16.—Judging by recent action of the market, it seems reasonable to believe that the course of least resistance is in an upward direction, and judging by recent reports of accumulation were particularly like the oil and rail issues excepting that they will be favored in the next sharp up swing.

Cotton Letters.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, May 16.—There seems a more general disposition to believe that the favorable crop conditions have been discounted, but the continued favorable weather news and reported spread mill curtailment appear a check on fresh buying. It is difficult to reconcile the heavy spinners' takings with the reported curtailment and while the demand at present comes chiefly from shorts there is apparently a growing tendency to buy contracts on scale down. The market appears oversold and any unfavorable turn in the crop outlook can easily bring about a sharp advance.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, May 16.—The strength of Liverpool and much better dry goods news were helpful influences. The northwest is complaining of too much rains and says planting which ought to be general, will be held up a week or ten days.

Steadiness of the market during past three days appears to be strengthening the claims of many in the trade, that the recent decline discounts the improvement which has taken place in the crop outlook. As a result of this, those favoring the buying side are apparently gaining courage and may become aggressive, if over Sunday weather turns out to be unfavorable as the forecast indicates.

POST AND FLAGG.

New York, May 16.—The spread of mill curtailment and the continued dullness in dry goods has naturally had a discouraging effect on sentiment. Until there comes a distinct change in the above conditions or a radical revision of crop ideas the market looks like a sale on any good advances.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, May 16.—(A. V. Curran & Co., correspondents.)—The trade is anticipating the probability of a further bearish government crop condition report on June 2 perhaps as high or higher than the ten-year average of 72, against 65.6 for May 25, last year. Meanwhile the market will likely be sold on good bulges unless very unfavorable weather prevails inland.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, May 16.—However, the feeling still continues bearish and at times there will be a tendency to sell cotton provided the weather is satisfactory over the belt. The trade is assuming a policy of waiting and watching developments but we would not be surprised to see the trade begin to take on some of their commitments around this level, particularly if weather reports begin to become unsatisfactory. It seems that the heavy selling that occurred last week is over and the market rightfully is entitled to some upturn, even though it be moderate.

Liverpool futures are due Monday: July 12.04, October 11.75.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, May 16.—The forecast is for unsettled weather in the southwest, and further important rains in that section over Sunday would probably stimulate the market, as dry weather is now needed in that quarter. On the whole, however, the trade is impressed with the present crop outlook, and until something develops to cause a modification of the prevailing optimistic feeling concerning the growing crop, we think it doubtful if any important recovery in prices can be expected.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, May 16.—During the next two weeks a great deal will be heard about figures for the first condition report to be issued June 2 and present prospects are that they will be large. It seems from the market's action, however, that facts up to date are discounted. We recommend purchases on easiness. Liverpool July due, 12.04.

Grain Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, Ill., May 16.—WHEAT: There was a general selling because of disappointing cables and general rains over the west and northwest. Offering closely absorbed, however, and market recovered, advancing to a premium over previous close. Weather forecast for much lower temepratures with frost for Nebraska and the northwest had a stimulating effect on the buying.

CORN: Higher prices made chiefly because there was a lack of selling pressure. Corn was inclined to follow the action of wheat, with the undertone much stronger.

OATS: Trade dull but market firm after opening weakness. There was no pressure. Commission houses bought in a small way, the demand being encouraged by strength in wheat.

JNO. F. CLARKE & CO.

Chicago, May 6.—Export business is quite small, only a few parcels being taken, but the tone of private cables is steady to firm. Monday's statistics will probably show world's shipments around 10,000,000 bushels and a considerable decrease in the amount on passage. A London authority estimating a decrease of 9,000,000 bushels. It is stated that Southwestern mills are in the market for old wheat, but it had been supposed that they had sufficient supplies until new wheat was available. There are no fresh developments to excite the market and create an unwarranted advance, but we believe that the decreasing supplies, particularly those on passage abroad, will be a strengthening factor. Conservative purchases should be viewed with favor.

STATE POSTMASTERS TO MEET IN ATLANTA

The Georgia branch of the National League of District Postmasters will convene in Atlanta Monday and Tuesday at the Kimball house, according to announcement today of the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau.

There are more than 1,100 postoffices in Georgia which are eligible to send representatives to this meeting, as it includes all third and fourth-class offices in the state, it is stated. About two or three hundred delegates are expected to be here, however, according to those in charge of the meeting. With the decentralization of the postoffice department, the national government has transferred to the capital office of each state the matters of accounting, registry, insurance and many other phases of the postal service formerly transacted at Washington, it is stated, and Atlanta is the Georgia headquarters now of all this service. Speakers from the local office will appear on the convention program and explain to the Georgia postmasters matters affecting these branches of the service.

Several representatives of the postoffice department at Washington will be in the city for the meeting and addresses will be made by some of these men. Frank Staley, of the first assistant postmaster general's office will be one of the principal speakers, and Senator Walter E. George will also address the convention on Tuesday.

"A good definition of the modern commercial traveler would be 'A business man who sells'."

How Much Time Is Lost By the Salesman on the Road?

"Today's salesman knows that cost accounting applies to his operations, as well as factory operations."

BY ELMER E. FERRIS,
Author of Sales Text Books, and Professor of Salesmanship, New York University School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance.

During the past few years a noticeable change has been taking place in the methods and habits of traveling salesmen. All lines of business are becoming more highly organized; business methods are more efficient; production is crowding consumption; competition is keener. As a result of this, the executive brains of the country are being focussed upon problems of marketing and selling. Salesmanagership is being placed upon a more scientific basis. Careless and wasteful methods of selling are being corrected and hence the habits and methods of traveling salesmen are also undergoing a change.

A good definition of the modern commercial traveler would be "A business man who sells." The former "Tom and Jerry" type of salesmanship is becoming obsolete. This does not mean that personal influence and good fellowship have ceased to be elements of effective selling, but they no longer dominate.

More emphasis is being placed upon business principles. The salesman is becoming more of a business expert. He studies sales manuals, trade journals, and text books on selling. He attends sales conferences, and conventions and sometimes follows a course in sales instruction furnished by his company. We do not mean to say that all salesmen do this or that any salesman does all of it, but the modern tendency is in this direction. Large organizations like Burroughs Adding Machine company, National Cash Register, Equitable Life Assurance company, Alexander Hamilton institute, and scores of others have led the way by preparing systems of sales instruction and training which include lectures, texts, lessons and sales practice both in groups and out on the field.

Sometimes a course is given to the salesmen by correspondence. Smaller concerns also furnish their salesmen something of the kind in the way of a complete sales manual, which contains not only technical information but also sales instruction. In fact, most sales executives today are utilizing some system of sales instruction and training.

Two Features.

The result of this, as stated above, is showing itself in the methods of work employed by traveling salesmen. It might be interesting to note one or two important features of it.

There is probably no other occupation in which so much time can be saved by careful planning as in that of the traveling salesman. Conversely, a great amount of valuable time can be wasted by careless methods of work. The occupation offers much liberty in the matter of time since there are no time clocks, no one to check him up.

The modern salesman guards against this. He has learned that the principles of cost accounting and scientific management apply not only to factory operations but also to the operations of a salesman on the road. This matter was well stated in a message to their salesmen by H. B. Hardenburg & Co., of Brooklyn, where they pointed out that "there are certain factors in cost accounting that a salesman can apply to his work just the same as the cost accountant applies them in the home plant. He has certain fixed charges that must be taken care of before he commences to show a profit, viz., (1) overhead expense, (2) sales expense, (3) productive labor, (4) non-productive labor, (5) idle time.

"In factory cost accounting everything is figured on productive labor. Non-productive labor and idle time are added to ovehead expense, which is figured as a percentage on the productive time in order to get at the actual cost. The more the salesman can reduce the non-productive time and idle time and increase the productive time, the better chance he has for making a profit."

The modern salesman appreciates the force of these facts, and prepares himself to organize his time on a scientific basis by means of a thorough system of prospecting. Take, for instance, the matter of territory analysis.

He carefully studies the lay-out of his terriotory—not only the location of his towns and cities and the business centers, but also the physical characteristics of the surrounding country, the nature and productiveness of its soil and the climatic conditions. He also investigates in detail the resources and business conditions of the territory, such as the nature, quality and value of its agricultural and manufactured products and he watches temporary conditions such as the effect of strikes, storms, droughts, floors, epidemics and the like.

Then again he carefully posts himself upon the nationality and occupation of the population—their racial groups, incomes, resources and buying habits. He learns whether the business men and workers in his territory are mainly engaged in merchandising, agriculture, manufacturing, mining for a variety of these and to what extent. Also, whether they are mainly engaged in the production of wheat, corn, cotton, fruit, lumber, tobacco, coal, oil, iron, live stock, or a variety of these, and to what extent. He studies the effect of all this upon his particular line as to demand, quality and so forth.

Studies Note.

He also carefully organizes his territory as to the best means of covering it. He divides it into working blocks and routes. He applies himself with state, county and city maps showing the transportation facilities not only of railroad lines, but also trolley routes and automobile roads. Then in the matter of the business concerns and individluals who are his logical prospects, he builds up his list by a thorough investigation into needs, financial ability, buying habits, personal prejudices, hobbies and recreations.

His sources of information are maps, railroad pamphlets, chamber of commerce pamphlets, United States census reports, United States department of commerce bulletins, business and financial letters issued by Metropolitan banks and so forth. He finds that most of these can be obtained at little or no expensee by applying at the source by mail or in person. He also consults city directories, trade directories, social directories, civic and social club lists, and so forth, not overlooking personal sources such as customers, friends, other salesmen and any individual whom he may meet who in his opinion may be in possession of helpful information. In short, the modern salesman is a perpetual interrogation point in search of information which relates to his particular enterprise and possible prospects.

Now as a result of all this, he is able to organize his time in advance and intelligently direct his selling activities thus avoiding a useless waste of valuable time. He lists his towns, checks up railroad schedules and plans in advance his proposed movements for each coming week. Such a schedule, of course, is always subject to change. There may be delays, new prospects and businss changes which necessitate a sudden revision. The schedule is made for business, not business for the schedule; but he considers it quite as important to keep his work carefully planned in advance as to do it well when engaged with his customer. Here are some of the advantages which he finds in utilizing such a system of prospecting and organizing his time.

1. He becomes more prompt and business-like in dividing his day. He makes his calls more systematically.

2. He holds his interviews more closely to the matter in hand. He does not forget to be sociable but he avoids much waste of time that can easily be lost in anecdotes, gossip, and needless chatter about matters which do not help business.

3. He is thus able to avail himself of the law of averages which is one of the important laws of successful selling.

This law might be stated in some such way as this: Given a salesman of fair average ability, with a meritorious offering—something that people need and can use—and let him intelligently plan in advance how he shall use his time and then let him employ his time each day with good average diligence, he will become a profitable producer.

This is the lay of intelligent work—persistent plugging—which is quite as certain in its operation as the law of gravitation. However, the operation of it requires that a man prepare for it by organizing his time.

Obviously, a thorough discussion of organizing and dividing a salesman's time involves many other necessary matters not mentioned here, such as amusement, recreation, reading, study, sociability, and so forth, all of which have their proper place in his activities. He does not attempt to hold himself down to a cut-and-dried schedule of living. However, the modern salesman on the road is learning how to systematically "plan his work and work his plan." He applies to his sales activities the principles of scientific management.

POWER DEVELOPMENT PROPOSED IN ALABAMA

Birmingham, Ala., May 16.—Proposed vast expansion of hydro-electric projects in Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and other southern states was today outlined here by Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power company. This company is affiliated with the Mississippi Power company and the Muscle Shoals Hydro-Electric company, a projected power in development of the Tennessee river just below Muscle Shoals, application for which is now before the federal power commission.

"Authority to construct a large power plant in the vicinity of Riverton, Ala., or near the mouth of Bear Creek in Mississippi, is necessary to supply demands for power for industrial or other public utilities in Mississippi and that part of Kentucky without hydro-power resources," said Mr. Martin, who continued:

"The Mississippi Power company, affiliated with the Muscle Shoals Hydro-Electric Power company and the Alabama Power company, is going ahead acquiring electric power plants and plans for transmission lines in that state to serve its growing power needs. That demand, which is a large one, in addition to the market in west Tennessee extending to Memphis, will readily absorb the output of the proposed dam when completed, including whatever surplus power is not used in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals from the government at Wilson Dam.

"As public utilities companies operating in this section of the south, it is their duty to anticipate the power needs of the territory they propose to serve. For that reason, we feel the time has come for additional power developments to assist in promoting the progress and development of that territory where our companies operate."

Ivan Allen To Sail On Trip to Europe With Wife and Son

Ivan E. Allen, prominent civic leader and president of the Ivan Allen-Marshall company, will leave Atlanta Monday with Mrs. Allen and their young son, Ivan, r., for New York, from which city they will sail on the Acquitania, May 20, for a two months' tour of Europe.

Mr. Allen goes to Europe by invitation of the British Stationers' association, which organization he will address at a banquet at the Cecil hotel, London, on the night of May 28, in his official capacity as representative from the American Stationers' association to the convention of British stationers in session in London. From London Mr. Allen will go to Rome, Italy, where he will address the Italian association of stationers as the official representative of the American association.

Mr. Allen is the first past president of the American Association of Stationers and during his term of office the British association sent Sir Percy Barrenger to America as the representative of that organization to the stationers in this country.

This is the first official visit ever paid to the two foreign associations by an American representative, and Mr. Allen considers it quite an honor to have been selected to represent his country before these two important European associations.

From Rome, Mr. and Mrs. Allen expect to tour Switzerland and Germany and the French battlefields, returning to Atlanta about the first of August.

WAYCROSS CONFERENCE OPPOSES UNIFICATION

Folkston, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) The Waycross district conference of the Methodist church met at Folkston three days this week. The unification question was voted upon, which resulted in the overwhelming defeat of unification.

More than 250 delegates and 50 ministers were in attendance. A feature of the meeting was a banquet served on the courthouse lawn.

FACTS ABOUT GEORGIA SET OUT IN BOOKLET

Much valuable information about Georgia, about Georgia products, achievements of Georgia men, Georgia history and the growth and development of Georgia cities is contained in a booklet, "Georgia Facts and Figures," compiled by Professor Thomas L. Bryan, head of the Bryan-Hatton Business college, Atlanta, and for many years the head of prominent southern higher educational institutions.

Professor Hatton published the book for free distribution for the benefit of citizens who want to know various information about the state. It contains 36 pages and possesses some unique and interesting facts and figures about the state.

Included in the book are chapters on Georgia "first things," telling of the first railway, steamboat, telephone, newspaper and the like; a list of famous Georgia houses; novel names of Georgia towns; Georgia in war; Georgia underground; Georgia manufacturing, agriculture, education, churches, famous Georgia people and Georgia cities.

Under the head of cities the following is printed concerning Atlanta:

"Atlanta—The Gate City of the South, a city, with its suburbs, of 285,344. Atlanta, the city where 90,000 merchants trade, twenty-five hundred factories, forty-four hotels, largest commercial printing plant in the south, second largest mule market in the world, largest shoe manufactory in the south, leads the south in the manufacturing of all kinds of farm implements, leads in the sale of paints, glass and building material. Factories employing over 32,000 wage earners. Twenty prominent hotels with 4,400 rooms. Atlanta—the educational center of the south, a city with 200 churches. Atlanta—the city of skyscrapers filled with offices representing every industry known to man. Atlanta—the distributing point of northern and eastern industries. Every automobile company, every insurance company, every railroad and steamship line, every piano company, and a thousand other industries have branch offices in Atlanta."

G. S. ROACH HEADS ASHBURN SCHOOLS

Ashburn, Ga., May 16.—(Special.) Professor G. S. Roach, superintendent of the Ashburn public schools for the past four years, was unanimously reelected by the city board of education. The people of Turner county, as well as in Ashburn, are happy to have Professor Roach, who has made scores of friends since being here, to again head the public schools.

Toccoa Has College.

Toccoa, Ga., May 16.—(Special.)—The Toccoa Commercial school opened Monday with a large enrollment of students for a four-month course in business training, under the instruction of Miss Agnes Stoner.

This school is a branch of the Atlanta Business college, owned and maintained by B. Dixon Hall.

NATIONAL PAINT MEN CONVENE HERE MONDAY

Atlanta will be the mecca of the paint, oil and varnish dealers of the south Monday and Tuesday of this week, who will come here to attend the first southern zone conference of the National Paint, Oil and Varnish association, which will be held at the Biltmore hotel for two days, beginning at 10 o'clock Monday morning. About 250 dealers from all the southeastern states are expected to be in the city for the conference, it is stated.

This is the first zone conference the national association has held in the south and decision to come here was reached following several very successful regional conferences in the north ad west, it is stated. Invitations were sent by the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau and by the local paint club to every member of the national association to attend the southern conference, and southern dealers are expected to take advantage of this opportunity to meet with the national officers who will be here and discuss problems of interest to them.

An elaborated social program to augment the exceptionally good business meeting has been prepared for the delegates to the southern zone conference, beginning at 10 o'clock Monday morning with a motor ride for the visiting ladies. At 1 o'clock Monday a luncheon at the Atlanta Woman's club will honor the ladies, and at 4 o'clock Monday they will be taken for a motor trip to Stone mountain.

At 8 o'clock Monday night at the Biltmore hotel the delegates will be entertained at a beautiful reception and dance.

Tuesday morning the ladies will be taken for a motor trip about the city and will be shown the cyclorama at Grant Park. In the afternoon they will be entertained at a luncheon at 1 o'clock at the East Lake Country club, followed by a bridge party. That afternoon the men will enjoy a golf tournament on the links at East Lake. Tuesday night at 8 o'clock the delegates and visitors will be entertained at a banquet by the local paint club. Mrs. Fred J. Cooledge, Jr., is chairman of the woman's reception committee.

Officers of the national association who are expected to be in attendance at the Atlanta convention are E. V. Peters, New York, president; R. McC. Bullington, Richmond, vice president of the southern zone, and George V. Horgan, New York, secretary.

Members of the local committee in charge of the convention plans are: Grier Martin, chairman; George W. West, A. A. LaVaque, Hugh Gardner, S. L. Rhorer and L. R. Hunter.

ATLANTANS ON FAST TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD

An average speed of 65 miles an hour was maintained between Jacksonville and the southern terminal of the Florida East Coast railway, the fastest ime ever made between these points by rail, it was announced upon the return of a group of Atlantans and other Georgians who made a recent visit to Hollywood By the Sea, Florida.

The party was personally conducted by Charles W. Tray, Atlanta district manager of the Hollywood companies, and the train was in the charge of V. L. Estes, division passenger agent of the Southern railway.

The itinerary embraced trips through Miami, Coral Gables, Cocoanut Grove, the Venetian islands, and a number of inland waterways and ocean trips. Hollywood's present population is 5,000, and it is prophesied by those familiar with Florida's growth that it will be a city of 25,000 within five years.

New 1925 High Records Are Seen on Saturday

DAY'S SUMMARY.

Low, 1925	114.31	96.13

Total stocks, 627,700.

New York, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Profit-taking sales checked another sharp advance in today's stock market. Net gains, however, exceeded net losses at the close, with the day's sales running well over 600,000 shares. Another flock of new 1925 high records was established, the list including American Water Works, St. Louis, San Francisco common, Foundation Company, Virginia Railway and Power and Nash Motors, the last named crossing 375 to the highest price in its history.

While stocks under pool control made the best showing, better buying support was noted for a number of the standard industrials. United States Steel crossed 117 and then slipped back to 116 1-2, up 3-8 on the day, and Baldwin recorded a similar gain at 114 3-8 after selling as high as 115 3-4. American Can closed fractionally lower at 190.

Coppers showed an improved tone on reports of better trade conditions. Calumet and Arizona rising 2 5-8 points and most of the others showing fractional gains. Oils received little attention pending further trade developments. Rails also moved within rather narrow and irregular limits despite new merger rumors concerning some of the smaller roads.

Fresh buying came into the motor group on reports that May was likely to establish a new production record. Pierce-Arrow prior preferred advanced 3 points to a record top at 111; Motor Wheel Corporation, which is expected to receive royalties from its balloon tire patents, moved up two points to a new top at 22 1-8.

Kelsey Wheel, Marlin, Rockwell, Spicer Manufacturing preferred; Stromberg Carburetor and White Motors also recorded good gains.

Other outstanding strong spots included American Sumatra Tobacco preferred, Certainteed Products, Manati Sugar common and preferred, May Department Stores, Montana Power, National Lead, Remington Typewriter, Underwood Typewriter, Union Bag and Paper, Utah Securities and Van Raalte Silk Corporation.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet, with the principal rates holding relatively firm. Demand sterling continued to rule above $4.85 and French francs were moderately active, around 5.20 cents.

Car Loadings Prove Soundness Of Business Conditions---Platt

BY C. H. PLATT.

New York, May 16.—(Special to The Constitution.)—The stock market was utterly baffling at times in the past week. There were decidedly weak parts of the market and decidedly strong ones, at the same time. Some stocks were going down as if they were in a bear market and others going up as if the sky was the limit. Then there would be a period where entire groups advanced for an hour or two, were dropped and other groups taken up for a brief time. The whole list looked very good at one moment and very poor at another. Yet through it all, the general trend was in an upward direction and various bullish conditions existed even during the periods of reaction. Thus there was not a sign of important liquidation in most issues and there were evidences of some accumulation here and there for very big people. It looked as if the professional traders were just as much at sea as some of the most inexperienced outsiders, for the professionals proceeded to sell some stocks that gave ground rapidly for a while and then rallied sharply when short covering was tried, while the floor traders took the long side in some of the stocks that had been quite strong, only to find them reacting on profit taking by the insiders.

As a whole, the best evidences indicated that the ruling force was the market operations of some people of great wealth and some powerful trading pools. They took up various stocks, at one time for a quick but small trading profit, at another for the sake of holding for a long pull. Some important investment buying also appeared in many of the better class stocks. Business news has taken a more favorable turn, with somewhat better conditions in the steel trade, and with the motor companies doing surprisingly well when it is remembered that early in the year the outlook for the automobile trade was dubious. There has been a great increase in business in rubber, and better conditions exist in the leather industry than in several years. The oil trade is prosperous and there are prospects for an advance in prices for light oil and gasoline.

High Car Loadings.

The best proof that general business is in a sound position is to be found in the continuation of unusually high railroad car loadings, which are ahead of all previous records for this season of the year. The average observer of the stock market has been waiting for a broader movement in prices than has developed in the past two or three weeks. This has been so irregular, with such frequent reactions or with some stocks strong when others are weak, that most outside traders are afraid to enter the market on the long side. Thus the motor shares rushed up sharply early in the past week, then met with such heavy profit-taking that they reacted sharply just when the public was starting to buy them on a liberal scale. Some stocks of a very doubtful character and of small intrinsic worth had sharp advances, but so did some first-class investment issues. In one stock there was so much short selling that conditions not far from a corner resulted, and it had a big advance, but an increasing supply was found and it thereupon sold off again.

In many other places shorts were squeezed for sharp advances, yet in some places bear pressure succeeded in causing some severe declines. Despite the spotty market and

GAINS ARE SCORED IN BOND MARKET

New York, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—The normal Saturday reduction in trading volume failed today to check the upward movement of bond prices, which ended the week at the year's highest levels. Speculative activities centered in the low-priced railroad issues which responded to merger reports, while steady investment buying imparted a firm tone to United States and foreign government obligations and standard rails and industrials.

France's move for a solution of the interallied debt question created a favorable impression which was reflected in renewed buying of French governmental and municipal securities. Gains of a point were recorded by the Republic's 7 1-2s and the Seine 7s.

Reports that the Burlington railroad was negotiating for the Green Bay and Western lifted the latter's debentures 3 to 4 points, but they subsequently reacted on official denials that any deal was pending. Ann Arbor 4s also responded to rumors that a larger system, presumably the Wabash, was seeking control of the line. The demand for other rail liens embraced Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4 1-2s, Chicago & Northwestern refunding 5s, Hudson & Manhattan refunding 5s and "Katy" adjustment 5s. New York Central 6s yielded more than a point.

Few changes of importance took place in the industrial section, although Skelly Oil, Bethlehem Steel and Eastern Cuba Sugar bonds were active at higher prices.

Daily Stock Feature

Over Fenner & Beane's Private Leased Wire.

LOEW'S INC.—For period September 1, 1924, to March 15, 1925, this company reported earnings of $3.72 per share on capital stock after interest and federal taxes, but before a depreciation write off of 67 cents per share. Recently the company's financial position has materially improved, bank loans having been entirely paid off, while leaving the company with adequate cash on hand.

UNION PACIFIC—Notwithstanding the fact that the gross revenues during 1924 declined over 10 per cent, this company's net operating income declined only 4½ per cent. Union Pacific's earnings for 1924 equalled $14.29 per share for the common stock, after a depreciation write off of $2.13 per share, a comfortable margin over dividend requirements. The present dividend rate is well secured, and in due time can conservatively be expected to increase.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Behind the Ranges is a western story by the popular author of "Happy Valley," who has based her story on the following lines from Kipling:

"Something hidden. Go find it.
Go and look behind the ranges—
Something lost behind the ranges.
Lost and waiting for you. 'Go!'"

White Trail's End. By Theodore von Ziekursch, whose knowledge of the great north is the basis for a thrilling story that will hold the reader's interest to the last page.

It is the story of John Stewart, a son of the north, who, realizing that the people and the country he loves so well is being robbed by unscrupulous interests, makes the fight of his life.

The three leading characters who play a splendid part in this great drama are a man and a woman and a heroic dog. The scenes are laid in this wonderful northwest country which is the playground for rich people from every part of the United States as well as for the grafters and the workers of greed who are always watching the forests and rivers which are noted for their immense prizes in timber and minerals. The author's description is so vivid that the reader in imagination can almost feel the thrill of the big country and the big game. (Macrae-Smith Company, Philadelphia.)

ANNE SHANNON MONROE.

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The House of the Secret (La Maison des Hommes Vivants). By Claude Farrere, author of "Thomas the Lambkin," with authorized translation by Arthur Livingston, of which The Houston Post says: "The most successfully weird and eerie tale which has been given the public in many a day." (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

Unveiled. A novel by Beatrice Kean Seymour, author of "Intrusion," "The Hopeful Journey," etc. The London Daily Telegraph says: "This is a most wonderful human document, full of cynical humor and the slow-moving tragedy that is so much more poignant than melodrama. It is a story full of action, questions and very little understanding. Why these tragedies in real life and why they should be made the foundation of a story without showing where the moral is hidden are unanswered questions. It is an absorbing story and will hold the reader's interest to the last. (Thomas Seltzea, publisher, New York.)

Bigger and Blacker. By Octavus Roy Cohen, who has become famous for his negro stories. The book deals with the successes and mishaps—mostly the latter—of various members of the Midnight Pictures corporation, a moving picture company of negroes who made such excellent two-reel comic pictures in Birmingham, Ala., that they were shown in about one hundred high-grade houses throughout the country. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED.

Snuffs and Butters. By Ellen N. Lamotte, is a collection of stories about the east, of which she made a study while there recuperating after her hard work as a nurse at the front during the great war.

The author has written several books, among them being one upon the subject of the world problem from her viewpoint and entitled "The Ethics of Opium"—the other book was entitled "Peking Dust," which is a series of colorful pictures of China showing the terrible effects of the drug which is sweeping the old world and the new as well.

While "Snuffs and Butters" does not devote all its pages to this evil, in several of the stories you are aware of the fact that the author has it still before her as a problem. But the stories as a whole give you an intimate knowledge of China, India and of Africa.

She relates a story located in India, "Proof," which is weird and appealing. Each of the stories possess an individual quality and each and every one of the tales will be read with keen interest. They contain many strange situations created by the contacts of east and west. (The Century Company.)

The Book of Diversion. Compiled by Franklin P. Adams, Deems Taylor, Jack Bechdolt, aided and abetted by Helen Rowland and Mabel Claire. The publishers say of the volume, "It answers the universal question, 'What shall we do?' It is a book packed with novelties from title to tailpiece and one that slips into the coat pocket."

It fell to the lot of Franklin P. Adams to select the Verse and the reader will recognize the rare collection: "The Song of Songs," which is Solomon's, Shakespeare, Poe, Browning, Bret Harte, etc. Deems Taylor volunteered to select the Songs, and remembering that Horace Walpole said "A careless song, with a little nonsense in it now and then, does not misbecome a monarch." He has chosen some of the songs on account of their words and others because they are so tuneful. He has even indicated the fundamental harmony appropriate to each tune, among these songs are a few negro spirituals which are known from one end of the country to the other. Jack Bechdolt prefaces his selection with lines from Thomas Warton:

"All human race, from China to Peru,
Pleasure, however, disguised by art, pursue."

"Outdoor and indoor plays, with Stories about same, are needed by everybody, old or young. They help to brighten the corner.

Helen Rowland's title is "Personally Speaking," which for some reason or other is devoted entirely to three words, Love, Courtship and Marriage.

Mabel Claire felt that she could add, after all, the most interesting part.—Food.

"Serenely full, the epicure would say, Fate cannot harm me—I have doned today."—Sidney Smith. (Greenberg, Inc.)

POETRY AND DRAMA.

The Best Poems of 1924. Edited by L. A. G. Strong, author of "Dublin Days," "The Best Poems of 1923," is a most attractive little volume. Besides the list of the titles of the poems there is an index of "First Lines" which will add interest and assistance as well. For instance, "I gave you a picture once." Amy Lowell. "I hear them whispering—what is it?" Harriet Monroe. "Where long the shadows of the wind had rolled." Edwin Arlington Robinson. (Small, Maynard & Co., Boston.)

The Light Bearers. Stories of old Greece. By Aldis Dunbar.

This is another attractive little volume which any girl or boy will find of special interest. The table of contents tells the story of "The Glory of Greece," "Legend and Histroy," "To the glory that was Greece
And the grandeur that was Rome"—
To Helen—Poe.
here that the celebrated Olympic games were held, and the crowd was made up of representatives from all over the world. (Beckley-Cardy Co., Chicago.)

Copy—1925, is a splendid collection of stories, plays, poems and essays, which are the selections of Blanche Colton Williams, assisted by Dorothy Brewster, Kenyon Nicholson, Helen Hull ando Glen Mullin. These selections are from the published work of students who are taking special courses at Columbia university. The introduction is by Donal Lemen Clark, assistant professor of English in Columbia university.

The short stories are readable from the first on the list entitled "The Mouse" to the last which is entitled "The American" and located in faraway China.

The Essays and Special Articles, of which there are six, two of which were written by Caroline E. Vose and both of which are located in a domestic atmosphere, "Cooks I Have Loved—and Lost" and "Our Hired Man," are both readable and laughable. As to the verse Anne Blackwell Payne deserves to be given honorable mention, as three of her poems have been selected—"Ships of Galilee," "For Violins" and "Wind Bells." Rudolph Gilbert, too, has been honored with two selections, "The Christ Spirit" and "Russia." There are two one-act plays which will add to the interest of the volume, which is one of the most attractive that has come from the leadership of Mrs. Williams. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Low Bridge and Punk Pungs. By Sam Hellman, with illustrations by Tony Sarg. The contents of the little volume covers Low Bridge, High Bridge, Eight Clubs, Doubled and Punk Pungs.

Many questions have been asked about Sam Hellman since the time he left the University of California until he quit the newspaper game in 1922 to earn his income tax by writing fiction, during which time he worked on twenty-two newspapers in two years. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Auction Bridge Summary. The Principles of Bidding and Play for Beginners and Advanced Students of Auction Bridge. By Wilbur C. Whitehead, author of other books on bridge playing. Mr. Whitehead is chairman of the card committee of the Knickerbocker Whist club of New York. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

Cushing's Manual of Parliamentary Practice. Rules of proceeding and debate in deliberative assemblies, by Luther Cushing. This is a new revision of this little volume by Paul E. Lowe, with by-laws and additional notes. (David McKay Co., Philadelphia, Pa.)

Callinicus. A Defense of Chemical Warfare. By J. B. S. Haldane, who for one does not believe that war is over. He also believes that "chemical" warfare—that is warfare with poisonous gas and smokes of weapons—is not only inevitable, but much more humane than warfare with explosives.

This is a little volume, small in size, but filled with stimulating suggestions from a famous chemist. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

PAGECOUES.

A Scholar's Mystery.

The world is full of contrasts and incongruities, but one of the most pointed is the life of the author of "The House on the Downs," compared with the life she depicts. G. E. Locke spends her days in the cloistered and scholarly atmosphere of the Boston Public library cataloguing books. Few of the hundreds who frequent the library would guess that this unassuming lady is the author of four excellent mystery stories, which W. Orton Tewson, of the Literary Review placed "at the top of his list of the best mystery stories." And "The Red Cavalier," "The Scarlet Macaw," "The Purple Mist" and now "The House on the Downs" are deserving of his praise.

In one fortunate respect Miss Locke's daytime environment has left its mark on her literary work. The style of her stories is far above the ordinary detective story jargon, and readers of her books have the privilege of enjoying the work of a true student of literature. Fortunately for these readers, the scholar has developed her talent on the original field of imaginative mystery stories and the pursuit of her hobby has given them four books that are the cream of fiction.

A Young Author Honored.

One of the highest honors bestowed in academic circles has been given to Helen K. Broughall, the young Stanford student whose first book "Barbara Winthrop at Boarding School," is being enthusiastically received by the junior reading public. Miss Broughall has just been awarded a scholarship at the University of Lyons, France, in a competition among girls from all colleges in the United States.

The Lucky Village.

Many towns have their biographies written, but few have the good fortune to secure the services of such a clever author as Dorothea Castelhun to do the writing. Miss Castelhun, whose "House in the Golden Orchard," recently published, has been collaborating on a book about Carmel, Cal., a village frequented by writers and painters, where she is now living.

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

Current History, published by The New York Times, has a most interesting table of contents for May, the articles being by well-known writers, and among them "United States Naval Policy Condemned," by United States Senator W. H. King; "France's War of Church and State;" "The Imperial City of New York," by Samuel McCoy, with maps and pictures which add to its interest; Benjamin P. Chass writes of "American Women Wage Earners;" "New Russo-Japanese Treaty," by A. L. P. Dennis, and "A New Russia in the Making," by A. J. Sack, etc. Another interesting feature of this magazine is the "Month's History of the World," a contribution by thirteen historians and fifty diplomats.

The Forum for May—a magazine for discussion—published by Henry Goddard Leach, with George Henry Payne as associate editor, has a most interesting list of contributors, especially for this month, among them being "Shall America Arm?" This is a debate in which W. L. Rodgers and Tasker H. Bliss are the debaters; "The New Religions of America," by Jules Bois; "America and Roman Catholicism," by Frederick Joseph Kinsman; "What Is Civilization?" "The Answer of China," by Chi-Fung; "The Symbolic Bathtub," by Harvey Maitland Watts; "The fifteen Finest Novels," by Arthur Symons; "Too Many Federal Cooks," with cartoon by Edmund Duffy, by Donald Wilhelm; "The New England Conscience," by A. B. Coolidge, etc.

The Forum magazine is a real entertainer, for the data it contains either on American or foreign subjects, is just what the reader wants to know.

HARPER NEWS.

Margaret Deland to Lecture.

Margaret Deland will give a series of lectures at the Bowdoin College Institute of Modern Literature, the institute has announced. This will give many their first opportunity to know at first hand the author of "The Vehement Flame" and the tales of Old Chester, as she has always lived very quietly either in her home in Boston or in her summer residence at Kennebukport, Maine.

"Philosophic and Masculine Verse."

"Earth Moods," Hervey Allen's volume of poems published this month, marks a new tendency in American poetry away from the purely lyrical toward a more philosophic and masculine kind of verse which balances thought and emotion. This book expresses in poetry some of the more modern and scientific attitudes toward life.

A Letter From W. E. Woodward.

W. E. Woodward, author of "Bunk" and "Lottery," advises Harners from Paris that he has rented Madame la Comtesse de Saint-Penier's home for six months. "Darned nice place it is," Mr. Woodward writes. "Sort of a museum effect about it, though, with statues and curios and so on. Well, so long, and God help all misguided authors and publishers."

A Poem.

Thomas Hardy's latest poem, entitled "Circus Rider to Ringmaster," is a feature of the June issue of Harper's Magazine. The last stanza reads:

Though not now as when you freshly knew me,
But a fading form,
Shape the kiss you'd briskly blow up to me
While our love was warm,
And my cheek unstained by tears,
As in these last years!

B. H. Lehman, whose novel, "Wild Marriage," was recently published, has taken leave of absence from the University of California, where he is associate professor of English literature, and has sailed for Berlin to study conditions there. From Berlin Mr. Lehman will journey to Vienna, and then to Italy, where he will work on a forthcoming novel. He will be joined in several months by his wife, who is at present in Hollywood writing for the movies.

Miss Millay and the Next Century.

Heywood Broun, in an article entitled "Books That May Last a Century" in the Golden Book says: "The collected works of Edna St. Vincent Millay will be there, I am sure. Or if they are not I will see to it that my heirs withdraw the funds set aside for Brown university. But I need hardly worry about that. Over the gates to the school will be the verses about my candle that burns at both ends. And no one will be admitted to that school anyway that hasn't first memorized 'Renascence' or 'The Poet and His Book.' Run outside the influence of that particular school they will know about Edna St. Vincent Millay and her songs. It can't be otherwise. If the next century doesn't think that way about it—well, I haven't any further interest in the next century."

POLICE COLLEGE TRAINS RECRUITS

New York, May 16.—A piece of detective work appropriately underlies the newly established Police academy which Commissioner Enright has dedicated as the future West Point of the nation's bluecoats.

Last year police headquarters was agog over the mysterious and prolonged absence abroad of Inspector John J. Noonan, now the academy's first commandant. He had slipped away with no one knowing it, and the question was: Who was he after?

The question was never answered, for it developed that the inspector's secret mission was merely to do some quiet and correspondingly freer sleuthing the police the world over, in order to make the present Police academy the sum of the latest international ideas in police training.

Inspector Noonan, it has been explained, was sent overseas by Commissioner Enright with credentials to Scotland yard and the police chiefs of Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Rome and other capitals. He was ordered to keep lips sealed and eyes and ears open, and saturate himself with the best in training facilities and methods to the end that the "West Point" dream might be realized.

Commissioner Enright announces that the academy will be open not only to New York police and police recruits, but also to those from other cities. A limited number will be accepted from outside New York who will be trained to serve as instructors at home.

The academy will have special departments devoted to training men as police clerks to do the highly specialized police paper work; to prepare traffic experts to meet the growing complexity of motor transportation problems; to teaching the art of fingerprinting, Bertillon measurements and other phases of criminal identification, and to the special training of officers and instructors.

The academy also will contain the first training department for policewomen anywhere in the world. It will retain and enlarge the existing training schools here for recruits, detectives and mounted men.

The academy opened recently with an initial enrollment of 350. The course is for three months.

FLORIDA PLANS HIGHWAY ALONG WESTERN COAST

Tallahassee, Fla., May 16.—A proposed state west-coastal highway between Miami and Pensacola by way of Tallahassee is before the legislature in a bill introduced in the senate.

This highway would follow the Tamiami trail from Miami to Tampa and, from the connection there with St. Petersburg, would trace the west coast through Clearwater, Crystal River, Cedar Keys and Hampton Springs, connecting at the latter point with state road No. 19 into Tallahassee.

From Tallahassee the road would run south to St. Marks, thence to Apalachicola and from there along the coast through Port St. Joe, Panama City, Camp Walton and Milton, connecting there with state road No. 1 into Pensacola.

BRITISH STUDY AIR ROUTES OVER INDIA

London, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sir Sefton Brancker, director of civil aviation, returned to London recently after having completed in four months a 17,000-mile journey by air to India and back in the same airplane in which he started. The machine made the entire flight without a single mechanical breakdown.

The purpose of the trip was to investigate the possibility of commercial aviation under tropical conditions. Sir Sefton declared upon his return that there should be no difficulty in crossing India by air, the route to be followed being up the valleys of the Indus and the Ganges, all flat country and where the conditions were not at all bad for flying.

Sir Sefton said the actual flying time of the plane was 210 hours from London to Rangoon and back. He has reported on sites for airship masts at Calcutta, Colombo, Delhi and Rangoon.

EINSTEIN EXPOUNDS THEORIES IN ARGENTINA

Buenos Aires, May 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—The arrival of Albert Einstein in Buenos Aires to give a series of lectures upon his famous theory of relativity, at the invitation of the University of Buenos Aires, caused extraordinary interest, not only in scientific circles but also among the general public of Argentina. During his voyage out to Buenos Aires, according to some of his fellow passengers, Dr. Einstein never dressed for dinner, but made his appearance in the dining room in a white drill suit, wearing sandals, and without stockings.

During his stay in Buenos Aires Dr. Einstein will give a series of lectures on his famous theory.

HEALING HOUR SUNDAY AT SCHOOL OF HEALTH

The entire hour will be devoted to healing at the regular meeting of the School of Health Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in assembly room No. 2 at the Chamber of Commerce.

The public is urged to attend the meetings which are held every Sunday afternoon.

M. P.'s Turn to Tea.

London, May 16.—Tea drinking among members of the house of commons is on the increase. During 1924 more than 100,000 teas were served to the parliamentarians, compared with 74,059 in 1923. Luncheons and dinners also increased, and a profit of $525 was made on the teas and meals served in 12 months.

CONSTIPATION means PREMATURE OLD AGE

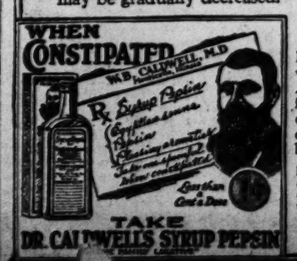
Inflammation, abscess, gangrene, appendicitis, autointoxication, numberless deadly diseases and shortened life, all come from constipation. Fasting is injurious. Food is an aid to bowel action. Cathartic pills, "salts," mineral waters and a long list of "drugs" are decidedly bad and an aggravation. Allowing the bowels to become clogged is worse.

Dr. Caldwell's

SYRUP PEPSIN

The Family Laxative

—promptly relieves constipation It is different from pills or purgatives. It does not gripe, pain or purge. It acts easily in a natural way, just as Dr. Caldwell intended when he prescribed it years ago. For 30 years it has relieved America's suffering. A liquid combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and pleasing aromatics. One dose relieves and as Nature asserts its action the doses may be gradually decreased.



Pleasant To Take
Gently Compels Health

Last year 10,000,000 bottles were used, which shows people recognize its value. As effective for babies as old people, for adults as children. Syrup Pepsin quickly brings relief to the most severe cases of constipation and the doses may be gradually reduced.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

Mrs. House Honors June Bride-Elect.

On Thursday afternoon, at her home on Highland avenue, Mrs. Roy E. House entertained at a shower in honor of Miss Evelyn Walton, a charming bride-elect of June.

The rooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion.

The honor guest was attired in a hand-painted georgette gown over rose satin. Her mother, Mrs. O. P. Walton, was gowned in satin combined with silver lace.

During the afternoon music, contests and games were enjoyed, the prize being won by Miss Will Nell Logan, after which tea was served to the following guests: Misses Fellie and Patsy Bagwell, Jimmie Boozer, Mary Sue Potts, Elizabeth Cooley, Frances, Evelyn and Nell Walton, Mrs. I. N. Edge, Anne Argo, J. Hansen, B. H. Hawkins, J. T. Launius, Baker, John Stewart, Jr., Owen Pack, Ed Coffee, Jim Bradford and O. P. Walton.

Miss Lisle Weds N. B. Dennis.

Miss Leila Pearl Lisle and Norman Bradley Dennis were united in marriage at the home of Rev. Nichols, assistant pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church on Thursday evening, April 9, 1925 in the presence of a few friends.

The bride was beautiful in a blue and gray ensemble suit with accessories in harmony. Immediately after the ceremony they left for Florida, and have returned and will make Atlanta their home.

Mrs. Dennis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lisle of Opelika, Ala. Mr. Dennis is the son of Mr. J. W. Dennis, of Greenville, Miss.

Emory Faculty Is Entertained.

One of the most delightful events of the Emory social calendar was the entertainment given the Faculty club and the Emory Woman's club, Thursday evening at the home of Bishop and Mrs. Warren A. Candler.

One hundred guests, comprising the faculty members and their wives, were present.

Acting as hostesses with Mrs. Candler were Mrs. W. F. Melton, Mrs. L. A. Falligant, Mrs. R. H. McLean, Mrs. J. H. McFadden.

In the presentation of the lovely program, the singing and dancing of little Miss Eugenia Snow deserves especial mention. Others taking part in the program were Mrs. N. A. Goodyear, Miss Marie Goodyear, W. F. Melton, Mrs. Roger Wilson, Mrs. Paul Bryan, Mrs. R. H. Baldwin, and Mrs. Foster.

On Wednesday afternoon, May 20, immediately following the barbecue at the Druid Hills club, the delegates to the National Service Star legion convention will be entertained on the campus by the Emory Woman's club.

Fulton O. E. S. Birthday Party.

Miss Frances Holden Is Bride of R. E. Telford

A marriage of interest to their many friends was that of Miss Frances Holden and Robert Eugene Telford, which was solemnized Saturday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Betty Holden in Oakhurst.

Rev. R. E. Telford, of Greenville, Ga., uncle of the groom, performed the ceremony in the presence of an assemblage of family connections and intimate friends.

The ceremony was performed in the living room before an improvised altar. Beautiful nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. W. Paul Green on ley lilies.

Miss Robert Browne was the maid of honor and was gowned in cream lace over green satin with hat of orchid neopolitan braid and carried arm bouquet of pink sweetpeas.

The bride was lovely in tan ensemble suit. She wore a large hat of tan neopolitan and carried showed bouquet of sweetheart roses and valley lillies.

Following an informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Telford left for a trip to Florida.

Miss Antoinette Smith Weds D. B. Ferris, at Griffin Saturday

Griffin, Ga., May 16.—Characterized by great beauty and dignified simplicity, the marriage of Miss Antoinette Respess Smith, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Smith, and Dakin Bennett Ferris, of New York and Garden City, L. I., was solemnized at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, on South Hill street, Griffin, Ga.

The young couple had planned a June wedding, but during a visit of the groom-elect to Griffin decided to be married quietly, the occasion assembling only the immediate members of the bride's family, and the father and mother of the groom, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Ferris, of Garden City, L. I.

Musical Program.

Preceding the ceremony a beautiful musical program was rendered by Mrs. Elizabeth Huff Wilson and Professor Charles Frye, noted violinist of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music. They played "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson and Delilah;" MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose," "Will You Remember," from May Time, selections from Bragus, and other composers.

Aldine Combs sang "Because." During the ceremony Mrs. Wilson and Professor Frye played softly "I Love You Truly."

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Leon M. Latimer, pastor of the First Baptist church, before an improvised altar in the long living room.

Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ferris left for a motor trip to Asheville and other points in North Caroina, after which they will make their home in Garden City.

The young bride, as Miss Antoinette Smith, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Smith, was one of the most beloved young women to ever make her home in Griffin, endearing herself to all who knew her by her womanly dignity, her gracious personality and her winsome charm.

Mr. Ferris, the eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Ferris, of Garden City, L. I., is a graduate of Columbia university. He served as an ensign in the aviation corps during the world war, and is now a member of the firm of Petit & Ferris, architects of New York city.

Miss Clara Alexander Weds George Lowe, Jr., in Columbus

Columbus, Ga., May 16.—The marriage of Miss Clara Boykin Alexander and George Lowe, Jr., of Box Springs, Ga., was a pretty event of Saturday afternoon, taking place at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bickerstaff.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Chambers Alexander. Mrs. Richard Heber Bennett, Jr., of Chattanooge, Tenn., was the bride's matron of honor. Miss Arabelle Alexander, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

Mrs. Bennett wore a gown of pink taffeta with a wide-brimmed hat of pink straw.

The maid of honor wore a frock of light blue taffeta trimmed with cream lace. Her hat was a picture model of blue straw.

The bride wore an attractive gown of white satin trimmed with rose-point lace. She wore the exquisite lace veil and and train of her cousin, Mrs. Bennett, who, before her recent marriage, was Miss Martha Boykin, of Atlanta.

Dr. W. L. Douglas, of Talbotton, Ga., attended Mr. Lowe as best man.

Master Eugene Henderson and Master Bradford Bickerstaff, cousin and nephew of the bride, acted as the two little ribbon-bearers. They wore smart white satin suits.

On their return they will be at home at Box Springs, Ga.

The bride is the daughter of Chambers Alexander, of this city, and has enjoyed wide popularity throughout the state.

She attended Washington seminary in Atlanta, where she was a popular student. She is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Francis Boykin, of Atlanta, whom she has visited on a number of occasions. She was an attendant at the Boykin-Bennett wedding recently, which was a brilliant social event in Atlanta.

Miss Murphy Weds Mr. Lockerman.

Arlington, Ga., May 16.—A wedding, beautiful in its simplicity, was that of Miss Ruth Murphy, of Arlington, to A. R. Lockerman, of Canton, Ohio, which was solemnized at the bride's home Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the presense of relatives and a limited number of friends. Rev. O. M. Kelley officiated.

The home was decorated in beautiful pink roses. Preceding the ceremoney Mrs. T. O. Grant sang "At Dawning." The bridal party entered at the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Mrs. J. R. Haley.

The bridesmaids were Misses Edith and Mildred Murphy, sisters of the bride. The groomsmen were Ralph Lane, of Blakely, and Paul Freeman Murphy, brother of the bride.

A few hours following the ceremony the couple left for Canton, Ohio, where they will make their home. Mrs. Lockerman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Murphy of this city, and is highly regarded here. Mr. Lockerman is connected with a manufacturing corporation of Canton, Ohio.

Finer Frocks!

Received too late for the last two days selling for our Alice in Fashionland event---these 450 finer silk dresses go on sale Monday. Hundreds were disappointed last Friday and Saturday because these failed to arrive in time---but now you can rejoice that the opportunity remains for you Monday.

The bloom of summer radiates from each of these bewitching modes — tailored frocks of youth — sheer flowered georgettes — glittering flat crepe — brilliant satins — high shade crepes and crepes de chine.

You will wonder how we can sell such frocks at $11. You will buy several when you see them tomorrow.

$11

Snow white frocks of summer coolness — printed crepes and georgettes—soft redolent shades—gray, navy, black and the entrancing shades of brown and blue-striped crepes — a gorgeous collection at only $11.

Every dress represents values greatly in excess of the price asked — values that have created a sensation among Atlanta women and values that absolutely eliminates all competition.

Over fifty different styles — each one selected for its style and made to conform to the unrelenting Allen policy of quality first —you have dreamed of such values but never before have you had this dream come true as it will Monday.

An extensive showing of georgettes—the leading material for summer frocks—filmy flowered chiffons and georgettes—every smart color and shade including many navies—beautiful color and printed combinations.

Such creations at $22 are indeed most surprising — you will cherish these values when you buy them.

Better frocks, every one, carrying the whispering spirit of the summer wind —motifs in tailored designs —street frocks — afternoon dresses with beaded and lace trims — each one superior quality at only $22.

Monday will be a gala day on the second floor---such freshness and newness in an atmosphere of the best silk dresses as can be seen nowhere else in Atlanta---a glorious array of summer patterns and designs---exactly what you are looking for.

Miss Carroll Weds William H. Jentzen Saturday Evening

The marriage of Miss Mary Carroll and William H. Jentzen was beautifully solemnized Saturday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride in Chattahoochee.

The home was transformed into a bower of loveliness with potted plants and colored spring flowers which were used in great profusion throughout the house.

At the west end of the long living room an altar was formed of palms and ferns. Great clusters of white peonies were placed at intervals against the background of green. Seven branched candelabras, holding unshaded tapers, stood on either side of the altar.

Miss Miriam DuPree, becomingly gowned in orchid georgette rendered a musical program. Mrs. Grady West, gowned in green crepe, sang "At Dawning." The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss DuPree.

Miss Miriam Duncan acted as maid of honor and she wore green georgette with silver lace and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

The beautiful young bride entered the room with her father, John T. Carroll, by whom she was given in marriage. She wore a becoming ensemble costume of beige cloth, with hat of nasturtium red neapolitan straw, trimmed with a cluster of shaded roses. He shower bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies.

The bride was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Albert Jentzen, and the ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert H. Lamkin.

Following an informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Jentzen left for points of interest in Florida. After a short wedding trip they will be at home in Miami, where Mr. Jentzen is prominently connected socially and in the business world.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Carroll entertained for the Carroll-Jentzen bridal party and the out-of-town guests, following the wedding rehearsal Friday evening at their home in Chattahoochee.

Mrs. Carroll was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. L. Carroll and Mrs. Paul Carroll.

Woman's Division To Hold Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce will be held Monday evening, May 18. Dinner will be served at 6 o'clock.

The forum committee has announced that as a special feature of this meeting, one of the artists attending the art exhibition at the Biltmore hotel will make an address, which will be most instructive and interesting. A delightful musical program has been arranged.

On Sunday, May 17, the division will be hostess at the art exhibition at the Biltmore from 10 o'clock until 6 o'clock. This will be in charge of Miss Virginia Bowie, who will be assisted by Miss John Bowie and a special committee appointed for the occasion.

Members are requested to make reservations as early as possible for the dinner on Monday evening.

Cecelians To Stage "The Trysting Place."

Members of the Cecelians, the dramatic club at the North Avenue Presbyterian school, have chosen their cast for the contest to be staged by the Little Theater guild, Saturday night, May 23, at the Woman's club for the best one-act play presented by a high school group in Atlanta.

The players have chosen "The Trysting Place," by Booth Tarkington, as the one they will present in competition with the other schools of the city. This school, however, will be the only strictly girls' school to present a play.

Members of the cast include Misses Dorothy Fluker, Louise Huddleston, Flora Mae Tumlin, Metta Russell, Jane Tway, Eugenia Dodd and Cleone Willingham.

Buffet Supper Honors Club.

The Kno-Mo club was entertained at a buffet supper and party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Eldredge on East North avenue Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Eldredge was assisted in entertaining the guests by Mrs. A. W. Evans, Mrs. H. H. Bixler, Miss Ina Ellis and Miss Louise Williamson.

The Kno-Mo club was organized last September for the purpose of literature study and has done good work this year. No meetings will be held during the summer months.

Hoosier Club Is Entertained.

Mrs. Laura O'Rourke entertained the Hoosier club of Atlanta at her home on Capitol avenue Wednesday, May 6.

She was assisted in entertaining by her sisters, Mrs. Culpepper and Mrs. Love. Miss Kincaid, the president, presided. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Edwin Reece, 97 South Gordon street.

Griffin Bride-Elect

Miss Myrtle Sneade Alston, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Alston, of Griffin, Ga., whose engagement is announced today to Marion Foy Kelley.

Miss Muriel Downer Will Wed Dr. Hand, of Pelham, June 1

The marriage of Miss Muriel Downer and Dr. Frank Marion Hand, of Pelham, Ga., will be an interesting social event of Monday evening, June 1, at the First Presbyterian church.

The ceremony will be performed at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. J. Sprole Lyons, in the presence of a representative gathering of families and out-of-town guests.

Miss Elizabeth Smith will be Miss Downer's maid of honor and Joseph Hand, of Brunswick, Ga., will be his brother's best man.

The ushers will be Dr. Evert Bancker, Dr. Jesse York, Dr. Warren Quillian and Lee Wicker.

A musical program of wedding selections will precede the ceremony and following the marriage Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Downer will entertain at an informal reception at their home for the families and out-of-town guests.

Health Education Conference In Progress at Camp Highland

First on the 1925 summer program for Camp Highland, Y. W. C. A. camp for girls, is the Health Education conference now in progress at the camp. This conference, which is one of the five health education conferences being held in this country, and the first of its kind ever held in the south, is under the general direction of Miss Jane Bellows, of New York city, and will last from May 12 through May 22. The attendance at the Highland conference is small but very representative, including physical directors from eight southern states and New York.

The purpose of this series of conferences, covering the territory of the United States, as to standardize health education in this country, to give the various physical directors an opportunity of getting together in their way of thinking as well as in their methods of work.

The program chosen for the 10 days is a very ambitious one, covering practically every phase of the physical training work. There are talks and discussions on the problems attendant on the health education department of the Y. W. C. A.; principles of education in the Y. W. C. A., history of the Y. W. C. A., job analyses, purpose of membership, policy of department and budget, administration of the department, and history of health education in the Y. W. C. A. There is instruction in folk and natural dancing, gymnastics, clogging, track and swimming. On Friday the entire conference attended the health week parade in Atlanta, and on Saturday presented a health carnival at the camp. Sunday's program includes an elaborate religious pageant, directed by Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson, of Atlanta.

Besides Mrs. Jackson, a number of other local men and women will cooperate in some phase of the direction of the conference. These include Dr. Theodore Toepel, Miss Myra Graves, of the Atlanta public schools; Miss Isabel Randolph, of Agnes Scott college, and Miss Lucy Marvin Adams, director of health education of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A., who will be one of the principal leaders during the entire conference.

Business Women Honors Mrs. Van Raden.

The regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta Business and Professional Woman's Club was held Wednesday evening in the private dining room of the Winecoff hotel. This meeting was in the nature of a surprise party given to Miss Jaquelin Van Baden and Mrs. Anna Kennebrew, who will sail for Holland on June 6. Miss Van Raden was born and reared in The Hague, having completed her education in Amsterdam and Paris. Very soon after leaving school she came to America, coming direct to Atlanta to make her home. This will be her first visit to the homeland since leaving there a number of years ago. Mrs. Kennebrew, with whom Miss Van Raden has made her home almost since her arrival in Atlanta, will accompany her to Holland. They will sail from New York on June 6 on the ship Rotterdam, and will land at Amsterdam, Holland. They will tour the continent by automobile. Among the places to be visited outside of Holland will be Paris, through the devastated part of France, also going into Germany, visiting Berlin and several other places.

After a short business meeting the evening was devoted to a surprise shower for these two much loved members of the club, numbers of items being given them to add to the comfort of their travels. Miss Edith Moore, who is one of the Atlanta women chosen to sing in the summer opera, sang a number of songs, among which were "Swing Low Sweet Chariot."

Mrs. Rogers Hostess To New Era Club.

Mrs. LeRoy Rogers entertained the New Era Study club at her home at East Lake Wednesday, May 13.

Mrs. C. F. Dowe, the president, presided. The leader was Mrs. F. M. Akers. Mrs. M. B. Parker read a very interesting paper on California.

The members present were Mrs. J. B. Brooks, Mrs. E. H. West, Mrs. C. F. Dowe, Mrs. G. H. Phillips, Mrs. F. T. Pike, Mrs. R. I. Pritchett, Mrs. George T. Smith, Mrs. M. B. Parker, Mrs. F. M. Akers, Mrs. Le Roy Rogers and Mrs. Tim Thornton.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. C. F. Dowe on Barnett street, May 27.

Miss Dodge Will Honor Bride-Elect

Miss Sara Dodge will entertain Tuesday afternoon at her home in Decatur in honor of Miss Dreis Williams, popular bride-elect.

Those invited are Miss La Trelle Ross, Miss Vivian Russell, Miss Mabel Elder, Miss Nancy Stripling, Miss Ruth Still, Miss Norma Peacock, Miss Elizabeth Carithers, Miss Elizabeth Stripling, Miss Florence Bigham, Miss Lena Jackson, Miss Martha Erwin, Miss Frances Woodberry, Miss Rosa Woodberry, Mrs. L. Mr. Ogletree was graduated from Gordon, went to a business college in Atlanta and served as first lieutenant in the world war. He is prominently connected with Mack International corporations in Tampa, Fla.

Boulevard Auxiliary Holds Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Boulevard Park auxiliary was held at the home of Miss Helen Swann on Cresthill avenue, Monday, May 11, Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe presiding.

One of the main objectives of the club for the month of May is securing playground apparatus for the community park and playground, which is known as Elkwood park. Mrs. G. D. Garner, chairman of the playground committee, is leaving Atlanta for Florida and the president appointed Mrs. R. B. Reiley to fill the vacancy. Mrs. O. F. Taylor was also appointed to work with the committee.

Mrs. E. D. Thomas was appointed to attend the luncheon given by the Atlanta Smoke Abatement league, May 26.

Announcement was made of the Biennial Council of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to be held at Tallulah Falls, June 9, and the president, Mrs. Wolfe, was elected to represent the auxiliary. The president appointed as alternates, Mrs. N. A. Hughes and Mrs. R. G. Game.

Mrs. N. A. Hughes announced a bridge class to be held at the home of Mrs. B. M. Smith on Walker terrace, the proceeds to go to the League of Women Voters. Those interested in this class may telephone Mrs. Hughes for details.

Mrs. J. A. Walker, civic chairman, reported activities during the recent clean-up campaign. Mrs. Kilpatrick reported flowers and cards of sympathy having been sent to the members of the club who have been ill during the past month.

Mrs. E. D. Thomas made a report for the citizenship committee and urged all members to register immediately for elections.

Mrs. L. A. James, chairman of schools and library, and her committee invite the members of the auxiliary to a benefit lawn party at the home of Mrs. James on Park drive. The proceeds will be added to the library fund for S. M. Inman school.

An invitation was received from Mrs. A. L. Myers to hold the next meeting of the auxiliary at her home, 1060 North boulevard. This will be a social meeting and the date is Monday, June 8.

Americanization Work of W. C. T. U.

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

I serve.

This is the motto of the Americanization department of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and in no member is it more truly exemplified than Mrs. J. W. Payne, superintendent of the department in the Macon W. C. T. U.

Her service for the past few years (nearly three) has been to receive, with Christian spirit, into our community life those who come from distant lands to knock at our doors, to stimulate them to give their best to the land of their choice, and help make it a better America.

This was done through friendly visiting of Mrs. Payne and W. C. T. U. members, some of whom in a neighborly way, became in a measure a big sister to one or more foreign women.

Mrs. Payne has done more, she has sought out and enrolled in her American class about thirty young women and men from China, Greece, Italy, Poland, Syria, Egypt and Jerusalem, which she and her assistants teach four afternoons every week.

They interpret America to these foreign-born by imparting to them a knowledge of our language, customs, government and Christian ideals.

Teaching English to new-comers never fails to win their gratitude, one reason is, because it helps them to secure remunerative employment.

Some of the members of her present class of 16, who were unable to speak or understand English upon enrollment, can now carry on a conversation, go shopping, read in English and repeat the American creed, the salute to the American flag, the salute to the Christian flag and passages of Scripture, etc.

Their progress is demonstrated when they occasionally appear on the program at a regular W. C. T. U. meeting.

The principle of law observance is inculcated, which includes the spirit of the eighteenth amendment. All of the members are total abstainers, and only one of the four men members uses tobacco.

Most of the class members attended school in the countries of their birth to some extent, and nearly all speak several languages. Two of the most enthusiastic Greek students graduated at the high school of Athens, one of them attended the famous University of Athens for awhile. They are working hard for a mastery of English in order to satisfy their ambition to begin the study of medicine at one of our universities in the coming fall.

Eleven members of the class are reading the course in Americanization prepared by the national W. C. T. U. Health topics have been studied recently.

Sometimes a talk by some one of prominence, readings, musical selections, or other entertaining features are arranged for their enjoyment.

Mrs. Payne has assisted several to secure their first Americanization papers. Three of the men belong to the Y. M. C. A., in fact, in every way she seeks to bring them in touch with the best things.

Mrs. Payne is well fitted for this work, having received certificates in various courses of church and Sunday school work, and a diploma for completing the correspondence course in Americanization work from the national department. She gives her splendid service freely, gladly, "as unto Him."

She has had a number of helpers at different times.

Now Miss Julia Goodall, Miss Annie Claire Willis, Mrs. E. Monroe Wise and Mathylde Wilson and a group of Wesleyan college students of social service directed by Miss Lois Rogers are assistaing. They are Misses Minnie Van Valkenburg, Sarah Addington, Mabel Chastain, Hattie Ruth Kelley, Mary Louise Collings, Margaret Strayberry, Louise Hammock, Helen Goepp, Cleestie Smih, Emily Landrum, Mary Alma Cobb, Elizabeth Dent and Elizabeth Sinquefield.

Of course all of them do not teach every time, but some of them da and their intelligent teaching has been of great value.

Americanization Party.

The attractive home of Bishop and Mrs. W. N. Ainsworth was the scene of an unusual social affair one Thursday afternoon recently, when the honor guests were the members of this Americanization class from many sections of the globe, and the others present were Mrs. Payne with her assistant instructors and the Macon W. C. T. U. officers.

About the Department.

This department has been operated by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union 45 years. It was called Work Among Foreigners for 38 years, but in 1918 that name was changed to Americanization, while the purpose —to preserve the ideals and institutions of Americn—and the methods remained practically the same.

State W. C. T. U. Notes.

The publication of the May Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin has been delayed by the death of Irby Meadors, of Albany, brother of Mrs. August Burghard, the managing editor, and the illness of her mother, Mrs. Cora Jackson Meadors, of Macon.

These are the reasons why the pictures of W. C. T. U. mothers were sent too late to appear on the Mothers' Day page in the rotogravure section of The Constitution as usual, as Mrs. Burghard is also state director of publicity.

New Unions.

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins recently organized a W. C. T. U. at Montezuma with the following officers: President, Mrs. Fred Smith; second vice president, Mrs. J. S. Averill; secretary, Mrs. M. R. Heflin; treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Hangabook.

Mrs. Atkins also organized a W. C. T. U. at Vienna. President, Mrs. C. A. Sims; secretary, Mrs. B. D. Bryan, and treasurer, Miss Gertrude Taggart.

Fifth District W. C. T. U. Meeting.

A splendid program has been arranged for the fifth district meeting of the W. C. T. U. at Wesley Memorial church beginning at 1:30 Tuesday morning, the 26th, with the district president, Mrs. O. L. Taylor, of Atlanta, presiding. The program will continue in the afternoon, with lunch at the church. All those interested are cordially invited.

Merry Needle Club Is Entertained.

Mrs. L. C. Varnedoe was hostess to the Merry Needle club at her home on Cherokee avenue on Wednesday morning.

The guest list was Mrs. M. A. Beiter, Mrs. Joseph Starr, Mrs. Ed Gifford, Mrs. A. E. Coley, Mrs. C. E. Cameron, Mrs. A. J. Holcomb, Mrs. J. B. Morgan, Mrs. Hugh Cates, Mrs. W. M. Dodd, Mrs. Joe Durden, Mrs. Ed L. Gifford, Jr., Mrs. M. E. McGhee.

Mrs. M. A. Beiter will be hostess to the club May 20 at 10:30 at her home on Grant street.

Greek Students To Present Play.

Students of Greek at Emory university, under the direction of Dr. C. E. Boyd, head of the Greek department, will present the Greek play, "Alcestis of Euripides," on Saturday, May 23, at Antoinette Gardens, the natural open-air amphitheater at the end of the Emory car line.

Although originally in Greek, the play will be given in English, and is very colorful, dramatic and interesting. The students who were selected to take part in the play have been working on it for several weeks, and Dr. Boyd states that he is highly gratified with the way in which they are handling their various roles.

The play, which has the distinction of being a tragedy and yet having a happy ending, is a fair presentation of the life and customs of ancient Greece. The following students will take part, several of them having feminine roles: G. K. Smith, Laurie Ray, J. Q. Maxwell, Ernest Hartsock, John Pollard, W. E. Mischke, Eugene Boyd, Jr., John Knox, J. K. Rankin, H. J. Fullbright, R. L. Gardner, L. M. Reeves, P. B. Cole, W. C. Sledd, C. N. Cramer, W. T. Hoard, D. E. Drukenmiller, W. B. Redmond, R. O. Persons, J. H. Powell, S. B. Smith, H. W. Bickley and Frank Pippin.

Message From State Regent

The following message from the state regent, is fraught with timely advice, love and enthusiasm, regarding the past and the future work to be mapped out by the state chapters, D. A. R., and is commended to the careful consideration of every chapter regent, and state chairman in the state:

"The last year of this administration has now become history—history that we have every reason to be proud of.

"We are keping alive the traditions of our forefathers in leaving behind us a record that is indeed worthy of those ancestors.

"As we stand upon the threshold of a new year of endeavor and think with greatful hearts of the $52,000 which was distributed by the Georgia D. A. R. in the year now ending, let us determine to make the coming year equal to, and even surpass the wonderful achievement of the preceding one.

"The splendid spirit of cooperation and loving fellowship existing between each member of our state organization, is an inspiration to your state regent, and she is humbly grateful for the love and loyalty which you have so lavishly given her. The thought of each one of you, working in your own particular way, to promote the welfare of our beloved society fills my heart to overflowing, with thankfulness that you have caught the vision of what our society really means; and that you are working to reflect glory and honor, not only upon your state organization, but upon our national society as well.

"Daughters of Georgia, do you realize that out of 85 chapters in our state, 60 were on the honor roll this year, an honor roll whose requirements is a 100 per cent perfection in all national and state obligations? Do remember that Georgia led all other states in the union this year in patriotic education and in D. A. R. student loan fund work? Are you not proud of that wonderful record? It is your record—a record of splendid achievement accomplished by you. And I am proud of each one of you, my daughters!

"With abiding faith in God and His goodness, with supreme confidence in you and your layolty and support, I do believe that Georgia daughters will accomplish just as much or more, during the coming year that is dawning this month.

"Our aims are higher, our labors will be heavier, but is there a single faint heart in our organization? I feel that I may answer 'no,' for each one of you. When we have something worth while to work for, that is the time for the hardest work. Think what it will mean to future generations, for us to finish this year, our $5,000 student loan fund; if we publish our Franklin County and Joseph Habersham chapter records; if we succeed in finishing the Georgia Bay in the Washington memorial at Valley Forge, where thousands and thousands of visitors will make the pilgrimage next year during the Sesquicentennial Exposition, and passing through the Cloister of the Colonies, they will see Georgia's Bay completed and beautiful, no longer a gaping discredit to the honor and glory of our beloved state. And then, there is one other aim which should be provided for, and that before the chapters disband for the summer—our pledge, made at the national congress of a $1,000 gift toward the building of our glorious new auditorium that is to be. Georgia has the honor of being the fifth state making a pledge of this kind during the inspiring enthusiasm which prevailed when the resolution to build the auditorium was adopted.

"And accomplish these things we shall! Are you back of me, daughters of Georgia?

'Yes, I know you are—each one of the 5,000! I am depending upon you to the finish—I believe that even more chapters than last year will be on the honor roll this year—we may even have "ties" for the prizes. If so, I promise you, the prizes will not be divided, but will be duplicated.

"During the summer I hope our chapter regents will plan the work which they expect to start in September; I would urge our state chairmen to get in closer touch than ever before with the members of their committees; and each member conscientiously pledge herself to even better service for "Home' Country and God."

"Then we shall indeed be one in purpose, one in spirit and one in devotion to a great cause.

"MRS. JULIUS TALMADGE,
"State Regent."

Honor Roll.

The following chapters constitute the number appearing on the "honor roll," as furnished by the state treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Coney. Eligibility to the honor roll, means 100 per cent perfection in all national and state obligations. Out of 85 chapters in the state 60 gained this distinction.

Chapter Reports.

The May meeting of the William McIntosh chapter, Jackson, Ga., was held with Mrs. B. F. Watkins, and Mrs. Howard Holden as joint hostesses.

The following officers were elected for another year: Regent, Mrs. T. G. Willis; vice regent, Mrs. J. M. Currie; treasurer, Mrs. A. T. Buttrill; recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Leach; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. D. Jones; registrar, Mrs. B. F. Watkins; historian, Mrs. W. H. Maddox; chaplain, Mrs. L. D. Watson.

Mrs. A. T. Buttrill and Mrs. J. D. Jones were appointed a committee to make up the year book for another year.

The chapter ceelbrated its twelfth birthday, having been organized in May, 1913. The birthdays are always red letter days in the chapter.

Officers elected in the May meeting of Hannah Clarke chapter, Quitman, included: Regent, Mrs. H. E. Stubbs; first vice regent, Mrs. J. W. Oglesby; second vice regent, Mrs. S. T. Harrell; recording secretary, Mrs. E. B. Jelks; corresponding secretary, Mrs. I. S. Williams; treasurer, Mrs. J. L. Davidson: historian, Mrs. J. F. McCull; chaplain, Mrs. Henry Turner.

Mrs. Z. W. Oglesby, who was a delegate from the chapter to the continental congress, contributed $10 for each of her 11 grandchildren, and $25 in the name of the chapter, to the new national auditorium fund. Sixty flag codes have been distributed to the rural schools, and the chapter voted to buy one square foot of the Wakefield estate, the birthplace of Washington, which the N. S. D. A. R. is to purchase.

Converse Alumnae Sponsors Tea Room.

With the purpose of completing its pledge toward the endowment fund of its Alma Mater, and thus gain a scholarship for some Georgia girl, the Atlanta association of Converse college of Spartanburg, S. C., is operating a lunch room at 428 Marietta street.

This organization has been serving suppers at the West End Woman's club at 134 Peachctree street, but moved into its present quarters on Thursday of this week, and is now prepared to serve lunch from 11:30 o'clock in the morning till 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mrs. George M. Murray, president of the association, states that the cafe will be under the direction of a number of very capable women and that much attention is being paid to the menu, very tasy and nutritious plates being served from prices ranging from 25 to 75 cents a plate.

The Atlanta Alumnae association of Converse college has a membership of about 40 women, active in civic and social life. A year or so ago this organization subscribed $3,000 toward the establishment of an endowment fund for its college, all of which, with the exception of $500, has been paid in. It is to make up this $500 that the women are undertaking the restaurant work, the whole subscription being due June 30. The completion of this fund carries with it the scholarship to be given a Georgia girl.

Among the women interested in the project with Mrs. Murray are Mrs. Fair Dodd and Mrs. Henry W. Todd, vice presidents; Mrs. J. M. Doorn, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary C. Richardson, treasurer. Others are Mrs. H. Lane Young, Mrs. Floyd Field, Mrs. Henry W. Davis, Mrs. Walter Rountree, Mrs. O. C. Wainwright, Mrs. J. Turner Fitten, Mrs. Annie Nunger Meuler, Mrs. F. F. LaRoche and others.

Sewing Circle To Meet.

The sewing circle of the Woman's auxiliary of St. Luke's Episcopal church, will meet in the assembly room of the church on Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

The members are making aprons for sale to obtain funds for the Appleton church home. Orders for the aprons may be phoned to Mrs. D. B. Osborn, 811 Piedmont avenue.

Miss Merrill Leaves for Brazil.

Eufaula, Ala., May 16.—(Special.) Miss Terese Merrill, one of this city's lovely young women left Sunday night for New York from where she will leave for a six months' tour of South America joining her relatives Mr. and Mrs. McGurk in Brazil and later visiting them at their home in Montevideo, Uruguay. Miss Merrill recently visited her uncle, Sims Bray and Mrs. Bray at their home in Atlanta.

Miss Elsa Denk Honors Mrs. Phillips.

Miss Elsa Denk entertained a bridge party in honor of Mrs. Hillis R. Phillips, of Lakeland, Fla., on Saturday, May 16.

The invited guests were: Mrs. H. Phillips, Mrs. Augustine Sams, Misses Georgina Glenn, Joyce Alexander, Catherine Glenn, Catherine Shields, Rosalie Robinson, Estelle Gardner, Marion Meeks, Emily Henderson, Margaret Neal, Sara Hicks, Mrs. Steve Laney.

The Season's Foremost Fashion Feature.

SOMEONE has said "Simplicity is the soul of art"—and therein lies the charm of Fashion's most recent sensation in footwear. It's the "Ladkin" by Laird-Schober, now being shown at Muse's, where each model on display is invariably an eloquent expression of the artistic.

The unsurpassed loveliness of feminine beauty has ever been the subject dearest to the heart of the poet and artist, and by no means the least important requisite of this perfection is the graceful foot—always daintily and immaculately shod. Indeed, the magic of the slipper, where the eye is wont to linger, has always enjoyed due prominence in legend or story or tale. It may be the jeweled slipper of some Indian princess or the slipper the humble Cinderella wore, but even today the modern footwear holds its fascination. And the "Ladkin," which I hope you will see at Muse's at your earliest opportunity, is the most precious of them all.

Of course, the Ladkin is a white slipper—of white glazed kid it is fashioned. It is without ornament save for neat decorative perforations that emphasize the exquisite lines of the shoe—and a buckle of classic design that provides a note of central interest. It features the narrow toe, which Fashion has lately decreed for the summer.

Aside from its rare beauty, which alone would be sufficient excuse for its being, is its correctness—its elegance that unmistakably reveals an unerring taste. This flawless example of craftsmanship will be much cought after by connoisseurs of Fashion.

For the girl graduate it is the perfect slipper to be worn on that day of days—her commencement. It alone is worthy to be associated with such a momentous event as this, the culmination of four busy happy years. And for the many social events surrounding graduation —the golden hours when she will dance on the ballroom floor, and dine or drink tea with her friends, or graciously play hostess to her classmates—then she will be justly proud of the trim, neat appearance of her feet, if she wears the Ladkin. She graduates but once or twice in her life, so let her select this model, the quintessence of loveliness in footwear.

But the rest of us who are not fortunate enough to be graduating this year are not going to be denied the pleasure of possessing the remarkable Ladkin. Muse's are especially desirous that you see this new and exquisite model, which is being heralded by the entire fashion world, and by the well known magazine "Vogue" in particular, as the season's foremost fashion feature. It is on display in the ladies' shoe department at Muse's on fourth floor.

The Rarest Of Gifts!

WHY is it that one invariably turns to his jeweler to find the gift for the graduate? It is the traditional place to go and has become so because the gifts found there are especially appropriate for the great occasion and have proved universally popular and satisfactory to their recipients. Such gifts are especially desirable and appreciated when they come from Nat Kaiser & Co., 3 Peachtree street, the firm that excels in "gifts that last."

For elegance and charm in each and every article displayed, Nat Kaiser & Co. is unsurpassed. During the many years since this firm has been established, graduation gifts have been selected here, much to the joy of the recipients.

First and foremost of the gifts shown here are the diamonds—a marvelous assortment of them that is unequaled in the south. Large liquid diamonds of wondrous brilliance and smaller ones that look like tiny drops of dew, set in exquisite mountings of platinum and white gold, are here for your approval. Rings and bar pins of delicate pattern are the most popular ornaments in which these alluring gems are employed.

An unending collection of watches—all of them with movements nationally known for accuracy—offers an opportunity to select gifts that are sure to please. Unique are the shapes and distinctive are the patterns of the dainty wrist watches in white gold for the graduating girl. And as for the young man, all standard and nationally known watches can be obtained at Kaiser's—either wrist or pocket watches.

In the accessories to the costume the gold and silver mesh bags spell perfection. They are to be found at Kaiser's in artistic shapes and in exquisite lacelike meshes. The vanity case seems to daily acquire added decoration and to take on new charms. Those of intricate pattern set in tiny jewels are dearest to the feminine heart.

Do not let me forget to mention fountain pens and Eversharp pencils, three universal gifts that are always welcome. Kaiser's have a large assortment in a wide range of prices.

Selecting the gift for the young man seems to be the greatest problem of all, but at Kaiser's it is an easy matter. Besides those above mentioned, there are stick pins, cuff buttons, studs and knives in varying patterns to please the individual taste of the fortunate recipient.

Indeed shopping at Kaiser's is a great pleasure and a satisfaction, for in them on has learned to place implicit confidence.

The Gift That Is "Different"

AMONG the girl graduates there is many a true connoiseur of art. She will exclaim delightedly over some bit of clear colored Venetian glassware. She will revel in the accurate reproduction of some great painting artistically framed, and she will marvel at the exquisite designs of antique brasses. And for such gifts as these—for gifts that are "different"—there are just two places to go. They are two shops which bear the same name, "Binder's." In these popular shops, one in the Arcade, and the other at 117 Peachtree (across from the Piedmont), one may wander for hours lost in the wondrous beauty of each creation, utterly oblivious of the passing time. Here are a million things that would delight the heart of the girl graduate—accessories for her dressing table such as cologne bottles, powder jars and jewel cases of crystal in transparent hues; dainty things for personal adornment such as novelty beads, crystal drops, unique compacts and the most individual of decorative sachets and tiny perfume bottles, each one artistically done up in miniature hat boxes. Austrian leather hand bags, small traveling sewing sets and striking costume jewelry and the new Trianon interlocking bracelets and rings to match. They are each expressive of good taste and appropriateness in the graduation gift.

Her favorite picture is here, too — the enchanting blue and orange of Maxfield Parrish continues in popularity. An incense burner, a photograph frame—well, there you are—this is really just the beginning of a tale that has no end. You will revel in the beauties to be found there, and will be even more pleased to find so many suggestions that will answer "What can I give that is 'different.'"

The Practical and Timely Gift

MY search for the truly practical gift for the graduate brought me to Rountree's Leather Goods & Luggage Shops. There are two of these stores—at 77 Whitehall and 186 Peachtree, each of which carries a complete assortment of everything you could possibly desire in luggage. "Rountree's" is a name long associated with the highest quality of such merchandise, for only the best is to be found here. Each piece is beautifully designed and carefully constructed for endurance and sturdiness. Yet despite this superior quality and careful craftsmanship, the prices are unusually reasonable, due to the fact that Rountree owns and operates its own factory, thus eliminating the middle man.

Sister Peggy is graduating from Girls' High this year and she very accommodatingly told me that a hat box was the one gift she wanted from me. "All the girls have them or are expecting them for graduation," she informed me in very positive tones. (And Peggy has a way of getting what she wants.) I was delighted with the assortment of hat boxes at Rountree's. They were of various materials—leathers, fabrikoid and soft moleskin. I finally chose a model of shiny black moleskin which is a perfect beauty —large and roomy enough for not only hats, but a dozen of other things one will need in traveling. It is exquisitely lined in tan or blue silk with daintily shirred pockets and edged with contrasting velvet—beautiful enough to hold the daintiest of feminine apparel. And, of course, there is the ever-popular traveling bag. I immediately fell in love with a stunning model of light tan hand-boarded English cowhide. Rountree's also have a large assortment of large suitcases which are widely used in European travel. They are bound and cornered in strong cowhide and are constructed to resist the hardest wear. The ideal suitcase for all traveling, they will serve you whether you should happen to be traveling around the world or spending a few weeks in the mountains or at the beach. With the approach of vacation days, these gifts are exceptionally timely.

And as timely as the gift of luggage is such a gift, also to be found at Rountree's, as a memory book, a "Him" book, a diary, a photo album or an address book. Before the final parting of classmates there are those last glorious days of exchanging autographs, securing each others addresses, hastily recording the gay social events of graduating time in memory books and taking last snapshots on the campus. These are just a few of the timely gift suggestions to be found at Rountree's—the girl graduate will USE the gift you select here.

Hosiery—in White And Pastel Shades!

OF COURSE my shopping during the past week includeu a tour of the Mystyle and Milady Hosiery Shops, where the usual unending assortment of colors, styles and "makes" of hosiery are on display. There will be found hosiery for every occasion, but special preparations to supply the needs of the girl graduate are in order.

Reigning supreme are the purest of sheer white hose that will predominate the greatest event of all—commencement itself. White in every size and fashion holds the center of the stage—it has no rival for this great occasion. Whether it be a high school graduate wearing the fluffiest of frilly frocks or the more scholarly college graduate in the traditional and dignified cap and gown, she will choose snowy white hose from the Mystyle or Milady shops.

Of course there are other shades, too. Nile green, orchid, Alice blue and the varying shades of tans and blondes and toasts. "Creme de peche," a delicate tan, is the newest shade in hosiery, and, of course, these hosiery shops have it. They have 362 different shades in all, and will be able to match the many pastel shades in the dresses which the graduates will wear at the many social events during commencement time.

Hosiery, by the way, makes an excellent graduation gift. Light tans are always acceptable as they may be worn with almost any color of frock. Again, a pair or two of white hosiery would prove useful to the graduate and would be especially appropriate.

These shops deal in hosiery exclusively and carry an exceptionally wide assortment of many of the finest brands. There is Jay-de-kay, As You Like It, Lehigh, Mystyle and many others—all of the finest, sheerest and yet durable quality. Indeed, here is art and beauty in hosiery—it is perfection, undeniably, in this most important apparel for Milady. If this is what you are seeking, come to the Mystyle Hosiery Shop at 23-A Whitehall, or to Milady's Hosiery Shop, just around the corner at 4 West Alabama.

For the Tasty Tea or Luncheon!

"WHAT shall I serve at my tea or luncheon?" and "How can I simplify the preparation as much as possible?" are some of the questions the sweet girl graduate is asking herself these busy days of social events preceding the great event of commencement. Of course, she wishes to entertain her classmates and to serve them with the most delectable of foods, but with as little trouble as possible, for the average girl who is graduating counts the moments precious that lead up to the final day of commencement.

To begin with, she can greatly save time by going to one store for the desired groceries—that is, the nearest Rogers store, where everything she could possibly need may all be found under one roof.

If she is planning a luncheon, she may procure the meat from the Purity market which operates in the Rogers' store where she shops. The simplest to prepare is the cold sliced ham that is so ideal for the warm days. The very best brands of canned vegetables are in abundance at Rogers' and only require a can opener and a little heat in preparation. Small, delicious rolls—just the thing for dainty luncheons —are baked fresh every day at Rogers' sanitary bakery and they will have a supply for the graduating hostess.

Canned fruits, too—the famous Libby and DelMonte—will make the salad or the dessert for this all-important luncheon. There are pineapples, so very desirable for the perfect salad, especially when a bit of cheese is used to "top it off."

Canned pears and peaches and the special can of fruit salad already prepared for just such busy persons as the graduate make the perfect dish. Dainty little wafers and cookies, especially those by Block, are especially delightful with the dessert of fruit.

Probably a greater percentage of the graduates will give teas for their many friends, Here again the salad will play an important part. It can be made so dainty when served with crispy head lettuce, which may also be secured at Rogess'. Neat little sandwiches are excellent served with these salads or with tea. Cheese and prepared meats are the most popular fillings and are even more tasty combined with Rogers' mayonnaise and relish.

Of course, every brand of tea is to be found at Rogers' and the one you prefer is sure to be there. Famous teas from China and Japan and the well-known Orange Pekoe, which is a favorite with all, are worthy to be served on the most distinctive occasions. Served with a bit of lemon, iced tea, so popular these spring days, is attractive in its tall glasses as well as most delicious.

What more can I say of the delicacies to be found at Rogers'? They are far-famed and are sure to find favor with the girl graduate. Not only will her classmates admire even more her judgment for choosing such appropriate dishes, but she will have the satisfaction in knowing that she is serving only the highest quality foods. Her Rogers' luncheon is sure to prove the most successful of them all and she will be voted the most perfect of hostesses.

Lipstick red is a new shade—combined with creamy biege, it makes an unusually smart frock.

Dine al Fresco At the Henry Grady!

OF COURSE you have lunched or dined many times in the delightful dining room at the Henry Grady and have eaten with relish the delectable food for which this hotel has won renown during the short time since it has been open to the public. Indeed, the high standard of cuisine is unexcelled in the city, and daily it is thronged with those who enjoy and appreciate the best of food carefully prepared and tastily seasoned.

You will be delighted to learn, as was I, that this hotel has equipped its long, broad terrace, just off the main dining room with dining tables and chairs to permit its patrons to enjoy their food in the open air. Dining al fresco has become exceedingly popular and the announcement that the Henry Grady has adopted this plan means added enjoyment to the already delicious feast that is always set before the diners at the Henry Grady.

The furniture of red and white matches the gay candy stripes of the awnings that shelter the diners. Awnings, however, are hardly necessary on this terrace, for it faces the east and during the lunch hour it is shielded by the building. Moreover, the Henry Grady stands on the highest point of Peachtree street, and, therefore, is one of the coolest, breeziest spots that can be found in the downtown district. Indeed, it spells solid comfort in the warm summer days for the tired business man desiring to leave his business cares behind, and to the weary shopper who will be glad to sit in the restful quiet of these surroundings and watch the passers-by as she lunches. Later, flowers and ferns will line the railings of the terrace adding further beauty and attractiveness to this charming place.

I myself, dined there Friday and found the terrace almost filled with delighted guests. All registered thorough satisfaction. But then, how could it be otherwise, considering the prompt, courteous service, the most delicious of foods which has always characterized the Henry Grady, and now this added feature of fresh air to increase the already hearty appetite and add zest to the occasion.

Who Said PIES?

JACK came rushing up to the house fifteen minutes late and we had a dinner engagement at Alice's. "Oh, Ruth, I am no end sorry to be late, but Alice won't mind, I'm sure."

We rushed madly to Alice's, and Alice, Bob, Jack and I marched in to a feast of delectable food. Chilled fruit cocktail to begin and finally the dessert—apple pie a la mode. As I took the first bite I said, "Alice, you always were the most wonderful pastry cook that I know. I have never eaten such pie." Alice laughed. "My dear, I will tell you a secret. I didn't make it. It is one of Simon Hubig's Famous Honey Fruit pies. I don't make pies any more, because Hubig's pies are home made, and so much better than any other pies. The pastry is flaky and rich and the filling is made of the very best fruits; also, one can get lemon and chocolate with fluffy meringue, besides the fruit pies of apple, peach, raisin, pineapple, etc. Ruth, I went down to see them made, and it is just too interesting. There are machines for mixing the pastry and rolling it, and everything is strictly sanitary. The shop is sunshiny, airy and light. It is just such a relief to know that I can have a lovely dessert at a minute's notice at such a small cost. There are four different sizes at 10, 20, 30 and 40 cents.

"Never shall I bake a pie, since I found Hubig's Honey Fruit pies at less cost than I can make them and so much better."

Leather handbags are just as popular as ever. The brightest colors are generally of suede, while the black bags are generally of leather. Envelope styles are still good, but the newer bags are quite flat.—(adv.)

Spring Meeting To Be Followed By Tea Dance

The spring meeting of the woman's board of Oglethorpe university will be held Wednesday afternoon, May 20, at 3 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club.

This will be the most important meeting of the year and a full attendance is urged.

The graduating class of Oglethorpe will be honor guests of the occasion and immediately following the business session of the meeting they will be honored by a reception and tea-dance in the banquet hall of the Woman's club.

This will be the first of a series of delightful social affairs connected with the commencement exercises of the university, which will be the most brilliant in the history of the college.

The decorations of the hall will be in charge of Mrs. G. H. Brandon and will be carried out in the black and gold of Oglethorpe. Music will be furnished by the Oglethorpe orchestra, John T. Lee directing. The entire woman's board will act as hostesses.

Educational Alliance Holds Exhibit at N. Y. Exposition

One of the outstanding educational exhibits shown at the Southern Exposition now open at the Grand Central Palace in New York city is that of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance.

The New York branch of this organization, with Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson as president, is in charge of a booth where visitors from the south are most cordially welcomed, and where they are shown the contribution the alliance is making to the educational life of the south. By means of charts and other exhibits different phases of the alliance work are interpreted, and visitors told how this organization helps girls and women find the vocation best suited to them, and then aids them in securing the right education for it. More than 10,000 girls have thus been helped by the alliance, which has branches in Atlanta and Richmond, and also in New York and Chicago. Mrs. Samuel M. Inman is president of the Atlanta branch.

The alliance is also contributing to the success of the exposition by conducting the Dixie Garden tea room in the Grand Central Palace and by sponsoring the southern states ball, given at the Vanderbilt hotel on May 15, in connection with the exposition. Mrs. Robert Grigg Reese, formerly of Augusta, who is one of the founders of the New York branch of the alliance, was official hostess of the Southern Exposition for Georgia Day.

Sponsors of the New York branch, who were also patrons for the southern states ball, include besides Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon Battle, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Grigg Reese, Colonel and Mrs. Edward M. House, Judge and Mrs. George A. Carden, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Justin White, Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Polk, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Boynton, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett P. Singleton, and others.

Woman's Auxiliary Plans Dinner.

The women's auxiliary of the Georgia Railway and Power company held their regular meeting Thursday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. Stallings, presiding.

It was planned to have a barbecue in celebration of the first anniversary. There will be a basket dinner Saturday, May 23, at Grant park. The ladies are requested to bring their baskets to the pavilion during the afternoon as dinner will be served at 6 o'clock.

It is especially requested that every member should remember the meetings are held the second and fourth Thursdays of each month in the Transportation building at 3 o'clock.

Executive Board Of Hapeville Club Holds Meeting

The executive board and membership committee of the Hapeville Woman's club held a meeting on Tuesday morning, May 12, at the home of Mrs. W. B. Stewart, chairman of the membership committee. Mrs. S. E. Treadwell, vice president of the club, presided. After some time in business discussion and an interesting report from the membership committee, a social hour was enjoyed.

Study Class Will Sponsor Musical Tea

The members of the Pollard Mission Study class of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church will be given a musical-tea Tuesday, May 19, at 3 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. George W. Klier, 26 Penn avenue.

The program will consist of delightful instrumental and vocal music and every member of the class is most cordially invited to be present.

The Pollard Mission Study class was organized in January, for the purpose of more comprehensive study of missions and missionaries at home and abroad and has awakened wide spread interest in the kingdom work. One of the most instructive books studied by this class was "Stewardship and Missions" and no real student of missionary endeavor can afford to miss the oportunity of reading it.

The class, which is a permanent institution of the church, is composed of the following women, who are leaders in spiritual uplift and all movement that tend to create and feed interest in world-wide missions: Mrs Judith Pollard Wills (Mrs. J. W Wills) for whom the class is named and who is the greatly beloved leader; Mrs. P. F. Duggan, Mrs. W. Frank Dykes, Mrs. J. A. White, Miss Mattie Clements, Mrs. Harold Coolidge, Mrs. M. A. Sanderfer, Miss Mary Wood, Mrs. E. C. Laird, Mrs. W. T. Martin, Mrs. C. E. Cutler, Mrs. R. W. Moon, Mrs. S. T. Ryley, Mrs. George W. Klier, Mrs. T. T. Ballenger, Mrs. B. R. Padgett, Sr., Mrs. J. E. Carlton, Mrs. Charles W. West, Mrs. L. D. Watson, Mrs. R. D. Webb, Mrs. B. M. Wooley, Mrs. C. Y. House, Mrs. Ben Worley, Mrs. M. L. Duggan, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, Mrs. W. S. Selman, Mrs. W. M. Hutchinson, Mrs. Clarence Ruse, Mrs. A. G. Dunwoody, Mrs. Zack Clark, Mrs. George Niles, Mrs. Annie L. Griffin, Mrs. Lillian W. Moore, director of missions for the Ponce de Leon Woman's Missionary society; Mrs. M A. Sandefer, president of the Woman's Missionary society, and Mrs. Joseph D. Rhodes. Mission study chairman for the district, and Mrs. M. Ashby Jones will be special guests of honor.

Mozley, second vice president; Mrs. A. L. Smith, recording secretary; Mrs. Joe Macks, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. D. O. Cogbill, treasurer; Mrs. T. S. Fells, assistant treasurer; Mrs. O. F. Kaufmann, corresponding secretary; Mrs. R. Taylor Connally, auditor; Mrs. Horace Presson, assistant auditor.

The club bestowed additional honors on Mrs. Murray Howard, the retiring president, by conferring upon her the title of honorary life president. Later she was presented with a handsome silver pitcher appropriately engraved. Mrs. Fred Stewart, who made the beautiful presentation speech, introduced her remarks with a reference to Mrs. Howard which will be appreciated by all who know her. "When we think of the bigness of her heart and the bigness of her mind, we are not surprised that so little material was left with which to make her body."

Mrs. H. A. Watts, retiring treasurer, was thanked by Mrs. C. C. Berry for her untiring service and presented her with a hand-embroidered vanity set. Expressions of regret were added that other duties would keep her from continuing to serve.

The only annual report given was that of the house committee by Mrs. Floyd Cox, chairman, which was made by special request of the president in order that the members might be informed in detail of the splendid work done by that committee.

In honor of Mother's day Mrs. Willie Smith gave two readings in her usual charming style. (a) "Bravest Battle," by Miller; (b) "Mother o' Mine," by Kipling. Mrs. Howard asked for a rising vote of appreciation for the mothers of the members who had made possible by their unselfishness the service of their daughters and thereby were resonsible for the success of the club.

Mrs. Brooke Makes Report.

Mrs. Tully Brooke gave a finished report of the purchase of the Culberson home for a clubhouse, which was received with enthusiasm. She and the "club husbands" were thanked for completing the arrangements which hastened the realization of owning a club home. A motion was made and carried to plant a tree on the grounds in honor of Mrs. Brooke, the variety and location to be chosen by her as building and grounds chairman.

Mrs. Edward Hardaway Smith, who has been representing the club in the better homes demonstration as equipment chairman, announced that arrangements had been made to have cars take the members in a body to visit the three homes on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Brevard Montgomery extended an invitation to the members to attend the Uncle Remus festival and the club assumed responsibility for the candy booth, with Mrs. J. R. Mott as chairman.

The following new members were welcomed: Mrs. George Sanford, Mrs. K. C. Markt, Mrs. Rutland, Mrs. Norman Jones, Mrs. Pat Anderson and Miss Marjorie Deakin.

The gavel was presented by Mrs. Howard to Mrs. Merrill, who announced that she hoped the chairmen would remain the same except where changes were made necessary by vacancies left as a result of the election. Mrs. Murray Howard will succeed Mrs. Mozley as literary chairman and Mrs. Horace Presson will succeed Mrs. Merrill as press representative. Other appointments will be made later.

Invited to meet the president, Mrs. Maude Hughes, are the Grand Master Honorable Paul A. Lindsay, all grand lodge and Rebekah assembly officers, and all Rebekahs within this district.

At this time Fulton's degree team, reputed to be one of the best in the south, will confer the Rebekah degree on members duly qualified to receive same.

Weekly Dances At Club De Vingt.

The regular Tuesday weekly dances sponsored by Ralph Richards at the Atlanta Woman's club will be held in the club rooms of the Club de Vingt at Peachtree and Third streets, for a period of three weeks, beginning Tuesday, May 19, during the commencement exercises at the Atlanta Woman's club. All those having cards to the regular weekly dances are invited to attend. Admission will be by card only.

Delegates from all parts of the United States numbering approximately 500, will be in Atlanta next week to attend the eighth annual convention of the War Mothers' Service Star Legion of America, which convenes here Monday, May 18 to 23, inclusive. It will mark the first time that the national convention has gathered in a southern city.

The Fulton county chapter, War Mothers' Service Star Legion, of which Mrs. Samuel D. Jones, of Atlanta, is life president, will be hosts to the national organization. Mrs. Jones is also regional director for the south, honorary president of the Georgia division, and a member of the national board of directors.

The week will be crowded with addresses by national leaders of the organization; reports of the various committees from all sections of the union; sight-seeing trips arranged by the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau and the entertainment committee, luncheons, and inspection of various institutions in Atlanta.

Opening Day.

The opening day of the convention will be taken up with a meeting of the national executive board; registration of delegates and visitors: the president's luncheon; visits to the Joseph Habersham chapter house, Daughters of the American Revolution and Wren's Nest, home of Joel Chandler Harris, author of "Uncle Remus' stories; sectional conferences and a conference of state and chapter presidents with the national educational director.

The formal opening of the convention will come Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock with Mrs. Henry F. Baker, of Hyde, Md., president of the War Mothers' Service Star Legion, presiding. Bishop Warren A. Candler, of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, will deliver the invocation, while Governor Clifford Walker will welcome the convention delegates to Georgia. Welcome addresses will also be delivered at this time by Mayor Walter A. Sims, for Atlanta; Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president, for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president, for the Atlanta Federation of Woman's Clubs and W. R. C. Smith, president, for the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Greetings on this day will also be extended on behalf of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau by Frederic J. Paxon, president; the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association, by Hollins N. Randolph, president, and from the Disabled American Veterans of the World War by National Commander Frank J. Irwin, of Washington, D. C., who will be in Atlanta attending the convention of the Georgia department of the disabled veterans. The response to the several welcome addresses will be made by Mrs. Baker, the national president.

Prominent Speakers.

Other speakers who will address the convention during the week will be Rev. Dr. M. Ashby Jones, of Atlanta, whose subject will be "World Peace;" Mrs. J. Barry Mahool, of Baltimore, chairman of the Gold Star division, who will talk on the theme of "Service Star Legion, Past, Present and Future;" Eugene R. Black, of Atlanta, his subject being "Constitution of the United States," and "The Cause and Cure for War," by Mrs. Max Mayer, of Des Moines, Iowa, Past president of the body.

Reports will be made by Mrs. E. H. Vanostrand, first vice president, of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. P. J. Adams, second vice president, of Salt Lake City, Utah. The following regional directors will submit their reports and recommendations: Mrs. W. N. Irving, Boston, Mass.; eastern section; Mrs. Frank Knapp, Cleveland, Ohio, central section; Mrs. W. E. G. Saunders, Emmetsburg, Ohio, middlewest section; Mrs. Edna A. Reedy, Spokane, Wash., western section, and Mrs. Sam D. Jones, Atlanta, southern section.

Aside from reports to be made by the various national officers of the organization, reports and recommendations will be made by the following state presidents: Alabama, Mrs. Paul Smith; Georgia, Mrs. Howard Payne; Illinois, Mrs. F. W. Bentley; Indiana, Mrs. Anna E. Ward; Iowa, Mrs. D. T. Stockman; Maryland, Mrs. T. Parkin Scott; Massachusetts, Mrs. William N. Irving; North Dakota, Mrs. J. G. Moore; Ohio, Mrs. J. H. Stevenson; Pennsylvania, Mrs. Albert Oskin; Utah, Mrs. Anna Wells; Washington, Mrs. F. P. French; West Virginia, Mrs. George B. Wilson; Wisconsin, Mrs. George R. Raey.

The convention will come to a close Saturday with the election of officers and installation; selection of the 1926 convention city, and benediction by the national chaplain, Mrs. J. S. Auen, of Dormont, Pa.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVII., No. 331. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1925.

West End Woman's Club Annual Repoits Show Much Progress

The annual meeting of the West End Woman's club was held at the clubhouse Wednesday, May 13, at which time reports of all committees were made.

Mrs. George W. Grant, treasurer, reported a large sum of money on hand for the building fund, and was given a rising vote of thanks for efficient service.

Mrs. Emmett Brogdon, president, paid a splendid tribute to the officers and chairmen of the past year, saying "that without their united efforts and hearty support she could have accomplished little." In her report for the year book she made many excellent recommendations. Mrs. Brogdon has made an enviable record and set a high standard for her successor to follow. She has give of her time and talents unstintedly and the club under her leadership has completed a most successful year.

After the business meeting was closed the following officers were nominated and elected: President, Mrs. Dupont Murphy; first vice president, Mrs. Chester Johnson; second vice president, Mrs. George W. Grant; recording secretary, Mrs. J. H. Legien; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Dwight Wilson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. D. Clayton; treasurer, Mrs. H. W. Wilder; assistant treasurer, Mrs. E. L. Helvin; parlimentarian, Miss Elizabeth Young; auditor, Mrs. Sam Alexander; press representative, Mrs. Fred E. Johnson.

On Wednesday afternoon, May 20, at 3 o'clock, the club will keep open house for all members and friends to meet the new president.

LaGrange College Social News.

The afternoon of May 6 the sophomore class entertained the senior class at a theater party.

Mother's day services were held at 8 o'clock Sunday morning in the prayer hall. Mrs. W. E. Thompson led. Miss Lucille Hilsman sang "Mother-Calling" and Miss Nancy Smith read "The Old Nest."

Dr. Smart, of Emory, in leading the vesper services, based his inspiring message on the sentence: "To some the heavens no longer declare the glory of God, but reveal the mechanism of our complicated nature." He contrasted the simple faith of the ancient people with the scientific beliefs of the present age. A special chorus sang "Ivory Palaces."

Monday night the glee club as guests of the Music club sang in Roanoke, Alabama.

The freshman-sophomore debate of Tuesday night was an event of the year. The stage was decorated with pink roses. Streamers in class colors marked the places of the classes in the audience. Miss Hattie McDougald, of Gaddistown, presided.

The Alpha Phi Beta sorority entertained Saturday night at a handkerchief shower for Miss Evelyn Kimbrough and Miss Christine Stubbs, brides of June. Members of the sorority and friends of the students were invited.

Miss Close Weds Chovine Walters.

Albany, Ga., May 16.—Miss Christine Close and Chovine Walters were married Wednesday afternoon, May 6, at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel H. Martin on Lake Weir avenue, at Ocala, Fla.

Mr. Walters came to Ocala about three years ago from Albany and is connected with the Ocala Motor company.

Habersham Chapter D. A. R. Elects Mrs. Gentry Regent

Photograph by McCrary & Co.

Mrs. James Clay Gentry, who was unanimously elected regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., at the meeting held Friday at the chapter house.

Mrs. James Clay Gentry was unanimously elected regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at a meeting of the chapter held Friday at Habersham Hall.

Other officers elected at this meeting were Mrs. R. K. Rambo, first vice regent; Mrs. Charles S. Robison, second vice regent; Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, third vice regent; Mrs. Patrick Bray, recording secretary; Mrs. George Niles, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Julian Jones, corresponding secretary; Mrs. O. F. Kauffman, treasurer; Mrs. A. R. Colcord, assistant treasurer; Mrs. C. Decker Tebo, registrar; Mrs. W. E. Whitehead, historian; Mrs. Eugene Cox, assistant historian; Mrs. Edgar Alexander, parliamentarian; Miss Helen Prescott, genealogist; Mrs. Allison Greene, auditor.

Nominating Committee.

Mrs. Lucien Harris, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the above ticket, which was elected by the chapter.

Other members of the nominating committee included Mrs. John A. Perdue, Mrs. Christian Clarke, Mrs. E. E. Steed and Miss Anna Bennett.

Mrs. Gentry, the newly-elected president, has served the Habersham chapter ably and faithfully in various offices for the past 14 years and is well fitted for the regency with which she has been honored. She is well known socially in the south, especially in Virginia and Georgia, and is a recognized leader in religious and patriotic circles.

Mrs. Gentry is the daughter of Captain Jackson L. Thornton, of Greene county, Virginia, and Mary Lindsay Mansfield Thornton, of Orange county, Virginia. The Thornton family is one of the oldest in the state of Virginia, this name appearing in the early colonial records of 1640 with an unbroken line of descent from the lords of East Newton, Yorkshire, England, to the present generation, covering a period of more than 700 years.

Anthony Thornton founded "Ormsby," one of the oldest estates in Virginia, antedating the creation of Caroline county, in which it is situated, and he with all of his sons gave Revolutionary service. His son, George Thornton, was the great-grandfather of Mrs. Gentry. George Thornton established "Thornton," the ancestral home of this branch of the family, the land being a grant from the British crown and situated in Greene county, Virginia.

On her maternal side Mrs. Gentry's lineage is equally distinguished, descending from Sir Edward Mansfield and Lady Jane Somerset, daughter of the Earl of Worcester; John Mansfield, governor of the Virginia colony in 1614; David Mansfield, a member of the house of burgesses 1633-52.

Mrs. Gentry succeeds Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, who has served as regent for the last 16 months, with faithfulness and distinction that will never be surpassed by any regent of this the largest chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the south. Her record of achievement along every line of endeavor has been a splendid one as was shown by the many reports given by the officers and chairmen who have served her during the past administration.

A beautiful feature of the meeting Friday was the presentation of a painted portrait of the retiring regent, Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, made by Mrs. Coleman to the chapter, being accepted for the chapter by Mrs. Fred J. Paxon, it being the custom for each retiring regent to make this gift to the chapter.

Interesting reports were given at the meeting Friday by Mrs. J. C. Gentry, Mrs. Patrick Bray, Mrs. O. F. Kaufmann and Mrs. Charles Loridans from the 34th conference of the National Society D. A. R., recently held in Washington. An outstanding feature of the delegates' reports was the announcement of a meeting held in Washington on the day following the congress at which 32 states pledged themselves to Mrs. Howard McCall, of Georgia, should she run for the office of president general.

GEORGIA DIVISION

Daughters of the Confederacy

Mrs. Walter Grace, Macon, president; Mrs. Zebulon Walker, Canton, first vice president; Mrs. P. H. Jeter, Decatur, second vice president; Mrs. Leroy Hankinson, Augusta, third vice president; Miss Laura Fraser, Flemington, recording secretary; Mrs. J. A. Selden, Macon, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Tillman, Quitman, treasurer; Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, registrar; Miss Mildred Rutherford, Athens, historian; Miss Rebecca Black DuPont, Savannah, recorder of crosses; Mrs. R. M. McMaster, Waynesboro, auditor.

Honorary Presidents—Mrs. C. Helen Plane, Decatur; Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta; Miss Anna Carolina Benning, Columbus; Mrs. Ida Evans Eve, Augusta; Mrs. McCord Roberts, Atlanta, state editor.

Appeal Is Made for Relief Fund

Mrs. R. M. McMaster, chairman for Georgia division, U. D. C., of the relief fund for needy Confederate women, named in honor of Mrs. Norman V. Randolph, of Virginia, issues an urgent appeal to Georgia division chapters.

Mrs. McMaster says, "Up to date only 41 chapters out of the 127 which compose the division have sent in their contributions to the relief fund. The honor of Georgia division is at stake. We must make our contributions 100 per cent of the pledge we made this year, for Georgia division has a Georgian woman upon the roll of pensioners, and we must not fail to take care of our own. I am aware of the many beautiful things done locally for the dear old men and women who are our sacred trust, but our very own, to whom we owe every kindness within our power to give during the few remaining years of their life are not all within reach of our personal administrations, and the sum total of what we can do for them, these far-away ones, it the tiny donations we have pledged ourselves to make. There will be only one more meeting, the June meeting, before summer vacation is taken by many chapters and it is imperative that chapters take care of these obligations before adjourning until September, since our relief fund check must go the first of every month, whether we meet or not."

Mrs. Walter Grace, president of Georgia division, unites with Mrs. McMaster in a most earnest plea for attention from every chapter in the state to this work, perhaps the most pathetic cause before Daughters of the Confederacy for help.

Chapter News.

Vienna chapter, U. D. C., was hostess to veterans of three wars on Memorial day, arranging an attractive program which followed the business meeting. Luncheon was an elaborate affair at which speeches and patriotic music were heard. Colonel L. L. Woodward made the chief address at the luncheon and Rev. Christian spoke at the impressive church service following the luncheon. In the afternoon the graves of the Confederate dead were decorated by the school and a large attendance of citizens.

Covington chapter, U. D. C., will elect officers at the May meeting, which will be the last held before disbanding for the summer. A nominating committee was appointed at the April meeting, held at the Covington library with Mrs. R. A. Norris presiding. At this meeting a committee was appointed to make inquiry regarding soldiers' graves at Mansfield, relative to having them marked, and much attention was given to the subject of collecting Confederate relics. Of particular interest was the gift for the Confederate museum at Richmond, Va., from Mrs. W. C. Clark. This gift consisted of two relics, a flag and a "Call to Arms." A letter was read from Mrs. John B. Davis, formerly of Covington and now of San Leandro, Cal., telling of a meeting of U. D. C. in California. The program was devoted to events of special note in Confederate history.

Sponsored by the General U. D. C. "The Story of the South in the Building of the Republic" is on view to visitors at the Southern exposition which is being held in the Grand Central Palace in New York City, May 11 to 23. The story was written by Matthew Page Andrews, of Baltimore, author of "Southern Women in Wartime," the U. D. C.'s own book. The story is exhibited in the form of the "Biggest Book in the World," being 6 feet 10 inches by 4 feet 7 inches, and 12 inches thick. It is even larger than the ancient Bible in Upsala university in Sweden, second largest book in the world. The volume in New York weighs more than 500 pounds and the leaves are turned by an electrical device. Each of the 19 pages, which make up the book, will carry a chapter in the history of the country.

Delegates to the Savannah convention will recall Mr. Andrews as not only a listinguished guest, but one of the most delightful personages on that occasion. This "Biggest Book in the World" is said to be as charmingly written as "Women of the South in War Times," many volumes of which remain to be sold before Georgia division's quota is disposed of.

Camp Fire Girls of Highland Are Week-End Guests at Palmetto

The Camp Fire girls of Highland school, with their guardian, Miss Marion Smith, went to Palmetto, Ga., Friday afternoon to attend a week-end camp as guests of the Camp Fire girls of Palmetto. They were entertained at the cabin which has been given to the Palmetto girls by a friend of Camp Fire. Miss Sarah Bagley is the guardian of the Palmetto girls. Miss Helen Bagley, assistant executive secretary of Atlanta Camp Fire girls, and a sister of Miss Sarah Bagley, went with Miss Smith to chaperone the Atlanta girls.

A most interesting program was carried out at the camp. As soon as the girls arrived in Palmetto, the P.-T. A of the Palmetto school served supper to the two groups. In the evening at the camp fire the Highland school girls gave a play which they had prepared for the occasion. On Saturday morning the campers started in the day with an early morning hike and cooked their breakfast out of doors. Each girl had a part in the preparation of the morning meal. After the return to camp all went in for a swim in the new swimming pool which is located near the Camp Fire girls' cabin. Saturday's dinner was a lesson in out-of-door cooking. Six chickens were roasted over the fires. Some girls made the biscuits on sticks, called by Camp Fire girls "twist on a stick," while others prepared and cooked "counsellor's chowder." for desert apple pudding was baked in tins over the hot coals.

On Saturday afternoon the Palmetto group taught the Atlanta girls to play "Woods walking stick golf," a new out-of-door game that is very popular in camps. On Saturday evening Miss Helen Bagley conducted a council fire out of doors. This was a beautiful and fitting ceremony for the week-end camp together. Parents and friends attended the ceremony.

The Highland school girls returned to Atlanta early Sunday morning in time to attend their various Sunday schools. The girls who went to Palmetto were Dora Frances Aldred, Martha Brady, Mary Betts, Lulu Corker, Rosa Frances Berman, Frances Lawrence, Elizabeth Sheldon, Jean Johnson, Neel Harris, Lillian Starr, Marybelle Stayton, Frances Wright, Lillian Solar, Elizabeth Newlin, and Maurine Phillips.

Much credit is due to the Palmetto girls and to their guardian for their successful camp. Miss Bagley organized her Camp Fire group last October. Since then their active interest has enlisted the interest of parents and friends. One friend gave the girls an attractive two-roomed cabin with fireplaces. Then parents and others gave a house warming and helped furnish the cabin. The Palmetto girls spend every week-end there. Every girl in this group attended the indoor picnic in Atlanta last January and at that time became acquainted with the Camp Fire girls of Highland school. The Palmetto group is now working to earn money to attend the Camp Fire Girls' camp to be held at Lake Bennett in June.

Benefactor's Day At Wesleyan College.

Macon, Ga., May 16.—Wesleyan college celebrated Benefactors' day Tuesday, May 12, with an address by Dr. W. A. Shelton, of the Candler school of theology at Emory university, and a musical program interspersed with other talks.

After the exercises were over a luncheon was served the visiting benefactors and trustees.

Dr. Shelton spoke on "Permanent Values;" Professor Leon P. Smith, vice president of Wesleyan and head of the department of chemistry and geology, paid tribute to the work of the academic builders of Wesleyan; Miss Frances Peabody, senior student from Macon, spoke briefly on the students' appreciation of the benefactors' donations.

Atlantan Helps Plan World's Largest Building for Women

Mrs. Bonney Is Active In Gotham Association

By Bessie S. Stafford.

New York, May 16.—An Atlanta woman is having a hand in the largest building for women in the world—a 19-story clubhouse for business and professional women. She is Mrs. George Bonney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Battey.

Last fall Mrs. Bonney became a charter member and active worker in the American Woman's association, a non-political, non-sectarian organization of professional and business women which has grown to number approximately 4,000 and represents 183 different lines of endeavor. Their purpose is to build a combination hotel and clubhouse, 19 stories high, on West 23rd street, the site having already been purchased. The proposition, involving a total outlay of $4,500,000, is a big thing for women to do, and "will take a bit of doing," but New York business women are used to big undertakings and they will see it through.

Mrs. Bonney's Activities.

Mrs. Bonney's activities in behalf of the association have brought her in touch with many of New York's prominent women lawyers, doctors, musicians, realtors, scientists and social leaders who have accorded this attractive southerner a most flattering personal recognition, out of which has grown, in numerous instances, a congenial and lasting friendship. The home of Miss Anne Morgan, at 3 Sutton Place, has been the scene of frequent teas, alternating with educational sales meetings, so that pleasure is combined with the more serious purpose of these gatherings. Among the most enjoyable events attended by Mrs. Bonney was an elaborate buffet supper given by Miss Morgan, at which the evening's diversion was supplied by professional entertainers. Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Ponsonby Ogle, Miss Robinson Smith, Mrs. William Bainbridge, Mrs. Huntington Jackson and Miss Maude Wetmore are among the striking personalities for whom Mrs. Bonney expresses particular admiration.

The dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt is described as a true gentlewoman, as soft of voice as her her complexion is delicate, "one of the most knowable, cunning, sweet little ladies you can imagine, with a delicious sense of humor," and not above whispered observations behind her fan which set the chosen confidants off into most unseemly attacks of schoolgirl giggles. Summing up her impressions, Mrs. Bonney says: "I can give you no better idea of Mrs. Vanderbilt than to say she is the kind of person one would 'run into see' with every expectation that she would 'run out to greet you.'"

Associated almost daily with Miss Morgan, Mrs. Bonney pays her glowing tribute as "the outstanding woman of her age." Continuing, she states enthusiastically, "Anne Morgan is the artist in all things. In fact, no artist, no actress, no diplomat can approach her. I have been thrilledl to see her come noiselessly into a room full of men and women, and watch bankers and bakers alike melt into rivers of nothingness, like snowmen do in sunlight. The melody of her voice, and such perfect English! It is like listening at once to Caruso sing and Shakespeare speak. But the fascinating part is the action of her mind. Her body is always perfectly poised. The only motions of her being are the fast-changing thoughts which register with the decision and accuracy of a well-regulated clock ticking out the seconds. She has the master mind and woman's heart—is thoroughly feminine in all her instincts and impulses. It is worth a lifetime of discords to see this one personification of well-rounded development. Like looking on the perfection of anything of beauty, it is an abstract joy to see an ideal woman. When I think of the types who pretend to be this or that, it is like a thorough cleansing of the spirit to meet Anne Morgan."

To Finance Construction.

To finance the construction and equipment of the building, the American Woman's Realty corporation was formed, headed by such magical names as Lindley M. Garrison, Anne Morgan, Felix Warburg and others. The clubhouse will contain 1,000 outside bedrooms each with bath, besides accommodations for transient guests. Other features will be a swimming pool, gymnasium, ballroom, library, dining room, a personal service department, an infirmary and hospital rooms with a trained nurse in constant attendance. The rental of bedrooms for members, including club privileges, will average $14 per week and more than 800 have already been reserved.

A garden terrace, a miniature park almost half an avenue block square will be built within the clubhouse walls. Four fountains will play among the shrubbery and blossoms. Here the members may repair for after dinner coffee under the heavenly star-lit canopy, scarcely realizing that all around them lies America's metropolis.

Emory Concert Orchestra To Give Concert at Gardens

The Emory University Concert orchestra will present the last of this season's series of Sunday afternoon concerts at Antoinette gardens this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Antoinette gardens, the scene of the concert, is the natural open-air ampitheater in the hollow just to the left of the end of the Emory university car line.

In case of rain, it was announced by Dr. M. H. Davey, director of the orchestra, the concert will be given in the Emory chapel, where most of them have been given in thep ast.

A special feature of the program will be the solos of Byron Warner, a former member of the Emory Glee club who is now recognized as one of the leading soloists of the south. Gifted with a voice of rare beauty and remarkable technique, he has for the past few years been prominently connected in Atlanta music circles, and as soloist for the First Presbyterian church and in other capacities he has shown himself to be one of the most promising of the younger generation of singers.

The Emory orchestra will present for the first time the "Largo" from the New World Symphony (Dvorak). The overture will be "Orpheus in the Underworld," and other numbers will be Shubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and "Marche Militaire."

This performance will bring to a close the best season of Sunday afternoon concerts that the Emory orchestra has ever put on, in point of excellence as well as appreciation. A number of Atlanta artists have appeared on the programs at different times during the year, and the work of the orchestra itself has been of the highest excellence.

Professor Thomas To Speak at Graduation of Mozley School

One of the most important and impressive features of the graduation exercises of the senior class of the Mozley School for Girls, which will be held in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club on the evening of June 1, at 8:15 o'clock, will be the address which Professor W. P. Thomas, superintendent of schools in West Point, will make.

Professor Thomas is one of the best known educators throughout the entire south. He has served as president of the Georgia Education association, as chairman of the board of visitors to the University of Georgia, and for the past 18 years has held the position of superintendent of public schools in West Point and has recently been reelected for the nineteenth term. Professor Thomas will deliver the diplomas following his speech.

The graduation exercises will be very beautiful. In addition to the address which Professor Thomas will make there will be talks given by three of the most prominent members of the senior class. Miss Emily Haddock, president, will give the address of welcome; Miss Mabel Davis, the class prophecy, and the valedictory will be delivered by Miss Margaret Allen. There are a number of other details of the program which have not yet been completed, but it is certain that there will be several lovely choral numbers.

The seniors are to enter with their sophomore sisters, and members of both classes will wear white georgette. The seniors will carry arm bouquets of Killarney roses, and the sophomore sisters will carry baskets of varicolored sweetpeas. Palms and Dorothy Perkins roses will be used in profusion throughout the auditorium.

The graduating class this year is larger than ever before, and Mrs. J. W. Mozley, head of the school, is justly proud of the accomplishments of her pupils. The members of the senior class include Miss Emily Haddock, Miss Margaret Allen, Miss Netti Mae Warren, Miss Lois Pickett, Miss Constance Underwood, Miss Mabel Davis, Miss Mamie Lucy McAdams, Miss Margaret Barton, Miss Fannie Jankins, Miss Mildred Deadwyler, Miss Pearle Ballenger, Miss Mildred Settle, Miss Dorothy Williams and Miss Essie Lee Robinson.

Miss Graham, Of Augusta, To Wed Mr. Simpson

Cordial interest centers today in the announcement made by John M. Graham, of Marietta, of the engagement of his sister, Miss Isabelle Graham, of Augusta, to William Wells Simpson, also of Augusta.

Miss Graham received her education at Ursuline convent at Columbia, S. C., and Notre Dame, in Baltimore.

She has three brothers, John M. Graham, Frank T. Graham, of Columbia, S. C., and J. L. Graham, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Mr. Simpson was born in Laurens, S. C., and has spent most of his life in Augusta where he made his home with his uncle, Colonel A. W. Anderson. He is the oldest son of Mrs. Virginia Simpson, of Macon, and the late Foster Simpson.

His brothers are Rev. Richard Simpson, of Americus, and Charles Simpson, of Green Bay, Wis., and his sisters, Miss Elizabeth Simpson, of Macon, and Mrs. Charles Whitner, of Porter Springs, Ga.

The marriage of Miss Graham and Mrs. Simpson will take place in June and after a wedding trip they will be at home at 733 Telfair street, the home of the bride-elect.

Baldwin Alumnae Will Meet Monday At Woman's Club

There will be a conference of alumnae and former students of Mary Baldwin college, Staunton, Va., at the Atlanta Woman's club Monday, May 18, at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. J. T. Stephenson, of Atlanta, is chairman of this district of former students which includes the states of Georgia and Florida. There will be representatives from every part of this district in addition to local alumnae.

Mrs. G. H. Stevenson is chairman of the Decatur zone.

Chairman of the Atlanta zone is Mrs. L. E. Chalmers. Her cochairmen are: Mrs. A. S. Libby, Mrs. Julian Field, Mrs. John Raine, Mrs. Charles Sciple, Mrs. W. H. Irvine, Mrs. Pattie G. McPhail.

On the committee for entertainment are: Mrs. James R. Gray, chairman; Mrs. Frank Ellis and Mrs. Howard Bell. Chairman of publicity is Mrs. George Robert Argo.

The general chairman for the alumnae campaign is Mrs. Benton McMillin, Lucile Foster (M. B. I. '91) and the vice chairman is Mrs. John Seymour Montgomery (Roselle Mercier), of New York.

Mrs. McMillin, who is from Nashville, Tenn., will be in Atlanta for the meeting Monday and will address the zone chairmen, as will Warren E. Bristol, of New York. Mr. McMillin was congressman from Tennessee and governor of that state before his appointment as minister to Guatemala and ambassador to Peru, Mrs. McMillin as also very prominent and is a most pleasing speaker.

Mr. Lindner Is Chairman for Morning Musicale

The next morning musicale of the Atlanta Music club will be given, Monday, May 25 at 10:30 o'clock in the ball room of the Biltmore. George F. Lindner, director of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music is chairman and will be assisted by Miss Eda E. Bartholomew.

Owing to the great demand for the ball room at the Biltmre the club has been forced to postpone the last two meetings. The last meeting of the club will be on June 10, with Miss Nana Tucker, chairman. At which time Miss Madeline Keipp will give the last of the series of lectures, the subject is "Expression and Interpretation in Music."

On May 25, immediately following the ensemble program, Mr. Lindner, chairman, there will be a subscription luncheon. The club anticipates some 300 guests, including noted artists and managers. It is important that reservations be made at once to Mrs. Wilmer Moore, phone Hemlock 0829.

Mary McLendon W. C. T. U. Holds Meet.

Mrs. Katie Lee Reeves and Mrs. S. G. Hunter entertained the Mary McLendon W. C. T. U. Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Reeves on McKenzie drive. The devotional was led by Mrs. Mary Eubanks who selected as her text portions of scripture bearing upon the training of the child. Mrs. B. S. Manlove read a paper on "The Spiritual Training of the Child," and Mrs. J. C. White, vice president of the Piedmont Union gave a talk on "The Morals of Our Young People." Mrs. O. L. Taylor, president of the Fifth District W. C. T. U. told of the societies for children in the W. C. T. U. and urged that every child be induced to affiliate with the W. C. T. U. through these organizations.

Children who participated in the program with songs and recitations were Rose Hunter, Katie Moles, Elsie Moles, Elizabeth Long and Woodrow Ross.

North Peachtree Woman's Club Elects Officers

At the meeting of the North Peachtree road woman's club at the Masonic building, on Peachtree, May 12, officers were elected for the coming year. They are: President, Mrs. F. E. Brownell; firse vice president, Mrs. M. W. Cauble; second vice president: Mrs. P. C. Taylor, recording secretary; Mrs. A. L. Milligan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. F. Sellers, treasurer; Mrs. D. N. Williams, auditor, and Mrs. George Mathieson.

The reports of the officers and committee chairmen showed a year of wonderful progress.

The circulating library which has been opened just a year, is well patronized, about 70 books being taken out each week. The librarian, Miss Ida Williams, reported the total number of books as 1,338, nearly all contributed; 119 families have been served, often four or five books at a time. It is open Saturday afternoons from 3 to 5 o'clock.

This club recently entertained the women's clubs of the fifth district at an all-day session, and several letters of appreciation from out-of-town clubs were read.

It was decided to meet on the third Tuesday of each month this year, and to sew for some charity at the July and August meetings.

Mrs. Gordon Burnett, retiring president, presided at the meeting.

Philathea Class Honors President.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Philathea class of the Gordon Street Baptist church was held on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Thomas C. Callaway in West End.

After the business session a social hour was enjoyed and a surprise shower tendered the president of the class, Miss Alice Mae Allen, a bride-elect of June.

The rooms were decorated with spring flowers, pink Dorothy Perkins roses predominating. Punch was served on the veranda, the table being placed beneath a trellis arch, through which roses were entwined, Japanese lanterns of Dutch design were hung at intervals, casting a rainbow effect over the scene. Mrs. Howard Cook and Miss Mildred McElroy presided at the punch bowl.

The contest, "A Romance Menu," proved very interesting, Mrs. C. A. Landers winning first prize and Mrs. C. H. Prince the consolation.

Those present were: Miss Alice Mae Allen, Miss Louise Wimberly, Mrs. J. A. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Smith, Little Miss Marinel Smith, Mrs. George A. Lafitte, Miss Mary Belle McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Thomason, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hope, Mrs. C. H. Prince, Mrs. George W. Belle, Mrs. Charles T. Joiner, Miss Lillie Belle Golden, Mrs. H. E. Sheats, Mrs. C. W. Branch, Miss Frances Garmon, Mrs. J. H. Montgomery, Mrs. A. L. Mason, Miss Maude Ragan, Mrs. L. G. Turner, Mrs. Ida Black, Mrs. L. R. Winslett, Mrs. A. C. Landers, Mrs. M. T. Moncrief, Miss Cora Stone, Miss Rubye Stone, Miss Mildred McElroy, Mrs. T. H. Turner, Miss Hazel Jennings, Mrs. C. W. Bryant, Mrs. W. H. Barron, Mrs. W. E. Rogers, Mrs. Howard Cook, Mrs. W. P. Parrish, Mrs. E. S. Willoughby, Miss Mary Magouirk, Mrs. J. S. Garmon, Mrs. J. G. Wheeler, Miss Frances Golden, Mrs. Frank Caldwell and Mrs. Thomas C. Callaway.

Girls' Hi Honors School's Team.

An interesting event of Saturday, May 23, will be the reception given in honor of the senior class of the Girls' High school by the Girls' High Parent-Teacher association.

The reception which is now an annual event will be held at the Habersham Hall, D. A. R. chapter house, on Fifteenth street from 4 to 6 o'clock. Music will be furnished by the Boys' High orchestra.

Invited to meet the members of the graduating class will be the faculty of Girls' High school and the mothers of the graduates. Special invitations will be sent to Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, Assistant Superintendent Hunter and members of the board of education.

Members of the reception committee will be the officers of the association, Mrs. H. A. Etheridge, president; Mrs. Hugh Lokey, vice president; Mrs. Stephen Barnett, secretary, and Mrs. Ben Padgett, treasurer, and Miss Jessie Muse, the principal of the Girls' High; Miss Virginia Branch, president of Mallon Society and Miss Alpha Daniels, president of student government.

Assisting in entertainment will be Mrs. John Thompson, Mrs. Slaughter Linthicum, Mrs. Emile Breitenbucher, Mrs. J. T. DeJarnette, Mrs. T. T. Burfort, Mrs. J. J. Flowers, Mrs. W. P. Heath, Mrs. T. T. Hunter, Mrs. A. J. Stitt, Mrs. J. H. Carlisle and Mrs. J. Q. Nolan.

Miss Kelley Weds W. James Wren.

Mitchell, Ga., May 16.—A social event of the past week was the marriage of Miss Corrie Kelley to William James Wren, which was solemnized on Thursday, May 14, at 3 p. m. in the First Methodist church at Mitchell, Ga.

The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Wiggins in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

The church was beautifully decorated with pink roses, palms and southern smilax. The altar was banked with palms and ferns which formed a background for tall floor baskets overflowing with pink roses and cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers cast a soft glow over the scene.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Jennie Lynn Duvall of Decatur, Ga., sang "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and "All For You." She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Daisy Hattaway, of Davisboro, Ga., who also rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Peachtree Hills Club Has Meeting.

On Wednesday afternoon, May 13, Mrs. H. G. Tillis entertained the Peachtree Hills Woman's club at her home, 7 Peachtree Hills avenue.

Report from the treasurer, Mrs. Frank R. Campbell, that the silver tea given on the last club meeting day, was quite a success, the proceeds to be used to further beautify Peachtree Hills.

After the business meeting a social hour followed. Miss Evelyn McDermott, a talented dancer, entertained the guests with several dances.

Mrs. H. B. Emerson will entertain the club at the next regular meeting at her home, 36 Peachtree Hills avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, May 27. All members are urged to be present.

Barge-Jones Wedding Is Beautiful Church Event

Marked by wide social interest and beauty was the wedding of Miss Mary Lou Barge and Dr. Patrick Henry Jones, which was solemnized Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at St. Mark's Methodist church. Dr. Wallace Rogers, assisted by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

Church Decorations.

The church was artistically decorated with stately palms and southern smilax. At intervals on the altar, large baskets and floor vases were filled with white peonies and Easter lilies, cathedral candelabras, burning white tapers cast a soft glow over the scene.

Preceding the marriage ceremony a beautiful program of music was rendered on the organ by Mrs. Paul Bryan. John Knox sang "I Love Thee" and "Like Unto a Flower." The Lohengrin wedding march was played as the processional and the wedding march from "Midnight Summer's Dream" as the recessional.

The first to enter were the ushers, Dr. M. D. Huff, Dr. Ed Green, Dr. H. C. Crawford, Dr. Thomas Goodwyn.

Next came the junior bridesmaids entering at opposite aisles, Miss Frances Barge wore nile green chiffon draped over green satin. Miss Elizabeth Barge wore peach chiffon over silver. Both wore bandeaus of French flowers and carried old-fashioned bouquets.

The bridesmaids and groomsmen entered next. The groomsmen were Dr. Percy Lambright, Otis Barge, brother of the bride; C. E. Shepard, O. A. Jones, brother of groom; J. M. Lenhardt, Dr. William Garrett and Dr. Charles P. Hodge.

Lovely Bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids were lovely, each wearing gowns of pastel shade of chiffon, and carried arm bouquets of flowers in rainbow effect, tied with tri-colored tulle.

Mrs. Harry Ahlman was lovely in an orchid model, beautifully embroidered in French flowers. Mrs. Paul Solomon wore light blue veiling satin-made tight waist and full skirt trimmed in tiny bands of lace.

Miss Louise Dent wore lavender, the ruffles edged in silver, the girdle of rainbow ribbon. Miss Lois Jones, sister of the groom, wore a lovely gown of blue georgette and cream lace.

Mrs. Hal Morris wore green georgette trimmed with ruffles of the same material edged in silver. The waistline was encircled with tiny French flowers and loops of silver ribbon. Miss Jimmie Claude Farmer wore an exquisite gown of yellow georgette, trimmed with wide bands of web-like lace.

Miss Margaret Bryan, maid of honor, wore pink georgette and cream lace. Her arm bouquet was of roses, showered with sweetpeas.

Mrs. Julian Jones, sister of the bride, and matron of honor entered wearing a lovely gown of flesh chiffon veiling pink satin, trimmed with chantilla lace, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and swainsona.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Barge, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, wearing a frock of blue chiffon over pink satin trimmed with narrow bands of lace and embroidered in tiny rosebuds. She carried a gold basket filled with roses and sweetpeas.

Master Alvin Barge carried the ring in the heart of a lily tied with white tulle. He wore a white satin suit.

Bride's Costume.

The bride entered with her brother Richmond Irvin Barge, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Seward Smith.

The bride's grace and charm was enhanced by her lovely bridal robe of white satin and princess lace, embroidered in pearls and lilies of the valley. The coronet was of orange blossoms which held in place the tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of orchids, showed with lilies of the valley.

Following the church ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's mother, 277 Myrtle street. Mrs. Lucy Sewell Barge was assisted in receiving by the bridal party—and Mrs. Otis Barge, Mrs. Hampton Parker, of Brunswick, Ga.; Mrs. Otis Jones, of Newnan, Ga.; Mrs. A. D. Kiser and Mrs. Columbus Jones, mother of the groom.

The receiving rooms presented a lovely scene with the beautiful decorations of palms, bride's roses and peonies. The dining table was covered in an exquisite cover of lace and Italian cut work.

The bride's cake graced the center, decorated in pink roses of lilies of the valley. On top was placed a miniature bride and groom. Around the base of the cake was a plateau of sweetpeas and rosebuds. Silver candlesticks held pink tapers and the bonbons were in pink and white. Vases on small pedestals were filled with sweetpeas, snapdragon and roses. These adorned the corners of the room.

Mrs. Frank L. Camp kept the bride's book and Mrs. Cam Lanier and Miss Laura Jenkins served punch.

In the music room an orchestra rendered a beautiful program assisted by Mrs. Mary Butt Griffith Dobbs on the harp.

The bride's going away suit was black satin made ensemble and trimmed with white bands of crepe satin and hat to match. She wore a corsage of orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for a trip to Grove Park inn at Asheville, N. C., and on their return will be at home at 273 Myrtle street.

Beautiful Brides-Elect and Charming Member of Society

The group includes two lovely brides-elect whose engagements are of wide social interest today throughout the south, and an attractive member of the younger society contingent. Upper left is Miss Elizabeth Josephine Williford, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bailey Brooks, whose marriage to Joseph Louis Morrison will be an important social event of the early fall at the Georgian Terrace. Miss Maude Couch, a popular Atlanta belle, is the lovely figure at the upper right. The lower picture is Miss Alverne Madden, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander Mad den, of Concord, whose marriage to Calvin Hunnicutt Prescott, of Atlanta will be an event of social importance June 24, at the Concord Baptist church. Photographs of Miss Williford and Miss Couch by Thurston Hatcher.

Art Exhibit and Convention Of War Mothers Feature Week

Not only Atlantans and Georgians, but the entire south takes pardonable pride in acclaiming the city's triumphant artistic success, the Grand Central art exhibit, now being shown at the Biltmore hotel under the auspices of the Atlanta Art association and the art committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Art-lovers throng the galleries each day and cultural interest rises to its zenith, for never has there been assembled an exhibition of painting and sculpture more discriminatingly selected and more thoroughly representative of the finest talents of the greatest American painters and sculptors.

Vying with the cultural interest of the city is the patriotic interest which is centered this week in the eighth annual convention of the National Service Star legion, which meets here May 18-23. The Service Star legion is the first organization of the world war and numbers among its officers and members hosts of prominent women throughout the country. An elaborate and varied social program will fill the intervening hours between the meetings of the legion.

Attractive visitors continue to be feted at a round of informal social affairs planned by their hostesses and friends. Mrs. Calvin McClung, of Knoxville, Tenn., is receiving much social attention as the guest of Mrs. Julian Field, and Mrs. James Meegan, of Washington, D. C., who is the guest of her sister, Miss Annie Flynn, is being accorded a warm welcome from her many friends here.

One of the most interesting social affairs of the coming week will be the tea at which Mrs. William Bayard Willingham and Mrs. William Willis Anderson will entertain Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Anderson on Avery drive.

Two lovely "sweet girl graduates," Miss Janie Howard and Miss Katherine Hunter, will be honor guests at the tea at which Mrs. Arthur Merrill, Mrs. Murray Howard and Mrs. Horace Presson will entertain Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Merrill on Gordon place.

Mrs. Thomas W. Connally, a charming recent bride, continues to be honored socially. The Chi Phi fraternity, of which Mr. Connally is a prominent and valued member, will entertain Sunday afternoon at a large tea in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Connally at the chapter house at Emory. Mrs. Ransom Wright will give a tea for Mrs. Connally Tuesday at the Piedmont Driving club.

The Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs will sponsor an elaborate May fete Friday afternoon at "Paradisio," the handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone in Druid Hills, the event to be one of the largest and most interesting social affairs of the season.

Mrs. Frederick Grady Hodgson will be hostess at a delightful al fresco affair at her home, "Wildwoods," Friday evening in the interest of the Campfire Girls' activities.

Of particular interest to the college set of society is the formal dance to be given by the Sigma Pi Phi fraternity of Boys' High schol Thursday evening at the Capital City club. On Friday evening the Sigma Phi Mu fraternity of Tech High school will entertain at a dance at the East Lake Country club, both affairs to assemble a large throng of college belles and members of the younger society contingent.

Miss Williford To Wed Louis Morrison.

Interest throughout the south and in Washington, D. C., centers today in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Josephine Williford and Joseph Louis Morrison.

Miss Williford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bailey Brooks, granddaughter of Colonel and Mrs. Robert James Griffin, and a niece of Mrs. Alfred Pembroke Thom and James Madison Griffin, of Washington, D. C., and a sister of Miss Mildred Williford.

She attended school at St. Mary's Episcopal school in Raleigh, N. C., and finished at Brenau college in Gainesville, where she received an A. B. degree. She also graduated from the conservatory of music and was member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

The bride-elect was presented to Washington sorority at a ball given at "Ronschers" by her aunt, Mrs. A. P. Thom. She spent two seasons in Washington and has since resided at Georgian Terrace hotel.

Miss Williford is a beauty of exquisite brunette type, and possesses a decided charm of manner together with a gracious and pleasing personality which has made her a popular belle in Atlanta and Washington society.

Mr. Morrison is son of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Morrison, formerly of Atlanta, but now residing at Orlando, Fla. His father was president of Atlanta Trust company and is a retired capitalist.

Mr. Morrison attended the University of Georgia, where he took a prominent part in athletics, social and literary clubs. He won several silver cups in tennis and basketball. He was graduated in law and member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

After graduation he entered theate of the Concord High school and first officers training camp and served overseas as first lieutenant. On his return from the army he entered the advertising business and is now southern representative of the Ferry-Honley Advertising company.

Mr. Morrison continued his athletic activities by playing center for four years on the Atlanta Athletic club's famous championship teams. He is a member of the Piedmont Driving club and one of the most prominent young men in Atlanta.

Miss Madden Will Wed C. H. Prescott.

Of widespread interest is the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Alverne Madden to Calvin Hunnicutt Prescott.

Miss Madden is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander Madden, of Concord, Georgia. She is a graduate of the Concord High school and finished her education at the Normal school at Athens. She is a young woman of unusual sweetness and charm, and will be an acquisition to the younger married contingent of Atlanta.

Mr. Prescott is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Prescott, of Atlanta. He was educated at the Georgia School of Technology, and served with distinction in the engineers corp during the world war. He is a popular member of the Hartford Fire Insurance company and is a brother of William Prescott, Jr., and Thomas Prescott.

Dinner-Dance Party For Miss Williford.

Joseph Louis Morrison will entertain at the dinner-dance Saturday evening, May 23, at the Piedmont Driving club in compliment to Miss Josephine Williford.

Tea-Dance To Honor Dancing Pupils.

Miss Harriett Barnes will be hostess to 150 of her dancing pupils at an elaborate tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore on Thursday, May 18.

A two-hour dance concert will begin at 4 o'clock. Tea will be served, the lovely affair to be given in the Georgian ballroom.

Mrs. Coleman To Attend Reunion.

Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, honorary president for life of the Georgia division, U. D. C., leaves Tuesday for Dallas, Texas, to attend the veterans' reunion as the representative of the Confederate Memorial association. She will participate in the social and official functions of the reunion, and renew friendships made in Atlanta at the big Confederate gathering here with Texas representatives at our convention.

Mrs. Coleman will make an extended visit to relatives and friends in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston before returning home.

Mrs. Calvin McClung Is Feted Visitor.

Mrs. George McKenzie will entertain at tea Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving club in compliment to Mrs. Calvin McClung, of Knoxville, Tenn., who is the attractive guest of Mrs. Julian Field at her home on Palisades road.

The party will be seated for tea on the lovely open air terrace and 15 close friends of the honor guest have been invited to meet her.

Mrs. Frank Stewart will be hostess at a lovely luncheon Friday at her home on Habersham road honoring Mrs. McClung.

Covers will be placed for Mrs. McClung, Mrs. George McKenzie, Mrs. E. Rivers, Mrs. Frank Inman, Mrs. Newton Craig, Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mrs. Henry Porter and Mrs. Stewart.

A number of other lovely parties will mark Mrs. McClung's visit.

Lipscomb-Weyman Plans Focus Interest

Of widespread social interest is the marriage of Miss Mary Ann Lipscomb and George Fontaine Weyman, which will be a fashionable event in society Tuesday evening, June 2, at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church.

Dr. Ashby Jones, pastor of the church, will perform the ceremony at 9 o'clock in the presence of a large and representative gathering of prominent Atlantans. Rutherford Lipscomb will give his daughter in marriage.

Miss Margaret Middleton will be maid-of-honor and Mrs. Joel Hurt, Jr., only sister of the bride-elect, will be matron of honor.

The bridesmaids will include Misses Erskine Jarnagin, Lucy Elizabeth Harper and Callie Orme, of Atlanta; Misses Marjorie Hodgson and Sarah Hall, of Athens; Miss Mary Bethune Patterson, of Columbus; Miss Henrietta McCormack, cousin of Mr. Weyman, of Eufaula, Ala.; Miss Sarah Pellew, cousin of Miss Lipscomb, of Macon; Miss Josephine Cathcart, of Danville, Ill., and Miss Vera Layng, of New York City.

Samuel M. Weyman will be his brother's best man and the groomsmen and ushers will be John O. Chiles, Spencer Callaway, Norris Broyles, Baxter Maddox, Lawson Kiser, Shelman Boston, John Grant, Comer Howell, James Dunlap, Hugh Richardson, Rankin Manley, Richard Sawtel, Jesse Draper, Grady Black, Robert Alston, George Moffett, Andrew Chapman, Bayne Gibson, Rutherford Ellis, all of Atlanta; George Connors, of Birmingham, Ala.; John Owens, of Montgomery, Ala., John Tracy Baxter, of Macon, Ga.

Miss Betsy Weyman and Fontaine Weyman, sister and brother of the groom-elect, will be junior bridesmaid and groomsman.

The flower girls will be little Misses Virginia and Ann Hurt, nieces of Miss Lipscomb.

Following the ceremony a very informal reception will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, which will include only the wedding party and families.

On Monday evening, following the rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Weyman will entertain at a large dinner, honoring Miss Lipscomb and Mr. Weyman.

Miss Apperson To Entertain.

Miss Jo' Beth Apperson will be hostess to 100 friends of the school and college set, at an al fresco tea, Monday afternoon at her home at East Lake.

Horse Show Dance At Biltmore.

Outstanding among the brilliant social affairs of the spring season will be the horse show dinner-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore on Saturday evening, May 30, following the horse show to be held during the afternoon by the Governor's Horse Guard at Piedmont park.

It is planned to make the affair the most beautiful ever held on the garden-terrace of the Biltmore. Special lights, special decorations and the natural wooded background to the terrace will contribute to the beauty of the scene.

Prominent Atlantans who will enter mounts in the show and many members of the dancing set of society will attend. Details will be announced shortly by the Biltmore management.

The tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore was a delightful event of Saturday afternoon.

Decatur Woman's Club Will Sponsor Orchestra Concert

The Decatur Woman's club will sponsor a concert by the orchestra of the Leffingwell Violin school Monday night, May 18, at the Decatur courthouse in the interest of Greater Tallulah Falls school. The Leffingwell orchestra is a permanent organization, having been in operation in Atlanta for a number of years, and its public appearances are always events of interest to music-loving people, presenting always a program of varied character containing some of the masterpieces of orchestral literature as well as some of the more popular novelties.

This program will contain, besides the orchestral numbers, several violin solos, and George Baker, the popular tenor of Emory university, will also appear as soloist. W. W. Leffingwell, director of the school, who was one of the soloists at the World's fair in Chicago, will also be heard in solo. Mr. Leffingwell has appeared in over 500 concerts and recitals in this country either as a soloist or conductor, oftentimes as both, with marked success. The "Illustrated American" says of Mr. Leffingwell: "Mr. Leffingwell was the first violinist to pass successfully the demonstrative examination before the American College of Musicians at the University of New York. No admission will be charged, but voluntary contributions will be given for the Greater Tallulah Falls school. The public is cordially invited.

Regular Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Decatur Woman's club was held in the Sunday school building of the First Presbyterian church Friday afternoon, May 15, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Roy Jones, president, presided over the meeting. The report of the executive board was made and recommendations made and adopted. The board reported that the first biennial council will meet at Tallulah Falls, June 9-12. Several members, including Mrs. Roy Jones, president; Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., first vice president, and Mrs. D. P. McGeachy, treasurer, will attend. The main session, it was announced, will occur June 10. A barbecue will be given the council on this day. A picture show will be sponsored by the Decatur Woman's club in the courthouse at Decatur. The first show will be given June 5 at 8 o'clock, admission 15 cents.

It was announced that an art exhibit would be given at the Biltmore hotel, beginning May 23. Decatur club has been given a day to act as hostesses. Much interest was manifested in the discussion of plans for the flower show to be given on May 23. Everyone was urged to send flowers of any kind which would help in decorating.

After the regular business a musical program was rendered which was much enjoyed by all. Miss Mary Minge Moncure and Miss Kietha Paxton, pupils of Mrs. Mary G. Dobbs, played selections on the harp.

Mrs. W. J. Rountree and Mrs. W. N. Woodberry, with a committee of ladies were hostesses for the afternoon.

Flower Show.

A flower show under the direction of members of the American Rose association and sponsored by the Decatur Woman's club will be given in the Metz hall in Decatur, Saturday afternoon and evening, May 23. The event is one of much importance as it is the first blossom show sponsored by any organization in Decatur. The occasion will be made an annual event in Decatur and it is hoped that all organizations and clubs over the state will cooperate with the Decatur club to make it a success. All flowers for decoration must be sent to the Metz building in care of either Mrs. Roy Jones, president of the Decatur Woman's club, or Mrs. J. M. Royall, chairman of the garden division of the club, by 10 o'clock, Saturday morning, May 23. Mrs. E. B. Branch, chairman of music for the day, has announced an interesting musical program. Among the artists for the afternoon program are, Mrs. D. S. Bayley and Mrs. L. E. Rogers, soloists; Mrs. J. G. Addy, accompanist; Miss Mary Minge Moncure and Miss Kietha Paxton, pupils of Mrs. Mary G. Dobbs, selections on the harp. Several interpretative dances and readings will be given by pupils of Mrs. Tom Galloway. In addition to the artists of the afternoon Walter Bobo will play selections on the violin, and Mrs. Tom Campbell will sing.

The regular meeting of the Garden club was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Charles D. McKinney, on South Candler street. The large attendance proved the interest of the members. Mrs. J. M. Royall, chairman of the garden division presided. Several letters were read which indicated the interest which is being shown in different parts of the state in the flower show to be held in Decatur on May 23. An interesting talk was made by Mrs. M. F. Kirkpatrick on the subject of "Wild Flowers." Specimens of various flowers, including the laurel, wild geranium, Carolina pink, shepherd's purse, Solomon's seal, columbine, spikenard, primrose, anemone, wild maidenhair, Iris and rhododendron were displayed and discussed. A very important talk was made by A. M. Dunn on the subject of "Roses." Mr. Dunn is an officer of the American Rose association and is an authority on rose culture. It was announced by the chairman, Mrs. Royall, that several exhibits would be made by the garden club during the year. An exhibit of gladioli will be given in August. Members were requested to plant gladioli on June 12, so that all of the flowers should bloom at the time of the August meeting. An exhibit of chrysanthemums will be given in October.

North Carolina Society Plans Banquet

Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, president of the North Carolina Society for Women, and Dr. Plato Durham, president of the Men's North Carolina society, urge all North Carolinians to attend the annual banquet commemorating the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, May 20, at 7 o'clock, at the Atlanta Woman's club. Send in reservations to Captain Ray K. Smathers, Healy building, not later than noon Tuesday, May 19, as reservations close at that hour. Cards will be mailed to each North Carolinian announcing this event, but if, through inability to reach any one on account of change of address, or failure to have same on list of members, please do not allow this to interfere with the attendance of each loyal Tar Heel. There will be an interesting program and several matters of importance to those concerned will be presented. The beautiful banquet hall of the club at 946 Peachtree street will be decorated with the North Carolina flags and banners; those having the flags in their homes will kindly bring them on this occasion.

WOMEN'S CLUB TO HONOR LEGION CONVENTION VISITORS

Woman's Club Advocates Prison Reform Campaign

New impetus was given the campaign for prison reform for Georgia, as advocated by the Atlanta Woman's club, during the past week when more than 200 members of the Georgia medical auxiliary at their closing luncheon gave the movement their enthusiastic indorsement and pledged their active support.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, addressed the members and read the following resolution, which was adopted by the club at its meeting Monday, when Judge T. E. Patterson spoke on the subject:

"Whereas, one of the essential steps in the direction of prison reform in the state of Georgia lies in the establishment of a psychiatric department, and

"Whereas such a measure has been recommended by a member of the prison commission of the state as necessary to the proper functioning of said commission, therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Atlanta Woman's club petition the general assembly at the forthcoming session to pass the necessary legislation creating a psychiatric department to be under the supervision of a regularly-employed psychiatrist defining the duties of such department to the end that the mentally and physically deficient among the prisoners of the state may receive proper attention; and be it further

"Resolved, That we call upon other organizations throughout the state to lend their support and influence in making possible this much-needed reform in behalf of those whose impaired mentality calls for prompt and intelligent action."

The members of the medical auxiliary were very enthusiastic over this splendid step in prison reform and there were women present representing all parts of Georgia, who pledged active service in promoting this work.

Wood Indorses Plan.

J. O. Wood, Fulton county representative in the legislature, indorses the plan for the psychiactric department for the state as outlined by the Woman's club and promises his support in advocating the creation of this department.

Mrs. Sharp in her recent talk on the subject brought attention to the fact that so many of the states had the vocational penitentiaries, such as Virginia, New York and Indiana are operating, and find it a great improvement over the chain gang system. Indiana, according to Mr. Sharp, has a splendid system under which the prisons are now operated.

The first step for reform in Georgia, according to Judge Patterson, member of the prison commission, is the creation of the psychiatric department and the second step is to have a system of classifications under which prisoners may be placed in separate institutions according to their condition. Judge Patterson illustrated this point by saying that often the highest type of citizen was convicted because he was short in his accounts and because, unfortunately for him, the auditor's visit came sooner than he expected and his shortage was discovered. Then this citizen, who would possibly make just as good a convict as he would an average citizen, quiet and well-behaved, is compelled to be thrown in the closest contact with the most incorrigible and hardened criminals, which was not the proper way of handling the situation according to the speaker, but the only way under the present system.

Judge Patterson is especially anxious that the system be so arranged that the prisoner's punishment be carried out in such a manner as to cause the person offending to appreciate the enormity of his offense and at the same time to appreciate the fact that the law is merciful and is meant to bless the offender and not merely intended to wreak vengeance.

Election of Officers.

The following officers were elected for the coming year as nominated at the last meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club: Mrs. Norman Sharp, president; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, first vice president; Mrs. T. Guy Woolford, second vice president; Mrs. John R. Hornady, recording secretary; Mrs. E. V. Carter, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. George Ripley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Eva Corrigan, treasurer; Mrs. W. D. Williamson, assistant treasurer; Mrs Joel Hunter, auditor.

The list of new members received into the club last week includes Mrs. H. B. Griffin, Mrs. Theodora Morgan Stephens, Mrs. J. T. Bright, Mrs Graham Johnson.

Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, finance chairman, reported that the club swimming pool was near completion. Mrs. Douglas further stated that all materials for building the pool and the funds for construction were secured through the splendid efforts of Mrs. Sharp and that it was a cash proposition throughout, incurring no debt upon the club, since the pool is already paid for. She said that never was the club's financial condition better that at this time, that the current expenses were not only being paid, but that for the first time since the club was built, the principal on the loan had been reduced and the premiums kept up.

Prize Winner in Contest

Mrs. George Ripley, Jr., who won first prize recently offered in the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club for the best essay on "Labor-Saving Devices in the Home."

MRS. RIPLEY WINS ESSAY PRIZE ON 'FIRELESS COOKER'

Mrs. George Ripley, Jr., member of the press department of the Atlanta Woman's club, and recently elected corresponding secretary, was the winner of the beautiful painting which was given as a prize in the home economics department of the club, for the best essay written on "The Labor Saving Device in the Home."

Mrs. Ripley chose the fireless cooker, as the subject of her essay and said: "Of all the labor-saving devices of modern times, to me the most wonderful is the fireless cooker. To the housewife who has no maid, all the daily meals may be prepared with remarkable ease and skill.

"The cooker boils, bakes, steams and accomplishes almost every need in cooking. For preparing breakfast food, such as cereals for the baby, prunes, grits and foods that require such long, slow and careful cooking, there is no convenience that compares with the cooker. Every item that is placed on the menu for dinner may be placed in the cooker at one time without fear of scorching, burning or of being over-done. One of the outstanding features is the fact that all the natural juices in meats are preserved and do not escape in the air. In this way the food is really more nourishing.

"For cake-baking, it is a boon to the housekeeper, and not only cooks layer cake but makes the most delicious fruit cake as well as all sorts of loaf cakes.

"My experience of ten years as a housekeeper has taught me to regard a fireless cooker as an absolute necessity, particularly where food for children must be prepared. In a year's time, gas bills will be reduced at least one-third if the cooker is used consistently. The housekeeper is enabled to devote her time to outside interests and is no longer a slave to the kitchen."

The home economics department of the Woman's club has stressed throughout the past year, one of the most successful years ever experienced in the department and under the guidance of its able chairman, Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, the labor-saving device in the home and offered this prize as a stimulus to housewives to equip their homes with these necessary devices in order that they might enjoy homemaking and housekeeping, thereby preserving the most valuable institution God has given us.

According to Mrs. Carlisle, with the proper equipment for labor saving in the home, the wife and mother can have the home beautifully systematized and can enjoy some outside pleasures with the other members of the family. Mrs. Carlisle stresses the fact that a mother is much happier if she is enabled to have outside recreation and mingle with other people, and is therefore much more able to make the home and loved ones happier than if she is a slave to her domestic life and is tired and worn when the day's work is over.

A delightful meeting was enjoyed by the home economics department during the past week, when, following the business session and awarding the prizes, the members attended a reception given the department by the Henard Mayonnaise company, at its plant on Whitehall street. Mrs. Claudia Wood won the prize for the best discovery in housekeeping problems.

The meeting held last week closes the year's activities for the department and is conceded wonderfully successful in all of its numerous phases of endeavors. Its every effort has been to help the homemakers through the year and is regarded as one of the most outstanding features of the entire work of the Atlanta Woman's club and much is due to the magnificent leadership of Mrs. J. A. Carlisle.

Beautiful Reception Planned For Distinguished Visitors

The Atlanta Woman's club will be hostess to the National War Mothers' Service Star Legion, during its convention in the city this week at a beautiful reception Thursday afternoon from 5 until 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the woman's club, will be official hostess and will be assisted in receiving the guests by several of the honorary presidents of the organization as follows: Mrs. Max Mayer, of Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. E. H. Vanostrand, of Madison, Wis.; Mrs. P. J. Adams, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Mrs. William N. Irving, Boston, Mass.; local officers: Mrs. Sam D. Jones, Mrs. Marcus Beck, Mrs. W. F. Melton, Mrs. John L. Tye, Mrs. Oscar Elsas, Mrs. T. T. Stevens. Officers of the woman's club who will assist Mrs. Sharp are Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. W. F. Melton, Mrs. J. P. Billups, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, Mrs. Eva Corrigan.

Mrs. M. L. Thrower, chairman of the hospitality committee for the woman's club meetings, will have in charge the arrangements. She will be assisted by a large committee, that will arrange all details, including musical entertainment and decorations. Mrs. G. H. Brandon, leader of the decorations department of the club, will arrange all decorations.

There will be 250 guests invited and everything will be done to make this a beautiful occasion for the mothers who suffered great anxiety in seeing their sons called into service during the great world war.

Young ladies from the junior department of the club will assist in entertaining the guests and the occasion will be of great pleasure to those entertaining these distinguished visitors.

MRS. TURNER PAID HIGH TRIBUTE BY MRS. HORNADY

Mrs. George L. Turner completes this month one of the most remarkable years in the Atlanta Woman's club life, in newspaper picture work. Through the splendid cooperation and generosity of the newspapers, according to Mrs. John R. Hornady, chairman of publicity for the club, Mrs. Turner has been enabled to introduce to the public, through photographs, the great number of active officers and members of the Atlanta Woman's club, who have served the organization for the past two years and in this way have contributed outstanding assistance to the community from a cultural and civic standpoint.

During past two years there have been almost 400 photographs of these untiring workers used in the different newspaper columns of our city and few people realize what extensive labor this entails for the picture chairman.

"Mrs. Turner," said Mrs. Hornady, on commenting upon this important division of the work, "has been untiring in her efforts and has succeeded in not only making friends of the club members, but is especially admired by the editors and artists, with whom she comes in contact. This is a particularly trying phase of work, because every picture used reequires not less than a half dozen telephone calls to the subject of the photograph, the editor and the photographer, perhaps several trips to the photograph galleries and newspaper offices, making arrangments and last, but not by any means least, the anxiety of whether or not the likeness will be pleasing to the individual.

"Any member who holds this office as picture chairman, for two years in as large an organization as the Atlanta Woman's club," concluded Mrs. Hornady, "deserves a great amount of commendation for her splendid tact as well as her boundless patience and remarkable perseverance, and the club is liberal in its praise of this work."

"ORIGINAL 13" TO SPONSOR BENEFIT BRIDGE

The "Original 13" of the Atlanta Woman's club junior department, under the directorship of Mrs. Alice Taylor, are planning a delightful benefit bridge party at the club for Tuesday afternoon, May 26.

The entire group will endeavor to make this one of the largest bridge parties of the season and all of the friends of the junior group are urged to take part.

Lovely prizes will be given and those wishing early reservations may make them by calling Miss Florence Obear, chairman of the group, or Mrs. Taylor, directors, at Hemlock 1104.

Clubwomen Honored In Unique Party At Henard Factory

To change a food manufacturing plant, particularly one of a kind which uses quantities of oils, broken eggs, etc., into a fit place in which to entertain sixty ladies in costly gowns is an accomplishment of which any manufacturer might be proud; in fact, few men operating such plants would attempt such thing, but this is what was done by Pat O'Brien, vice president and manager of the Henard Mayonnaise company, in his plant at 477 Whitehall street Wednesday afternoon when he entertained the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club.

The ladies of the Woman's club have always shown the keenest interest in foods, food products, food values, etc., and one of their strongest departments is that of home economics, presided over by Mrs. J. A. Carlisle as chairman. This department was invited by Mr. O'Brien to inspect his plant and be his guest last Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock and the invitation was accepted by about sixty of the club's most prominent and enthusiastic members, among whom were Mrs. Norman Sharp, president; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, the club's first president, and Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of the home economics department.

Mr. O'Brien was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Underwood, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Parsons, Mrs. Dudley and Mrs. O'Brien, all of West End, in addition to his office and factory force. After an inspection of the plant and having gained a thorough knowledge of how these food products were made, a delicious salad course was served in which was featured the firm's products, together with orange crush and Red Rock ginger ale.

New Kind of Face Powder Tones and Protects Skin!

At last an amazing New Face Powder has been discovered which stimulates, tones and beautifies the skin. This wonderful new powder soothes irritation, cleanses the skin of impurities, closes enlarged pores and corrects oily skin.

Renews Skin Youth—Defects Vanish

After years of painstaking experiments a French scientist has discovered a marvelous new face powder which absolutely revives the hidden beauty of any skin—which makes any complexion ten years younger! This almost magical face powder is compounded of imported ingredients which give it its marvelous ability to heal, protect and soothe the skin, correcting all skin blemishes and stimulating skin health and vigor. It closes enlarged pores, heals pimples, corrects roughness. Even blackheads disappear.

This amazing new tonic powder forms a soft, protective cushion over the skin, which allows the complexion to grow young again shielded from its three devastating enemies—glaring sun, harsh winds, and gritty dust. It is marvelously adhesive—it clings despite wind and perspiration. Then too, while gently stimulating the skin to health and vigor, it is not absorbed (blackheads are often caused by the pores absorbing inferior powders). Use this magic powder and your skin will grow young again—blackheads, oily skin, pimples and enlarged pores will disappear. Get a 75c box of Golden Peacock Tonic Face Powder from any drug or department store today such as A. R. Munn, Inc., Rich Brothers, Franklin & Cox, J. M. High.

AFTER BREAKFAST

AFTER breakfast the mother sends her little daughter off to school. She does her housework. She takes care of her baby. And—she is happy!

¶ To a great extent, a woman's happiness depends upon her health. If she is troubled with ailments common to women, she should seek relief from her suffering immediately.

¶ In the following letter Mrs. Fuller tells how she improved her health and by so doing increased her happiness.

MRS. T. H. FULLER
WALPOLE, NEW HAMPSHIRE

¶ "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it has improved my health wonderfully. For months and months I was not regular and had terrible pains. They used to affect my side so I could not work. I kept a girl at that time. I read of others being helped by the Vegetable Compound so thought it might help me. I am very much better now, do my own housework, and have two dear children to care for besides. I speak highly of the Vegetable Compound to my friends and recommend it to any woman for a nervous and run-down condition."

Georgia Federation Indorses Federal Aid for Home Economics

Mrs. Walter Purdom, chairman federal laws, sends the following interesting article on federal aid for home economics. The federated clubs are making their influence felt is legislation and it is the wish of the leaders in the great work of the federation that legislation be not overlooked.

While the "Better Homes in America" campaign is being nationally observed, it is an opportune time to consider the federal home economics amendment that has been indorsed by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Happily there is no question of states' rights involved in this measure. As we all know, federal aid in the instruction of home economics is already administered by the federal vocational law enacted February 23, 1917.

Vocational Act.

This act provides for cooperation between the state and federal governments for the purpose of instruction in agricultural and trade, industrial and home economics subjects. The administrative machinery consists of a federal board, representing the national government and charged with seeing that the law is complied with and a state board created by the state legislature and representing the state government. Each federal dollar expended must be matched by a dollar appropriated by the state or local community. The state board is charged with the responsibility of making plans for the work of the state and the designation of the institutions to undertake the work, supervision of the work in progress and cooperation with the federal government in the disbursing of funds to schools which meet certain specific requirements. These responsibilities vested in the state board safeguard the state's rights in the management of its educational affairs, but the act provides that $3,000,000 shall be expended annually for agriculture and $3,000,000 shall be expended annually for trades and industries and home economics and "that not more than 20 per cent of the money appropriated under this act for the payment of salaries of teachers of trade, home economics and industrial subjects for any year shall be expended for the salaries of home economics teachers."

Home Economics.

The object of the amendment to the vocational act is to correct this discrimination against the dish-washing sex. It provides that the appropriation for home economics education shall reach $3,000,000 annually along with agriculture and with the trades and industries.

Education for the Home.

When we consider that more than 80 per cent of our women marry and that 90 per cent of housewives do their own work, we get an idea of what a tremendous demand there should be for home economics education. Home economics education has for its controlling purpose the preparation of girls and women for useful employment in the occupations and management of the home. These occupations include everything from exterminating pest and affinities to entertaining the most distinguished. The courses of instruction embrace garment making, textiles and dressmaking, millinery, foods and cookery, elementary dietetics, home management, child care, home nursing, house planning and interior decoration, general science as applied to the household, physiology, household physics and chemistry. There is no greater need in America today than stimulating joy and pride in the preservation of the home and home ties.

Originality Marks Program Of Club Meeting at Calhoun

The Calhoun Woman's club, always original, introduced an unusual feature in the entertainment of the guests attending the seventh district meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Calhoun the past week. Mrs. Oscar T. Peeples, president of the club, presided over the meeting.

Among the novel and interesting features of entertainment was an automobile drive into the beautiful country surrounding Calhoun where on the top of a high hill are situated the ancient graves of Chief Pathfinder and Harriet Gould Bondinot in an old Indian burial ground. From behind a leafy bower to the strains of a violin stepped forth one who might have been the ancient chief himself arrayed in a gorgeously beaded costume with a feathered headdress. Taking the part of the Redskin was Ernest Neal who recited an original poem to the Cherokees.

Biennial Councils Center Attention.

The biennial councils center the attention of club women in June. The first will be the council at West Baden, Ind., where club women from all over the United States will gather as they did in Atlanta in May, 1923, these councils being held by the General Federation of Women's Clubs on alternate years from the better known and larger, but scarcely more important, biennial convention. The second council interesting Georgia women will be the Georgia Federation's first biennial council, modeled on general federation lines and like the national council, to be held on alternate years from state conventions. This council will be held at Tallulah Falls school, June 9-12, by invitation of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school.

Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, will preside at the Georgia council and Mrs. John King Ottley, head of the school trustees, will be official hostess. Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the general federation, will preside at West Baden, and Mrs. O. M. Pittenger, president of the Indiana federation, will be official hostess there.

Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, acting chairman of transportation, announces special concessions from the railroads for both councils. A special car will convey Georgia delegates in a party to West Baden, and a special train will be run from Atlanta to Tallulah Falls for the state meeting. The train to Tallulah Falls will leave the Terminal station at 12 o'clock noon Tuesday, June 9, going through without change. Georgia delegations to West Baden will be headed by the state president, Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, and the director for Georgia in the general federation, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, and Mrs. R. K. Rambo, state chairman of the department of public welfare, will be official hostess for Georgia at West Baden.

From Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs will come one of the important resolutions to be placed before the West Baden meeting. This resolution calls for a movement to properly mark sites of the world war, national army and national guard camps. This movement, when inaugurated by Mrs. Stevens in the March meeting of the Atlanta Federation was immediately taken up by the Senators from Georgia who interested themselves in preparing a bill, which will go before the next congress, callin; for an appropraition to cover erection of markers on plots of ground suitable for the purpose, to be secured by each community adjacent to these former camp sites. This bill has already been approved in the war department, officials of which responded enthusiastically to the idea. Federated clubs will be asked through Mrs. Stevens' resolution to pledge support to the undertaking, both by writing approval to their senators and representatives and by securing a suitable plot of ground logically located on the former camp site whereon the government may place the marker.

Mrs. Sherman, in the "General Federation News" for May indicates that attention at the West Baden council will be largely devoted to very practical subjects, such as: what is the responsibility of clubs carrying out action taken at the state and national conventions; best methods of raising money in clubs; when is a club commercialized? and the deaf and dumb chairman, how shall we reach them? These and other questions puzzling to many leaders of club and civic undertakings will be talked of at the forum of state presidents in which it is expected that Mrs. Brantley will take a leading part. "Business Methods," is given as an important subject for discussion on Friday at West Baden, and Mrs. Bentley, whose administration of Georgia federation has been guided by business methods, will be a main speaker.

From Mrs. Joshua Hodgins, director of program for the West Baden council, a request is being broadcast that every delegate at West Baden be prepared to speak on one or more subjects during the open forum, to which all day Friday, June 5, will be devoted. Subjects which will come up at the open forum include junior membership, club programs, cure for club poverty, publicity, politics, business methods, uniform by-laws for state federations, state bulletins, state headquarters and forms of organization; "broken links in the chain," meaning inactive state chairmen, legislation, the problems of clubs in rural districts and small towns, the interrelationship between the large clubs and the general federation, how to look for leaders, and how to develop solidarity of ideals. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the council will be devoted to department work with the press luncheon featuring Tuesday, and the citizenship luncheon featuring Wednesday.

Georgia Federation couheil will see the Greater Tallulah Falls campaign brought to a climax on Tuesday, June 10, on which day will take place the formal dedication of the splendid new school plant. It is expected that Governor Walker and other high officials of the state and celebrities from a distance will attend the occasion and address the immense throng of clubwomen whom it is planned to entertain that day. Numbers of clubwomen signify their intention of visiting Tallulah Falls school for the dedication exercises, and with the delegates to the council they will make up an immense gathering. Three years have been devoted by Georgia clubwomen to this undertaking, and led by Mrs. John King Ottley the capacity of the school has been doubled, the endowment made secure and the school equipment brought to a high standard of efficiency through the Greater Tallulah Falls campaign, begun in Athens in the fall of 1922. Untiring zeal has been shown by Mrs. Ottley and her co-workers, and the results attained place Georgia Federation in the forefront of women's organizations.

With the completion of this tremendous campaign for financial permanence, conducted under the title of the Greater Tallulah campaign, Georgia clubwomen will turn their attention to an increase in the number of perpetual scholarships at the school. From the Debutante club, of Atlanta, such a scholarship was given in the past week, and a few days before W. S. Witham, of Atlanta, gave five scholarships to be known as the Laura Witham Dorsey scholarships in honor of his daughter, Mrs. R. T. Dorsey. Other important subjects will come before the council through district presidents, state department chairmen and the presidents of individual clubs, all of whom will be leading figures at the various sessions. Particularly interesting will be the report of the committee on memorials at Tallulah Falls school and of the delegates from the state federation to the annual meeting of the Georgia Forestry association to be held in Waycross May 18. Miss Alice Baxter, state chairman of national resources and forestry, is a leader in the work which Georgia clubwomen do in connection with the forestry association. Of the Waycross meeting Miss Baxter says: "An attractive program is being prepared for a one-day gathering, and it is expected that subjects brought up on this occasion will be of far-reaching importance."

Clubs Requested To Send Year Books.

Clubs continue to write Mrs. A. F. Brenner, vice president-at-large, and also state headquarters for copies of old club year books that they may get ideas from other clubs as to year books and also for programs. The supply at both places is almost exhausted and clubs are requested to send the secretary of state headquarters copies of old year books for the good of sister clubs. Do not forget to send a copy of your new year book for the files at headquarters. Address: State Headquarters Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, 004 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Opera Singers Will Give Council Program

America is coming into a realization of the need of music as a part of national life and cities and civic bodies everywhere have cooperated this year as never before in the observance of national music week. The general federation, under the leadership of Mrs. Marx Oberndorfer has completed a most successful year in building up music in teh state federations. Mrs. Oberndorfer has arranged a program for the West Baden council, featuring American singers who have achieved success in Europe and America and these singers will sing in Eng-

Music for Council.

"It is the plan of the chairman of the music division, Mrs. Marx Oberndorfer, to bring to the council meeting a program which shall accentuate the possibilities of singing in the English language. For this reason Mrs. Oberndorfer has chosen three young singers who have made sensational successes in opera in Europe and America. These singers will give opera arias in the English language. The last evening will bring forward songs in English.

The first night of the council meeting will be given over to the program presented by the Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs.

The music for the second evening which is president's night will be arias from the Italian operas sung by Themy Georgi, a young Greek tenor who is now an American citizen. Mr. Georgi(was a student in Vienna and was just admitted to the opera of that city when the war broke out. He was retained by Germany to sing guest performances in all their capitals, but came to America directly after the war. Mr. Georgi has one of the most beautiful lyric tenor voices on the opera stage. He believes that all works should be given in English and is very enthusiastic over English as a singing language.

The second evening introduces Senta Erd, an American girl who was born in Duluth, Minn., but who made her success, as first soprano in Basle, Switzerland. She has sung in all the German capitals and has a repertoire of 50 roles, but on her marriage to an American, Caspar Haehnle, returned to this country, where she is now residing. She will sing two Wagner arias in English, a language which she feels should be used on our opera and concert stages.

Lorna Doone To Sing.

The third night brings Lorna Doone Jaxson, American, mezzo soprano, who made a sensational success in Chicago recently in the title role of "Carmen" when that opera was presented by the San Carlos company for the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Lorna Doone will sing two arias from "Carmen" in English; the song of the "Robin Woman," from the opera, "Shanewis," by Charles Wakefield Cadman.

The last evening brings the American baritone, Charles Norman Granville, who was the favorite pupil of the late Victor Maurel. Mr. Granville will sing a group of Russian songs in English for his first appearance and will close by singing three intensely dramatic American songs. Mr. Granville is an intensely dramatic singer and has been called the "American Chaliapin."

Fourth District Convention Report.

The 15th annual convention of Women's clubs, fourth district, was held in the ballroom of the attractive Country club in Columbus on May 2, with 130 in attendance.

Mrs. T. C. Hudson president of Columbus City Federation, was official hostess, receiving the visiting representatives and many distinguished guests who were in attendance. Among the guests were Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president; Mrs. J. K. Ottley, president, trustees of Tallulah Falls school; Mrs. Willard Patterson, publicity representative for school, editor Weekly Film Review; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general federation director for Georgia; Mrs. A. M. Hill, state treasurer; Miss Rhoda Kauffman, state department of public welfare, and many other prominent workers in the district and in Columbus.

Mrs. Henry Bird, of Bowden, Ga., fourth district president, presided over the session, assisted by vice president, Miss Dora Freeman, and Miss Edwina Wood. Mrs. Bird's opening address was full of inspiration and optimism. "Motherhood" was the keynote of her message and she urged clubwomen to give their efforts for better homes, also placing great emphasis on the elimination of illiteracy in Georgia.

Mrs. T. C. Hudson's welcome address was most cordial and was responded to in a bright and pleasing manner by Mrs. R. J. Atkinson, of Greenville, Ga. For the city federation in appreciation of the efficient service of Mrs. Bird, Mrs. Hudson presented her with a lovely engraving of a stately ship, using the words of the poem, "Sail On, Oh! Thou Ship of State."

Mrs. Brantley's address was full of enthusiasm and inspiration. She commended the clubs of the fourth district for their purposeful accomplishments and enumerated many excellent achievements in the state extension work.

The superintendent of Columbus public schools, Roland B. Daniel, in a brief address discussed Georgia's educational system, which he said was good "in spots only," and he made a plea for united effort, particularly for advantages of education in rural districts. Columbus is the only city in Georgia to be honored by romonwealth fund in supplying Miss Edith Farrell, of New York, to act as visiting teacher and diagnostician of the needs of backward and delinquent children. Following his talk, Miss Farrell gave an excellent paper on her work.

Reports throughout the fourth district were full of interesting things achieved, and each representative gave outstanding achievement of individual clubs during the year. There was unfolded a thrilling tale of constructive effort on part of 30 clubs

Gavel Awarded.

The achievements of the West Point Woman's club as given by Mrs. W. C. Hudmon, were judged the best, and the gavel offered in the fourth district was awarded by Mrs. Rhodes Brown, chairman of judges. Mrs. Hudson accepting it with cordial appreciation as president of her club. Union Improvement club, the only strictly rural club in the district, received honorable mention, having successfully organized a tri-county fair. West Point received award on several points, first, teaching thrift to children; second, efficiency of all department chairmen; third, club edition of newspaper.

The splendid reports given featured varied activities and interests, such as Tallulah Falls school cooking schools, cemetery improvement, trees planted, citizenship classes, Red Cross work, literary clubs, clean-up campaigns, maintenance of rest rooms, student aid fund, milk station, conservation of forests and flowers, music and art clubs, preserving valuable historic records, etc.

Three new clubs were organized during the year to whom cordial greetings were given, Infantry School club at Fort Benning, Bowden Junction club and Carroll county council, all doing excellent work.

One of the delightful features of the day's program was the Tallulah Falls noon-day luncheon at the beautiful Country club. The giving of the luncheon hour to the discussion of the school at Tallulah, called the "Sixteen-year-old Debutante Daughter of the Federation," was a delightful innovation. The president of the city federation, Mrs. Hudson, acted as hostess and introduced to the seated assemblage Mrs. Albert Hill, of Greenville, who was the graceful toastmistress. Frederick Gordon, president of Country club, was presented, and in a most gracious manner welcomed the visitors to the club and paid a pleasing tribute to the splendid work and influence of the women of the fourth congressional district.

Interesting speeches in behalf of the school were made by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. Willard Patterson and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson. Featuring the afternoon session was the address of Miss Rhoda Kauffman on "Juvenile Courts in Georgia," also the report of city federation by Mrs. Hudson, which was wonderful. The Orpheus club of Columbus, also a member of state and national music federation, gave

Mrs. Folks Appointed Corresponding Sec'y.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley announces the appointment of Mrs. G. P. Folks, 212 Ava street, Waycross, as corresponding secretary for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. B. M. Boykin, who has resigned on account of indefinite absence from Georgia.

Brantley, state president, and is enthusiastically working out the full program as planned by the National Anti-Narcotic committee. Mrs. Sanders is most active in civic and welfare work in the city and recently attended the United States Good Roads convention in Houston, Texas, as delegate, having received her appointment from Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, of Virginia.

State Director for Georgia Discusses Duties of Director

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, state director for Georgia, discusses the relation of the general federation to local work in the following article:

"In Washington at the meeting of the executive board of the general federation on directors' evening the question was asked, 'What is a director's duty?' Many answers were given, none better than this, 'to sell the federation to the club women of her state.' It seems the world interest finally comes down to a commercial basis if only for comparison, and it ought to be an easy matter to 'sell' the general federation to every club woman in the state. We can go as far back as the Bible to find that the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, nor can a club continue in its own small orbi without inspiration and help from the parent body. That body made up of representative women who have achieved things in their club experience—things worth passing on. The machinery with which to gather this best of thought experience and vision, put it into concrete form of programs, leaflets, letters of helpful character, is the general federation. This is its 'raison d'etre.'

"The democracy of the general federation is evidenced by the fact that some of the smallest clubs have carried out plans which have been passed and have proven of inestimable value to remote districts, where problems and conditions were the same, though hundreds of miles intervened between the clubs, and but for the federation these two mutually benefited clubs might never have heard of each other.

"What do we get from the general federation? Anything we want in the way of help along any club line, program for work. These adapted to the needs of the several hundred clubs, keeps the work along a certain channel, which, like the river flowing to the sea, fed by tributaries, gathers strength and momentum until its force is something to be reckoned with. Tow million women with a solidarity of thought and purpose is one of the greatest powers of the times. So much for what we get, what do ye give to the general federation? Some of our best women, women who stand high in their chosen fields, but better than that, there has gone out from some of the littlest clubs in Georgia such help and inspiration as made the hearts of those who know of Georgia only by reason of this helpfulness glad and anxious to meet the club women of that state.

"At west Baden, June 1 to 6, we will have the chance to meet these brainy women from all over the United States. We will hear discussed the very problems which are ours and will have the broadening opportunity to know what the women of the other parts of the world are thinking and talking about. The rates are not high, the hotel one of the most unique in the United States, and to have the whole council meeting under one roof, to be indeed and in truth one of "Mary Sherman's house party," is so alluring that it is hard to see how anyone can forego the pleasure.

"Mrs. Brantley, our president, will be the speaker for Georgia, and we must take a delegation which will make our president proud, in point of numbers as she could not fail to be in quality. Send the 'Georgia Special,' which leaves May 31, to West Baden with a coterie of club women which will show our friends from other states what it is to be led by such a woman as Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president."

Mrs. Howard Hill Is President of Bryanville Club

The School Improvement club of Bryanville met at the home of Mrs. A. A. Jones on Friday afternoon, May 1. Mrs. J. M. Jones, Mrs. Howard Hill and Mrs. Joiner were joint hostesses. The meeting was opened with prayer by Mrs. S. S. Webb, followed by the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the club.

The subject for the afternoon was "Why the Ex-Service Man Still Needs Our Help." Mrs. S. H. Buxton read an interesting paper on this subject. Mrs. E. B. Davis made a short talk and read a poem called "Springtime in the Argonne." Mrs. A. J. Shirah and Mrs. Lois Lyttle sang "Keep the Home Fires Burning." Miss Keeler rendered a musical selection.

After the program the election of officers was in order. The same officers were installed with an addition of assistant reporter. The officers for 1925-26 are as follows: Mrs. Howard Hill, president; Mrs. J. D. Lester, vice president; Mrs. C. W. McKenzie, secretary; Mrs. W. J. Page, treasurer; Mrs. James Josey, reporter; Mrs. E. B. Davis, assistant reporter.

Mrs. Lorenz Makes Valuable Donation To Tallulah School

Mrs. James R. Little, chairman of the art department of the Atlanta Woman's club, entertained at tea recently in compliment to Mrs. Max Lorenz, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson and A. C. Wyatt, the occasion marking the formal presentation by Mrs. Lorenz of an extensive collection of books and a photographic outfit to the Tallulah Falls school, through the fine arts department of the club.

This donation was made with the understanding that a fine arts cottage be established at the Tallulah Falls school, to be owned by the fine arts department of the Atlanta Woman's club and bearing the name, "Max Lorenz Studio." Among other things, this cottage is to contain two or three rooms for guests interested in arts and crafts and for members of the fine arts department of the club to use at will. The books will form a nucleus for the living room and the photographic outfit for a studio.

This valuable donation includes an Encyclopedia Britannica, a group of standard dictionaries, a varied collection of histories, Harvard classics, a complete photographic outfit, one thousand negatives, a portfolio of etchings entitled, "One Hundred Masterpieces," and nine handsome volumes from the International Correspondence school on "Electric Railway and Lighting," presented in 1907 to Dr. Max Lorenz, who had just completed his course. Dr. Lorenz is described as "A foreigner born in Vienna with the spirit of America, who dropped into a lumber camp to earn his living, learn the language and study sociology—one deeply interested in the upward, onward march of the world."

Mrs. Lorenz, through her generous gift, will furnish a wonderful vision for the mountain boys and girls, opening to many young minds avenues of thought and fields of exploration that would otherwise be closed to them. Mrs. Lorenz plans to add to this collection from time to time as the idea of the cottage materializes.

After tea the guests adjourned to the "Galleries Intime" to view the garden pictures of A. C. Wyatt, one of the honor guests. Of particular interest was the painting recently made of the magnificent oak tree in the court of hte Woman's club, a tree beloved by all the club members and their children. Mr. Wyatt is an English artist, a horticulturist, who came to this country to paint some of the beauiful gardens of America.

President Appoints Mrs. R. K. Rambo as Georgia Hostess

"Mary Sherman's house party" as the West Baden council has been dubbed at General Federation headquarters, is going to be delightful in every respect and Mrs. Brantley, Georgia's state president, who is ever thoughtful of the pleasure and the prestige of her club women has appointed one of Georgia's most charming and best loved women as official hostess to the Georgia delegation.

Asked for her plans, Mrs. Rambo said: "I am deeply appreciative of the honor Mrs. Brantley has conferred upon me by appointing me hostess of the Georgia delegation, especially as it was unsought. I shall do all in my power to add to the comfort and pleasure of the Georgia delegation, and hope that each one will feel free to call upon me at any time that I can serve her. We want to make this just the very happiest and pleasantest trip our club women have ever had, and from all reports it promises to be one of the best and most interesting programs the General Federation has ever put on. This is the first bi-ennial council meeting held since the one that met in Atlanta in 1923 as guests of the Atlanta Woman's club, and therefore this meeting will be of especial interest to the Georgia representatives.

"At every national convention, Georgia women always command the interest and admiration of the delegates from other parts of the country, and I shall be very proud to serve such a fine body of club women as are going to West Baden. It is my purpose to look up the Georgia women who are now living in other states, who will be in attendance on the council meeting, and see that they meet the 'folks from home' and once more get a taste of Georgia hospitality."

Montezuma Woman's Club Elects Officers.

Montezuma—(Special.)—At the annual meeting of the Montezuma Woman's club held at the club house Friday afternoon the following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Mrs. C. C. Maffett; first vice president, Mrs. J. M. Moore; second vice president, Mrs. J. A. Happ; recording secretary, Mrs. Averil; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. Reid; treasurer, Mrs. F. L. Perry; reporter, Mrs. R. C. Collier.

Following the business session a splendid program was rendered which included community singing; Pathe Topics by Mrs. J. C. Collier; vocal solo, Miss Lola McDonald; quartette Mrs. Yancey Hill, Mrs. Cullen Richardson, Mrs. J. R. Guerry and Mrs. Edna Reid; address, Guy W. Firor, county agent. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Mrs. W. H. McKenzie, presided.

Georgia Hostess Makes Request.

Mrs. Haynes Gives Resume Of Program for Biennial

Mrs. James E. Hayes, recording secretary of the General Federation, gives a resume of the very interesting program outlined for the biennial council to be held at West Baden, Ind., June 1-6, in the following article:

"The program for the binenial council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at West Baden, Ind., promises to be most interesting.

"On Monday evening there will be the usual addresses of welcome including an address from the governor and a response from Mrs. Sherman, president. This is to be followed by a reception given by the Indiana State Federation.

"On Tuesday evening there will be an address by Dr. Lowe Bryon, president of Indiana university, followed by pictures of the Indiana Dunes.

"On Thursday there will be a ten given the council at French Lick Springs Country club and in the evening the Indiana federation will entertain at a banquet.

"On Friday evening Lorado Taft, one of America's most famous sculptors, will speak.

"The music throughout the meeting will be exceptionally good, as musicians of international reputation have been secured. American music and American operas will be featured.

"There will be given for discussion from the floor as subjects of universal interest to clubs, such as club institutes, universal membership, club houses and club news.

"All the meetings will be within the hotel and it seems now that the whole meeting will be one of great pleasure and inspiration to club women.

"As recording secretary, it will be my duty to record the minutes of the council, of the board of directors' meetings and to serve as a member of the executive committee. This will keep me going very strenuously, as the meetings of the board start at 8:30 o'clock in the morning. The council meets all day and evening and the executive committee generally meets during the evenings.

"The recording secretary issues certificates to new clubs joining the general federation and this year has been an unusual year, since many states have come into universal membership bringing in several thousand new clubs.

"The Georgia delegation can go to West Baden and return by Tallulah for the state council meeting the following week, so I am in hopes that Georgia will have a very good representation. Come join us."

Interesting Features Of Biennial Council.

The program for the biennial council has many interesting features. Georgia representatives will be interested in the Friday evening session when Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman, of Atlanta, general federation chairman of fine arts, will be in charge of the program.

All departments of work in the General Federation of Women's Clubs will have representative speakers at the biennial council to be held at West Baden in June, and a forum on club problems to be threshed out will be held beginning Wednesday during council week. The program for the week has been given out by Mrs. Joshua Hodgins, program chairman, with a few speakers to be announced later.

The council meeting will open formally Monday evening, June 1, at 8:15 o'clock, with Mrs. John D. Sherman, national president, and Mrs. Guido H. Stempel of Bloomington, chairman for Indiana, presiding for Indiana; Mrs. O. M. Pittenger, state president, and Governor Ed Jackson will make addresses of welcome with response by Mrs. Sherman. Musical numbers will be given by Mrs. Guy Michael and the Temple Sisterhood, with Mrs. Hamet D. Hinkle leading in community singing. The meeting will be followed by a reception given by the Indiana Federation of Clubs.

Tuesday Sessions.

At the Tuesday morning session, Mrs. Sherman will make her report, and reports will also be made by the credentials committee, Mrs. John L. Ruhl, chairman; program committee, Mrs. Hodgins, chairman; rules committee, Mrs. Torrance, chairman; press and publicity, Mrs. Lessie Stringfellow Reed, chairman; department of legislation, Mrs. Gilbert F. Davis, chairman.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. Sherman and Mrs. Edward Franklin White, first vice president, will preside, and the program will be in charge of the department of American Homes, Mrs. Maggie W. Barry, chairman, who will make an address on "Some Social Problems and the Home." Mrs. T. A. Burnhams will talk on "Aims of the Home-Making Division," and Mrs. Walter McNab will speak for the department of public welfare.

Dr. William Lowe Byran, of Indiana university, will make an address on Tuesday evening, and a film will be shown of the Indiana Dunes, under the direction of Mrs. Frank Sheehan, chairman of natural scenery.

Wednesday Program.

The Wednesday morning session will be in charge of the department of American citizenship, with Mrs. W. R. Alford, chairman in charge; resolutions will be presented by Mrs. John Sippel, chairman. The forum which follows will take up the subjects of "New Blood" (junior membership); the assimilation of new members; programs, cure for club poverty, and other club problems.

The second vice president will assist Mrs. Sherman in presiding at the Wednesday afternoon meeting, which will deal with reports of club work, clubhouses and other subjects of interest to club women.

Mrs. Sherman and Dr. Caroline Hedger will make addresses Wednesday evening, when Mrs. George W. Plummer, chairman of the department of applied education, will have charge.

The forum will be continued Thursday morning when state problems will be taken up and recommendations based on the forum of Wednesday morning will be presented.

At the Thursday afternoon session, maintenance and membership will be discussed, with further recommendations of the forum committee, and resolutions presented.

The Thursday evening session will be in charge of the department of international relations, Mrs. Thomas C. Winter, chairman, will make an address. Mrs. Robert J. Burdette will talk on our "Far Flung Line of the General Federation."

General federation problems will be discussed Friday morning, including uniform by-laws, leaderships, federation spirit, and relations between the general federation and the club.

Friday afternoon, Miss Grace Frysinger, United States department of agriculture, will make an address on "Rural Women and the Federation," and Mrs. Henry M. Dunlap will speak on "Rural Problems."

Lorado Taft will speak Friday evening when the program will be in charge of the department of fine arts, Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman, chairman, and the council meeting will be formally closed Saturday, meetings will be held of the board of directors and state presidents, and of the executive committee.

Hapeville Club Joins Federation.

The Hapeville Woman's club joined the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, at the second meeting held Thursday afternoon, May 7, at the city auditorium. Mrs. Jere A. Wells, the president, presided.

Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of the fifth district, extended the invitation to the club to join the federation. The constitution and by-laws were read and adopted.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon, May 21.

Notice Issued To Eighth District.

Will club presidents or district chairmen who have failed to receive postcards requesting representatives' names to meeting of 8th district Federation of Women's Clubs notify Mrs. B. B. Zellars, or Mrs. J. E. Cobb, Hartwell, Ga., co-chairman of hospitality.

Please do this at once, as a full representation is desired at this meeting.

Church Publicity.

An article appearing on the woman's page of that highly valued journal, The Christian Observer, holds much of interest for those who realize the advantage derived from church publicity and correlate with it the command of Jesus Christ to His disciples: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

"Why church publicity?" asks the writer of the article; whereupon he proceeds in a luminous way to answer the question raised. The devil's work is well advertised by printer's ink, this writer avers, and especially is such the case when those within the church cast themselves into the mire of sin. Hence it is most important "to show the world that there are thousands of men and women who are laboring for the kingdom of God, and who have not bowed the knee to Baal." Such publicity, he claims, "will prove that goodness is still prized as a virtue and it will also relate the stories of many who have come from the dark of sin into the light of the kingdom.

"Church publicity!" Those are mighty words. Their true greatness has never been grasped by the average church member and will never be until those who are aware of the immenseness of publicity in the individual churches aid in a campaign of enlightenment that shall result in a sweeping program of evangelization outside."

And yet how few there are, comparatively speaking, who have really caught the vision of what such publicity can accomplish if done with a truly Christian intent and purpose. This commendable plan, so recently adopted by the Presbyterian church, may be taken with good effect into the program of all churches, for did not our Lord himself say by way of stimulating even the most reticent toward the propagation of His gospel: "Ye are the light of the world. . . . Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

EPISCOPAL EDITOR.

Espicopal Women Meet In Albany.

The Georgia branch of the Woman's auxiliary to the National council, held its thirty-third annual meeting while the diocesan convention was in session in St. Paul's church, Albany, April 22 and 23. The custodian for the united thank offering reported that only $401 was lacking of the $4,000 goal for the triennum, and it is thought that this amount will be easily reached. The branch has oversubscribed its pledge for the Ramsaur memorial by $58, and it expected to meet its pledge of $500 for the Bishop Tuttle memorial. The speakers on the program included the Rev. Middleton S. Barnwell, representing the national council; Miss Margaret Weed, from the national executive board; Mrs. Henry M. Johnson, diocesan chairman of the committee on devotional life, and Miss Edith D. Johnston, executive secretary of the diocesan field department. Mrs. W. N. Pratt, the president, and all other officers wer reelected, and the delegates elected to the triennial in New Orleans are Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. B. C. Blount, Mrs. A. H. Hilsman, Miss Julia Wright and Mrs. W. L. Wilson. Alternates, Mrs. F. B. Screven, Mrs. Haskell, Mrs. A. B. Hull, Mrs. J. A. Davenport and Mrs. J. S. Stewart.

Mrs. McCoy Heads Athens College.

"Mrs. J. H. McCoy has tendered her resignation to accept the presidency of Athens college, Athens, Ala."

The above announcement from Nashville, Tenn., will be received with genuine regret by Methodist women throughout the state of Georgia. Mrs. McCoy has been home mission secretary for the woman's department of the board of missions of the M. E. church, south, for several years and has supervised, most efficiently, all the territory east of the Mississippi.

Being an unusually capable speaker, Mrs. McCoy has been the guest of the North Georgia Conference Woman's Missionary society in several of the annual meetings and has visited Atlanta many times in connection with the city mission work here.

Before her marriage to Bishop J. H. McCoy, she was president of the college to which she has been recalled. She will carry on this work splendidly as she did before but her decision to accept the position means a great loss to the woman's work of southern Methodism.

Methodist Ladies To Have Barbecue.

The ladies of Calvary Methodist church, circle No. 4, Mrs. Rowland Bryce, chairman, will have a barbecue at the church on Saturday evening, May 23, from 1 to 9 o'clock.

Barbecue meat and Brunswick stew served in the good old southern style, can be had at 50 cents per plate. It will also be on sale at the Gordon street and Lucile avenue entrances of the church, and at the junction of Gordon and Lucile.

Commencement at Willingham School.

Attractive invitations have been issued by the faculty and students of the "Mary P. Willingham Industrial School for Girls" at Blue Ridge, Ga., to the 1924-1925 commencement exercises which will begin May 19 and continue through May 25. The fact that this school is owned and conducted by the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia makes this occasion of interest to Baptist women throughout the state.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 19 and 20, there will be recitals given by classes in "music and expression," and on Thursday evening the "senior piano recital" will take place under the leadership of Mrs. Laura Lynott talented head of the department of music. The senior play "Peg o' My Heart" will be presented on Saturday evening. On Sunday, May 24, both the morning and evening commencement sermon will be delivered by Rev. G. W. Garner, of Atlanta, one of the honored trustees of the institution. On Monday, May 25, the school will be open all day to visitors when there will be an exhibition of "home economics." Senior class day exercises will begin at 10 a. m. and in the evening at 8 o'clock the graduating exercises will be held and diplomas presented to those who have finished a full four-year's course of high school work.

The young ladies who are graduating this year at the school are as follows: Basha Callahan, Senoia; Mabel Chastain, Blue Ridge; Minta Eller, Titus, Towns county; Lucile Gable, Haralson; Mamie Gragg, Blue Ridge; Pearl James, Jesup; Eula Johnson, Cumming; Florrine McGarity, Vanna; Nellie Mae McKinney, Blue Ridge; Charlette Padgett, Blue Ridge; Fannie Shirley, Alpharetta; Louise Stiles, Blue Ridge; Gladys Williams, Commerce.

At a recent meeting of the board of trustees held at M. P. W. school, Blue Ridge, Professor A. B. Green was reelected president and Mrs. A. B. Green principal. Names of other members of the faculty will be announced at the graduating exercises May 25. Interesting plans have been formulated for the preparations of buildings and grounds for the annual summer assembly which will take place early in August and continue for ten days, the program being filled with distinguished speakers, representing every department of Baptist church and Sunday school work.

Kirkwood Baptist Home-Coming.

Growing from nine charter members of the Kirkwood Woman's Missionary society in 1894 to 210 actually in attendance on Monday afternoon, May 10, in the auditorium of the handsome new Kirkwood Baptist church, an enthusiastic "Home Coming" day was celebrated. At the organization meeting September, 1894, Mrs. W. O. Mitchell was elected president, and with the exception of a few intervening years she has been the beloved president from 1905 until the present day. With unconcealed joy and gratitude for the great things that God had wrought through this organization of devoted women, Mrs. Mitchell presided and read the 92nd Psalms which was the scripture read at the organization more than thirty years ago. Interesting to relate, the present secretary, Mrs. W. T. Whisenant held in her hand the earliest book of records and read the minutes of the first meeting which Mrs. Mitchell referred to as "ancient history." On last Monday there were present three charter members, Mrs. W. O. Mitchell, Miss Ellen Swann, and Mrs. C. A. Virgin, who arose with Mrs. Mitchell and were introduced to the large audience. Mrs. J. F. Gee, the present efficient treasurer made her report, and stood with Mrs. J. M. Selkirk who was a member of the society when in 1905, Mrs. Mitchell was elected president for the second time.

It is a matter of history that the Kirkwood church grew out of an organization known as the Beech Spring church and an interesting feature of the program was the introduction of three daughters of one of the pastors, Rev. Stevens, of the old Beech Spring church. The daughters present were, Mrs. C. A. Whidley, Mrs. W. H. Gooddy and Mrs. W. F. Dennard, who spoke briefly.

The Kirkwood W. M. S. includes ten general committees, a "new members" committee, and a "business woman's" circle; also a full graded W. M. U. system is maintained, which means the W. M. S. mothers the Y. W. A.'s, G. A.'s, Royal Ambassadors and Sunbeams. An attractive and impressive moving picture was presented to run when fifty little Sunbeam (girls and boys) and other members of the young peoples' organizations marched into the auditorium accompanied by their leaders Mesdames Hassler, Roquemore and Kent and singing together "Jesus Bids Us Shine." When Mrs. Mitchell called for reports, the following chairmen responded with cheer and encouragement, their committees standing with them reaching in many cases almost 100 per cent in attendance: Mrs. G. S. Oakes, Mrs. H. F. Hamilton, Mrs. R. D. Ozner, Mrs. W. D. Paden, Mrs. V. A. Chalker, Mrs. A. B. Hargrave, Mrs. H. M. Ranton, Mrs. Ira Everett, Mrs. Ernest Hiatt, Mrs. D. D. Dover; for the "Business Woman's" circle Mrs. S. L. Owens; "new members," Mrs. A. F. Almand; "press chairman," Mrs. L. Carpenter; "orphan's home," Mrs. H. W. Carter; "personal service," Mrs. T. T. Cornell, "mission study," Mrs. J. L. Jackson; "good will centers," Mrs. R. H. Tickard and Mrs. J. P. Roquemore.

Mrs. Fred Boring added greatly to the success of the occasion by two beautiful solos. The appropriate feature which completed the perfect day's program, was a brief address by the beloved and untiring pastor, Rev. J. L. Jackson, having served most acceptably Kirkwood Baptists for over twelve years and to whose leadership, combined with that of his talented wife, easily accounts for the splendid progress that has been made by this noble band of happy loyal Christian workers.

Miss Combs Named.

Owing to the fact that the year 1925 has been set apart as young people's year by the woman's missionary council of the M. E. church, south, it has been found necessary to have a field secretary to cooperate with the council superintendent of young people and Miss Bess Combs, who is at home on furlough from China, has been named in this capacity. Mrs. P. L. Cobb, of Nashville, Tenn., is superintendent of this department but the work is growing so rapidly that it is impossible for her to meet the demands of the office.

Baptist Auxiliary Honors Charter Members

The Woman's Auxiliary of the West End Baptist church entertained Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, May 11, in honor of its charrter members.

Special honor guests other than charter members were Dr. and Mrs. John Frederick Purser, Dr. and Mrs. Warren Moseley Seay, Dr. Harvey Clark, missionary to Japan, and Mrs. I. M. Howard.

A pleasing program rendered in which Mrs. Allie Purser Gifford, Mrs. Thomas Stokes, Miss Josephine Clark rendered beautiful vocal solos; Mrs. James on the cornet, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Jones on the piano.

Mrs. Harvey Clark, president of the auxilitary welcomed the guests. She requested the charter members, 35 of whom were present, to stand as their names were called. Each was presented with a corsage-bouquet.

Mrs. W. G. Cooper, one of the charter members, gave a complete history of the church and auxiliary. Names of pastors, presidents of auxiliaries; its division into circles, being the second Baptist church in the city to adopt the circle plan which is now adopted by all the churches as the most effective.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, wife of Georgia's governor, also a charter member, made the closing address.

Christian Church Opening Called Modern Miracle

It is the general concensus of opinion that the day of miracles has passed, but to the thousand persons attending the opening of the new Peachtree Christian church on Mother's Day, May 10, it certainly seemed that a miracle was happening before their very eyes. The beginning of this church has been likened to a young couple just newly married starting out in life. Their housekeeping equipment is rather meager, and it is a puzzle to them both as to how to place to advantage what equipment they have, but over all shines effulgently their deep and tender love for each other which makes any chance waste places to blossom like the rose.

We began without a thing but ourselves and hearts bursting with happiness and joy and never was the adage "as calm as peaceful as a May morning" so burningly true. We had gathered together some hymn books, a communion set and some collectin baskets and gone to the Woman's club for our first Bible school and church gathering. All those who had entertained any prejudice about meeting in a club forget everything in the beauty of the auditorium and its enchanting setting, which was even even more beautiful with many baskets of the most exquisite flowers from the choicest exotics to the most modest garden flowers. Three hundred and fifty were enrolled at the first Bible school gathering, and this did not represent the school in its entirety as several hundred others sent word that as it was Mother's Day they had gone to see their mothers out of town and for other reasons were kept away, but hoped to be present at the first opportunity.

We were elated eonugh over this beginning, but when church time approached and the multitudes thronged in, our happiness knew no bound. And strange to say practically few visitors were present, they were all our own folks who had come to unite themselves with us in our new enterprise. Soon every seat was filled and the choir rendered their usual beautiful music. Dr. L. O. Bricker who is to be the pastor, spoke on "A Great Woman," a Mother's Day sermon, and so tender and appealing was it, that there were but few dry eyes in the vast crowd and each one was touched to the heart on the marvelous eulogy to "Mother," the best friend that it is every vouchsafed mortals to know.

At the conclusion of the services, when the invitation hymn was given, fourteen responded, all grown, but one, and among them the good confession from five grown men, nearly all middle aged, who bethought to celebrate Mother's Day in the best way that any human being can, giving their hearts to the Lord and Master and bringing thereby exquisite joy to their mothers if living, and hallowing her memory, if she has passed over the river to rest in the shade of the trees.

In the near future plans will be made for the immediate beginning of a new and wonderful structure at the intersection of Peachtree and Spring streets. There is only one other church in this section and approximately 65,000 people, 20,000 within walking distance. The new building will be Gothic in design, an almost exact replica of the far famed Melrose Abbey, which will be a source of pride to all Atlanta and the south. There is no telling whereunto this thing will grow, but to all those interested in the growth and unbuilding of the Master's Kingdom, we say "watch and see."

Sunbeams Doing Splendid Work.

The Sunbeam band of Capitol Avenue Baptist church is doing splendid work under the efficient leadership of Mrs. R. L. Barton and Miss Eugenia Faulkner. There are 35 members enrolled, with average attendance of 20.

The Sunbeams have just completed a mission study on "The Honorable Crimson Tree," at which time ten certificates were awarded. Last year the band gave over $20 for missions. Recently the Sunbeams sent a large box of post cards to a missionary in China and are now making scrapbooks for different children's wards in the hospital.

Each month some personal service is done, such as visiting the Old Soldiers' home or the Old Ladies' home, which brings much joy and cheer to the inmates as well as to the children. Frequently baskets of fruit are carried to the Good-Will centers.

These children are being thoroughly trained in every phase of the work and will be of invaluable service in the future to their church.

Inman Park Women To Meet Monday.

The women of the W. M. U. of the Inman Park Baptist church will meet Monday afternoon May 18 at 3 o'clock for their regular missionary program Circle No. 4. Mrs. C. H. Terry, chairman, will have charge of the program. The subject is "Our Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky." The pastor, Rev. S. A. Cowan, will speak to the ladies on this subject and also bring them a surprising message from the Southern Baptist convention now in session at Memphis, Tenn. All are urged to come.

Mrs. C. H. TERRY.

Episcopal Girls' Friendly Society

Miss Theresa Blain organized the Episcopal Lakewood Girls' Friendly society in December, 1924, with eleven members, and at this date they have 53 members. This is a branch of St. Philip's Cathedral Girls' Friendly society. Lakewood branch is in two divisions, one meeting on Wednesdays, the other on Fridays, both making surgical dressings for Grady hospital. During March and part of April they made 9,964. They were assisted in this work by the St. Philip's branch. Miss Blain and several of the children visited the children's ward, better known as the roof garden, and carried 15 hand-made baskets, flowers and picture books to take Easter joy to the sick children.

City-Wide Y. W. A.

The second quarterly meeting of the city-wide Young Woman's Auxiliary, Atlanta association, was held at the First Baptist church. A delicious supper was served by the hostes Y. W. A. during which musical entertainment was furnished by several Y. W. A. groups. Fifteen churches were represented. Following supper there were brief addresses by Miss Julia Allen, state leader, and by Miss Ruby Hill, of the Kate Pendleton Dawson Good-Will center. Miss Hill made an appeal for workers to conduct the Daily Vacation Bible school at the center this summer.

An interesting program for mission study was outlined by the president. Each Y. W. A. group was asked to make a close study of "Ming Kwong," one of the most poular studies, and then to prepare a poster illustrative of the book. At the next meeting posters from all groups will be displayed so that each group may compare the other posters with its own. One of the best authorities in the state on mission study and particularly well posted on "Ming Kwong," has been requested to make a brief talk on the subject to the organization group.

A committe was appointed to select some specific form of "personal service" to be indorsed by the city-wide Y. W. A., and much good is expected to be accompanied in this manner.

Miss Grace Cook, vice president, described her stay at the south-wide Y. W. A. assembly, Ridgecrest, N. C., held during the summer of 1924, telling what an ideal form of vacation the assembly has proven and what great profit may be gained from attendance upon its sessions, which are conducted by some of the best representatives of Southern Baptist enterprise. The assembly will be held a Ridgecrest June 16-26, 1925.

Matrons' Class Is Entertained.

The Young Matrons' circle of the Peachtree Christian church was entertained at the home of Mrs. Tom M. Johnson in West End, at which time Mrs. Fred C. Hannah and Mrs. A. C. Rawlings were also joint hostesses with Mrs. Johnson.

Those invited were: Mrs. J. H. Alexander, Mrs. J. A. Bloodworth, Mrs. L. L. Austin, Mrs. O. P. Black, Mrs. J. L. Cook, Mrs. V. B. Clark, Mrs. W. M. Doll, Mrs. G. C. Edmondson, Miss Connie Freeman, Mrs. L. B. Goodman, Mrs. F. C. Hannah, Mrs. C. G. Hannah, Mrs. R. C. Hicks, Mrs. Charles Honour, Mrs. F. K. Johnson, Mrs. Tom M. Johnson, Mrs. John Kerksis, Mrs. Chester Martin, Miss Gertrude Mims, Mrs. Paul K. McCash, Mrs. John L. McDougal, Mrs. R. H. O'Kelley, Mrs. A. C. Rawlins, Mrs. H. N. Sullivan, Mrs C. W. Starr(Mrs. A. Beneficiaries Selected.

For many years it has been the custom of the woman's missionary societies of the Southern Methodist church to observe a week of prayer in the fall of the year, at which time special gifts are made to institutions selected by the woman's council. The selection is always made so that one foreign institution and one in the home field can profit by these gifts. Announcement has been made that the 1925 offerings will be appropriated to the Sue Bennett School for Mountain Children, in Kentucky, and to the Carolina institute, in Seoul, Korea, where a high school building will be erected and named for Mrs. Josephine Campbell, who was the first missionary of the woman's work in Korea.

More auxiliaries observed the week of prayer in 1924 than in any previous year and the offerings totaled $47,300.14.

600 Are Enrolled In Training School At Wesley Memorial

"Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" was the motto of the Standard Training school held at Wesley Memorial church last week for the Methodist Sunday school workers of the city.

Six hundred earnest young workers were enrolled, each working for credit in the particular department of Sunday school work in which he or she had chosen to specialize.

The first of these schools, under the Sunday school board of Methodist Episcopal church, South, was held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., in the summer of 1917. Since that time other schools have been held at regular intervals in the different conferences and always at Lake Junaluska, where it is possible to work for two credits instead of one, as in the conference schools. It is also possible to take a part of the work by correspondence.

The work required by the board is of such a nature that each student must be over 17 years of age and at least a graduate of the high schools.

The North Georgia conference stands third in the conference of southern Methodism in credits made by the Sunday school teachers and a large number of additional credits were won during this recent school.

A gold seal diploma represents credit in eight of the general units and four specialization units. There were three gold seals given to Atlanta women at this particular school—Miss Marie Thomas, of the Wesley Memorial church; Mrs. F. G. Jones, of Park street, and Mrs. Ethel Hutchins of Trinity.

The school brought several prominent Methodist women from other states to our city as members of the faculty. Among these were Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, of Oklahoma; Miss Barnett Spratt and Miss Marie McDonald, of South Carolina; Mrs. E. R. Michaux, of North Carolina; Mrs. W. F. Cann, of Alabama, and Miss Minnie Kenedy, of Tennessee. These would give their entire time to the promotion of Sunday school work in the territory of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, having conducted 9 schools already during this conference year and left Atlanta to go immediately into a similar school in Waynesville, N. C., ach school lasting over a period of 6 days. Mrs. Ferguson, alone, traveled 25,000 miles last year in the interest of this department of church work.

The reason for it all is that we believe the conservation of the youth of the church to be better, by far, than the reclamation and that it is only by trained workmen that the best work can be done in the field of religious education.

Mother's Day Ceremonies at Church.

Wesley Chapel Sunday school last Sunday held joint ceremonies in honor of Mother's day and Sunday school day under the leadership of the superintendent, F. H. Jackson, assisted by Mrs. J. P. Starr, superintendent of primary department; Mrs. Ernest Van Norden, assistant superintendent, and Mrs. Choice Bryan.

Program To Be Given by Church.

The literary and social meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Druid Hills Methodist Church, will be held Monday afternoon, May 18, at 3 o'clock.

The Bible study will be given by Dr. Thompson, of Emory university, and other interesting talks and music will be included in the program.

Oakhurst W. M. S.

The W. M. S. of the Oakhurst Baptist church held their joint meeting in the church April 27. A very interesting program was carried out during the afternoon. Mrs. Georgia Johnston, who is chairman of Circle No. 3, was in charge. Our pastor, Brother Bone, gave a most appropriate talk which was greatly enjoyed by those present. Others on the program gave interesting talks on foreign missions.

It has been arranged through our personal service chairman, Mrs. Enzor, for one circle each month to visit the Georgia Baptist Orphans' home at Hapeville and to sew for the children. Much inspiration comes from this much-needed service and also from help given the two "Good-Will" centers. Oakhurst Woman's Missionary society had twenty-nine present at their district rally. The largest representation of any church in the district.

A number of our ladies attended the sixth district rally also.

Circle No. 3, of the W. M. S., held their regular business meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Millwood, 112 Iverson street. All had an enjoyable time, showing much interest in the work already planned.

Those present were Mrs. Johston, Mrs. Wingfield, Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. Deaton, Mrs. Bone, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Scott, Miss May McDonald, Mrs. Carswell and Mrs. Millwood.

Circle No. 1 met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Kohler, on Elimra street. The fourth chapter of Acts was read and many discussions on the chapter were greatly enjoyed.

Circle No. 2 met at Mrs. Odum's, on Rocky Ford avenue.

Circle No. 4 met at Mrs. Harvill's, on Drexel avenue. There were ten present at each meeting.

Press Chairman.

Five Weeks' Course In Bible Study.

A five weeks' course on the books of the Bible, the church's beliefs and doctrines as contained in the prayer book and the catechism, and church history has been inaugurated in Savannah, Ga., for the laymen of the four parishes, the instruction to be given every Sunday night at Christ church. This intensive study is an outcome of a movement on the part of the bishop of the diocese to instruct a number of laymen under the new canon to license men as lay readers The decision was reached by the bishop and the clergy and laymen in consultation with him to extend this instruction to all men desiring to accept this opportunity. The first meeting was held the third Sunday after Easter and over eighty men weer present. The Rev. David Cady Wright, rector of Christ church, is giving the course on the books of the Bible, and the Rev. W. A. Jonnard, rector of St. John's church, the course on the church's beliefs and doctrines. Then men have enrolled with the bishop as lay readers.

How to Peel Off an Uulovely Complexion

The face which is admired for its beauty must have a satin-smooth skin, pink and white and youthful looking. The only thing known that can make such a complexion out of an aged, faded, or discolored one—a natural, not a painted, complexion—is ordinary mercolized wax. This remarkable substance literally absorbs the unsightly cuticle, a little each day, the clear, healthy, girlish skin beneath gradually peeping out until it is wholly in evidence. Of course such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, liver spots and pimples are discarded with the old skin. If you will procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, use like cold cream at night, washing this off mornings, the results will astonish you.—(adv.)

Inspiring Sessions Held Here by Episcopal Women

An audience of more than two hundred women, comprising officers and delegates of the Episcopal Atlanta Diocesan branch of the woman's auxiliary to the National Council, were told in a feeling way, by Bishop H. J. Mikell how greatly he depended upon their loyalty and service. The bishop also thanked the auxiliary for the substantial fund placed in his hands which he used for the education of two candidates for the ministry and for their generous contributions to domestic and foreign missions.

The address of the president, Miss Lucinda Snook, was given with deep, spiritual earnestness and at the same time gave evidence of that practical grasp of the manifold work engaging the attention of the woman's auxiliary, which has characterized her regime as a most constructive one. But above all else did Miss Snook impress the need of the "Quiet Hour" for meditation and prayer and urged that hey give ear to the church's call to the gathering of souls; but, in all and through all, must they ever hold before them the vision of their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ as the inspiration of work as well as prayer.

In reporting the recent meeting of L. Pettigrew gave an interesting account of an address made by Miss Grace Lindley, general secretary, who had returned from a world tour in which observation had been made of the work done through the woman's auxiliary on many foreign mission fields. Several returned missionaries had also spoken before the synod and the account of sacrifice and hardship, as well as triumph, had greatly stirred their hearers, Mrs. Pettigrew reported; but they were only at home on furlough and, without exception, despite trials that would have shaken less courageous souls, all were eager to go back to their work in the Master's cause.

Miss Pendleton, in addressing the convention on the subject of interracial relations, urged upon the auxiliary the training of young colored women to be missionaries both in matters of health and spiritual conduct to their own people.

It was a day full of interest and the many different reports of things accomplished in various lines, gave evidence of the fact that women are coming more and more to realize that they have a high and holy duty to perform in helping the church to translate Christ's message to the world in terms of human understanding and human conduct.

The social feature of the convention was a delightful one and all were given a most cordial welcome by both Mrs. Henry J. Mikell and Mrs. Thomas H. Johnston, while the staff of waiters who served their appreciative guests were indeed a charming reception committee.

Bible School At St. Luke's.

A daily vacation Bible school will be held in St. Luke Methodist church again this summer. The school will be opened one week after the closing of the public schools and will be supervised by Deaconesses Frances Howard and Mary Nichols.

Deaconesses Howard and Nichols are asking for volunteer teachers from the churches of the city and it is their desire that each teacher shall serve at least one week continuously as changing teachers in the middle of a week upsets the schedule and the program.

This affords a splendid opportunity for our school teachers, especially this year's graduates, to do some definite Christian work during the vacation time. A great deal of good was accomplished last year and the school for this term has ever a brighter outlook than before. It will be continued for five weeks.

Since this is the last bit of intensive work the deaconesses will put on before the community house is given over to new hands, the Methodist women have a wonderful opportunity to express their appreciation of work done by those young women by cooperating with them and making the closing weeks of their year's work their best.

MRS. WALLACE ROGERS.

"How can I reduce?"

"Every time I see you, Marie, you look as slender and well dressed as a bride. I would give anything to be as slender as you are. Tell me, what is your secret?"

"I thought you knew. Surely everyone knows about the pleasant way to reduce!"

* * * *

Yes, this is the secret of many slender women—Marmola Tablets keep them slender!

These tablets are not new or untried. For nearly twenty years, hundreds of thousands of men and women each year have regained slender figures by using Marmola Tablets. Last year alone, users purchased more than a million boxes!

Surely you would rather use these tablets and regain your slender figure, than try some unknown and perhaps harmful method of reducing.

Get some Marmola Tablets at any druggist's (one dollar a box) and try the pleasant way to reduce. Or if you prefer, a box will be sent to you in plain wrapper, postpaid, by the Marmola Co., 1847 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Bass P.-T. A. President's Report Shows Remarkable Achievements

The following annual report is submitted by Mrs. Henry Bauer, president of the William A. Bass P.-T. A.:

To the Officers and Members of the William A. Bass, Jr., High School Parent-Teacher Association.

Friends: With a roster of only 235 paid members this association came second in the standard of excellence as tabulated by the state P.-T. A.

Your president has endeavored to meet with every committee at some time during the year; has represented you at all but two P.-T. A. councils and presidents' luncheons; has attended both fifth district meetings and the state P.-T. A. convention held in Macon. Innumerable phone messages have been recorded; much correspondence has been personally handled; a number of communications sent to members through the kindly help of Mr. Smith, Miss Barker and Miss Bowman, to whom our special thanks are due; and many visits to various P.-T. A.'s and committee meetings have been made in the interest of this association.

Your president has been present at every board meeting and has presided over each monthly meeting, two of which were "daddies'" meetings held at night.

Realizing that an informal membership is necessary that an association may properly function, the program committee, Mrs. George Howsmon, chairman, submitted the following plan for the year:

September, Mrs. R. L. Turman, "Citizenship"; October, Mrs. E. W. Glausier, superintendent Decatur public schools, "Cooperation"; November, Professor W. A. Sutton, superintendent Atlanta public schools, "Character Building"; Music, Mandolin club, under direction of Miss F. Taylor; Glee club, under direction of Miss Wayne; December, Mrs. George Howsmon, president P.-T. A. council, "P.-T. A. Work"; Mrs. Frank Holland, "Girl Scout Movement"; January, Dr. A. Elkin, "The Undernourished Child"; February, Mrs. Sanford Gay, "Children's Code Commission"; March, Miss Carrie Booker, assistant principal, "Junior High Course of Studies"; April, Dramatic club, under direction of Mr. Collier, two one-act plays, orchestra under direction of Miss Wayne; May, annual business meeting.

The printing committee has aided materially in furthering our success, attesting to same is the report herewith submitted by Mr. W. B. Correll, chairman: Letterheads and envelopes, 500 each, 1,000; invitations, 7th, 8th, 9th grade class day, 500 each, 1,500; P.-T. A. monthly notices, 7,500; invitations and envelopes to 6th grade mothers, 500 each, 1,000; operalogue tickets, 300. Total pieces of work, 11,300.

The following report is presented for Mrs. W. A. Hansell, chairman of the ground committee:

Secured through street committee of city council, J. White, chairman, $1,000. This amount invested in crushed rock to cover back yard of school. Secured through W. A. Hansell, chief of city construction department, paving of alley way in rear of school lot and also leveling off of school grounds. Secured through Mrs. V. H. Kriegshaber, past president Bass P.-T. A., and chairman for Atlanta Woman's club, a grove of 19 trees planted in memory of the deceased and in honor of the living presidents of the Atlanta board of education. Secured through Mr. Correll's Garden club a number of plants planted in school yard. Secured through Mr. Smith, drinking founts in back yard, rebuilt and arranged in attractive and sanitary order.

One of the outstanding achievements of Bass P.-T. A. has been the placing of a trained nurse in the school for the past few months. To our beneficent friend, Cator Woolford, who thus far preferred to remain unknown, to Mr. Smith for his aid through the children's savings; to the number of individuals who have made generous contributions, and to the many who have sent their monthly donations through the school—our grateful appreciation is due for making this much-needed activity possible.

The following honors have been won by Bass during the year: Victrola won by having the greatest number of children in attendance at the Cincinnati Symphony concert. Faculty won athletic championship of four junior high schools. Attendance banner won by school in Boy Scout appreciation day contest. Relay track championship won by boys. Girls won basketball championship. County championship in football. Debating team won championship in junior high debating contest. The individuals receiving honors for the school were: Robert Moore, $5 scout poster; Katherine Mumford, $5 first prize, junior high poster contest. State P.-T. A. meeting: Richard Clark and Henry Kingdon won medals for best debaters in junior high debating contest; Carlos Lynes for the third time won Journal cup in ready writers' contest, and George Price, Jr., won second place. Arline Freitag won third place; Mary McCord, medal, D. A. R. essay contest. Rachel Spratlin won Red Cross prize; Etta Mai Hynds won first prize in home lighting essay contest; Mignon Breitenbucher won third prize in home lighting contest.

In the State Federation of Music club contest, the following won distinction: Eunice Howsmon, first prize in musicianship; Deneen McCormack, first prize in violin; Virginia Morris, third prize in compositon; Ervin Morgan (last year's pupil), first prize in cello.

In the southeastern music contest again honors came to Bass: Deneen McCormack, first prize in violin; Eunice Howsmon, first prize in musicianship; Ervin Morgan, first prize in cello.

Bass has led in attendance record every week except three during the year. Bass has the largest enrollment in the city—12 less than 1,000. Every child in ninth grades registered to enter one of the senior high schools. Nineteen classes of the 50 have perfect teeth.

The school sponsors the following organizations for our boys and girls: Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Junior Red Cross.

At no more fitting time could my sincere thanks be conveyed to Mr. Smith and the faculty for their beautiful act in naming the library of the school in memory of my dear grandfather, David Mayer—a pioneer in the cause of education in this city and a man whose broad philanthropies and civic pride knew no creed nor doctrine.

In behalf of my entire family would I give public expression to our appreciation of your tribute to one so dear to us. Especially do I wish to thank our efficient officers, members of the executive board and the membership at large for the very generous support given during my term of service.

The officers elected for the William A. Bass P.-T. A. for 1925-26 are: President, Mrs. Henry Bauer; first vice president, Mrs. Robert G. Stephens; second vice president, W. D. Stayton; third vice president, Harlee Branch; recording secretary, Mrs. Gladys Fay; corresponding secretary, D. M. Holsenbeck; treasurer, George Roberts; auditor, Graham West; principal, J. H. Smith; assistant principal, Miss Carrie Booker.

The directors are Mrs. George Howsmon, Mrs. A. J. Stitt, Mrs. W. B. Colby.

Lee Street P.-T. A. Observes Health Week.

In observance of national health week held in Atlanta during the past week, the Lee Street Parent-Teacher association, at their regular meeting Tuesday afternoon, had as their speaker Dr. H. R. Donaldson, of the Fulton County Medical society. "Preventive Medicine," was his subject.

Mrs. A. F. Black, president, presided. She gave a resume of her year's work and a report of the state Parent-Teacher association convention in Macon which she attended. She reported that during the year she has attended seven Presidents' club luncheons, four citizenship luncheons, four better films luncheons, held nine executive board meetings and nine regular meetings. She also expressed her deep appreciation of the kindness and cooperation of the teachers and mothers. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Long, retiring treasurer, for her splendid service during her two years in office.

Lee street P.-T. A. has accomplished much this year. As a climax to a year of progress and success, and as a tribute to the teachers for their loyalty and service, the association will buy new furnishings for the teachers' rest room, in preference to a luncheon in their honor, the usual custom.

Miss Barbara Johnson's fourth grade and the kindergarten, Miss Hinds, teacher, won the cash prizes for the best attendance of mothers.

Miss Jessie Terry's grade won the prize in the last paper sale.

May 19 will be registration day for the kindergarten. Miss Wood, principal, urges all mothers of children of that age to register their children on that day.

On May 20 open house and flag raising will be held; on May 25, the elocution contest, and promotion day exercises on June 4.

E. P. Howell P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The Parent-Teacher association of the E. P. Howell school met May 7, Mrs. Springer, the efficient president, in the chair.

Miss Wilma Peebles presented her first grade pupils in an attractive play.

Miss Marie Long, one of the delegates to the recent P.-T. A. convention in Macon, gave a most interesting report.

The hope chest committee gave a fine report of their work.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Mrs. Springer, president; Mrs. Sam Bell, first vice president; Mrs. Gibbs, second vice president; Mrs. Howell, secretary; Mrs. Patterson, treasurer.

The association, with this splendid corps of officers will accomplish even greater results in the ensuing year.

At this meeting the association voted to defray the expenses of an entertainment for the school.

A rising vote of thanks was given to the faithful principal, Mrs. Nichols, and her faculty for their beautiful spirit of cooperation.

Dr. Loveridge To Speak at Inman School.

On the afternoon of Thursday, May 21, at 3 o'clock, at the schoolhouse auditorium, S. M. Inman school, Dr. Elanche Loveridge will address the members of the Samuel M. Inman Pre-School Circle. Her subject will be, "The Psychology of the Little Child."

This is the last of a series of lectures sponsored by Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, pre-school chairman, and each member of the circle is urged to be present. Members from other circles, from the Parent-Teacher association and all mothers interested in the mental and spiritual phase of child development are invited. There will be no charge for admission.

Mrs. Wolfe states that she considers this an unusual opportunity for mothers of pre-school age children and, as Dr. Loveridge is one of most widely known lecturers and psychologists in the city, good attendance is expected.

At this meeting officers for the 1925-26 term will be elected. Members of the nominating committee are Mrs. R. C. Tressler, chairman; Mrs. W. T. Dent, Mrs. C. B. Thompson and Mrs. H. E. Sandford, Jr.

Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. Issues Invitation.

The following clever invitation was written by Miss Kate B. King, principal of the Forrest Avenue school, to the last meeting of the P.-T. A. to be held Wednesday, May 20, at 3 o'clock:

"Come to the last meeting of our P.-T. A.
Three o'clock the time, May 20th the day.
Election of officers, refreshments, a good time, too,
At home to the sixth grade
A lucky number perhaps for you.
To this party you are asked to bring
A package, value not to exceed a 50c thing,
All of these packages will then be sold
To the highest bidder by an auctioneer bold."

William Russell P.-T. A. Holds Final Meeting.

The P.-T. A. of the William Russell High school, of East Point, held the last meeting of the year Thursday afternoon.

Final reports from chairmen and committees were turned in on the year's work.

It was decided not to elect officers till the September meeting.

The eighth grade pupils, of which Mrs. J. R. Bailey is teacher, gave a most splendid program. This grade will pass into the freshman's class, at the opening of the fall school, and the program consisted of the "class will," "the prophecy," class poem, history of the class, and the "farewell" song, "At the End of a Perfect Day," class song by grade.

Crew Street P.-T. A. Holds Meeting Of Universal Interest

The Parent-Teacher association of Crew street school held their regular monthly business meeting Wednesday in the school auditorium, the president, Mrs. J. A. Beall, presiding.

The vice president took the chair while Mrs. Beall gave her report from the Macon convention. The most vitally interesting note to the Crew association from the convention was, that Crew P.-T. A. stands fifth in the standard of excellence for the state of Georgia. Mrs. Ball was given a vote of thanks for her splendid report.

An interesting report from the teachers' comfort committee was given by Mrs. Calts.

Mrs. A. Kahanow, chairman of the pre-school age circle, requested that the mothers interested attend the next meeting which will be held at her home, 312 Washington street, Tuesday morning, May 19, at 10:30 o'clock.

It was voted to entertain the graduating class of Crew at a luncheon to be given in the library of the school, immediately following the graduating exercises, June 4. Mrs. Kahanow, Mrs. Hightower, Mrs. Smullian and Mrs. Thomas were appointed as a committee to plan and serve the luncheon.

The association voted to entertain the faculty of the school and the officers of the association at a luncheon at the Henry Grady hotel.

Mrs. Beall announced that she would entertain the faculty of the school, officers and chairmen of the association, and any members who wished to come, at a tea to be given at her home, date to be announced later.

Mrs. Beall gave a resume of a most successful year's work as president of the association.

An amendment to the constitution of the association was introduced by Mrs. Kahanow recommending that officers be elected for two years instead of one, as at present.

Also, an amendment was offered by Mrs. Gunn to limit the term of office to two years. As under the constitution, thirty days' notice is required, these papers were filed to be passed upon at the next regular meeting.

The nominationg committee brought in a recommendation that the present officers be reelected for another year, which recommendation was adopted by the association.

The officers are as follows: Mrs. J. A. Beall, president; Mrs. R. E. Thomas, vice president; Mrs. E. A. Henrick, secretary, and Mrs. F. A. Risse, treasurer.

Mrs. Temple's class won the grade prize and also the complimentary tickets to the Howard for having the most mothers present for the grammar grades, and Miss Thompson's grade won for the primary grades.

Winnona P.-T. A. Wins Clean-Up Prizes.

The Winnona Park Parent-Teacher association held its regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon, the president, Mrs. Henry Earthman, presiding.

The school orchestra rendered two splendid numbers.

Winnona won the first prize in the Decatur clean-up campaign, for the most complete idea carried out in costume of clean-up, paint-up, as well as second prize for the number of tin cans collected. It was voted to use this money for playground equipment when school opens in the fall.

The lunch room committee outlined their plans for equipping a lunch room next year in order that the children may have a hot lunch and ask the help and cooperation of the fathers in this.

The president made her annual report on what the committees had done this year and thanked them for the help and support she had received from them.

Mrs. Mason, principal, and her corps of teachers are presenting a pageant, written from Mother Goose rhymes, Saturday afternoon on the school grounds, all the children in the school taking part. The friends and parents of the school have been invited. There will be no charge for admission.

The president was hostess at the teachers' lunch at her home just before the meeting.

Tech High P.-T. A. To Honor Senior Class.

The Tech High P.-T. A. will entertain the senior class of the school at a reception Friday night, May 22, at 8:30 o'clock at the Ansley hotel roof garden and Mrs. W. E. Dove and Mrs. George S. Obear, Jr., are cochairman of arrangements. They will be asisted by Mrs. C. E. Allen, vice president; Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs, Mrs. D. M. Holsomback, Mrs. J. H. Knuebel, Mrs. J. Kell Martin, Mrs. W. O. Cheney and Mrs. Z. V. Peterson.

The receiving line will be composed of newly-elected officers and those officers who have served during the past year and W. O. Cheney, principal of the school, and W. T. Hanson, assistant principal.

Willis A. Sutton and H. Reid Hunter will be distinguished guests.

Parents of the boys, the faculty and their wives and the young lady friends of the seniors are invited to be present.

A short program of entertainment will be provided and music will be furnished by the Tech High orchestra.

The reception will be a brilliant close to a year of wonderful achievements of the association.

Joseph Brown P.-T. A. To Give Garden Party.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Joseph E. Brown Junior High school will entertain the graduating class and the members of the faculty of the school at a garden party Thursday afternoon, May 28, at 4 o'clock, at the 'Wren's Nest" on Gordon street. A most pleasing program has been arranged for the afternoon and music will be furnished by Tech High band.

Stanton P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The Frank L. Stanton P.-T. A. held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, May 13. The officers for the coming year were elected. Mrs. E. W. Brown was made president, Mrs. R. L. Thompson vice president, Miss Mary Lumpkin, secretary; and Mrs. Blackwood, treasurer.

A picnic was planned for the entertainment of the members of the P.-T. A. It is to be at Moseley park on May 22.

Newly-Elected President of Tenth St. P.-T. A. And Retiring President and Secretary

Left, Mrs. Frank C. Wilkerson, retiring secretary of the Tenth Street P.-T. A. Center, Mrs. R. L. Cliett, newly-elected president of this association, and on the right is Mrs. James W. Austin, retiring president of the association. As president and secretary of this association for the past year, Mrs. Austin and Mrs. Wilkerson have rendered efficient and untiring services to the organization. Under Mrs. Cliett's administration, the association will continue its broad scope of activities in the interest of the children of the Tenth Street school.

Mrs. R. L. Cliett was elected unanimously president of the Tenth Street P.-T. A. Wednesday. Other officers elected were Mrs. James W. Austin, first vice president; Mrs. K. L. McKinstry, second vice president; Mrs. C. G. Aycock, secretary; Mrs. David Long, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John B. Horne, treasurer.

The meeting Wednesday afternoon marked the ending of a very successful two years' work under the leadership of the president, Mrs. James W. Austin.

Mrs. Austin gave a brief resume of her work during the year and expressed her deep appreciation of the kindness and cooperation of the mothers.

Twelve members of the violin class rendered several selections in concert. This class is under the direction of Miss Lee, who is the able assistant to Mrs. Morgan Stephen.

Interesting reports were made by Mrs. Falligant, chairman of teachers' comfort, and Mrs. La Blant, citizenship chairman. Mrs. La Blant urged the members to registered and vote in all elections.

It is with deep regret that the association gives up Mrs. Heinaman, whose work with the school paper has been so successful.

"Tenth Street News and Views" has developed into a "real" paper under her efficient management. Mrs. Heinaman leaves to make her home in Chicago.

Mrs. George Howsmon spoke briefly of the "Aim and Purpose" of the Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. Howsman thanked each member for their part in making the P.-T. A. a success.

Mrs. Newport gave a brief resume of work of the school for the year.

Mrs. Spencer's room 6-1, Mrs. Thompson's 4-1, Miss Anderson's 2-1, Mrs. Hardin's low-2 won prizes for having most mothers present.

Mrs. Andrews Gives Detailed Account of National P.-T. A. Meet

The following report of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the national congress of Parents and Teachers is submitted by Mrs. J. E. Andrews, who represented Georgia as one of the delegates attending the recent convention held in Austin, Texas:

"Tuesday was devoted to hearing the many interesting reports by heads of departments. A resounding burst of applause greeted Miss Frances S. Hays, national field secretary's report and statement, 'That physical chastisement of school children and whipping as an aid to education is a thing of the past.' Miss Hays contrasted a backward school she had visited where the teacher was armed with a wide leather thong, and a modern school she inspected the same day, whose teacher was fortified with a volume of 'The Child, Its Nature and Its Needs.' Miss Hays' report was one of a dozen on organization and efficiency, and on health.

Dr. F. D. Slutz, principal of Moraine Park school, Dayton, Ohio, gave his conception of 'A Schoolmaster and the Twentieth Century.' Mrs. Cornelia James Cannon, nationally known educator, made an impressive address on 'Education for the New Leisure.' Over the rostrum from which the members spoke was inscribed the motto of the national organization, 'The Love of Childhood Is the Common Tie which Should Unite Us in Holiest Purpose.' It would be impossible to give all the splendid features of the entire week so I will finish with a digested survey of the high lights of the convention.

"Our national president is lovable, commanding, inspiring. Her plea, her determination, is to stabilize American homes. 'Homes are not fulfilling full mission,' she said. 'Industry is taken out of the home and lost through great economic force. Build children for the making of the right kind of bricks in the great wall of our republic, for the children are the foundation of that republic. Develop in parents the knowledge and technique in developing children. We must meet the crisis in the home.'

"She urged that great stress be placed upon training leaders for leadership and that all locals and state branches study the aims and purposes of the national or mother organization. We are now recognized as an organization of social and educational value. We constantly receive requests for help in all departments of education, from state universities and colleges. We were urged to cooperate with the Humane society. Learned of the Council of National Agencies, which seems to be very similar in peace, to the Woman's Committee National Council of Defense, in war. The slogan of the C. of N. A. is 'Education within and without.' Fourteen organizations were found to be overlapping and duplicating by this council, and its mission seems to be conservation of effort and labor.

"Resolutions were passed condemning the 'block booking' plan of distributing pictures. Splendid reports made by field secretaries. Many states testified to the splendid work and help from them. We now have 875,240 paid members. One state doubled, one trebled its membership last year. Squaw association from North Dakota is latest addition. Hawaii is soon to be added, will be ready during the year. Three states reported separate state colored associations. Georgia in the lead with an organization already five years old. Invitations were sent to Mexico, Alaska and Honolulu to join us.

"The goal of the National Parent-Teacher association for 1925 is to cross the mark of 1,000,000 American parents in the organization, banded to fight for the ideals and future of American schools. Forty-seven states now have state-wide organizations, and the last, Nevada, is shortly to be added. Miss Florence V. Watkins, executive secretary, in making her annual report, urged the preparation of a manual for guidance of local branches. It was stated that the board of managers may authorize a committee of experts to look into organizations all over the country.

"On Friday at noon, the presidents' luncheon was held, when 42 presidents of that many states sat at one long table, with the national president in the place of honor at center, and all other delegates grouped at smaller tables which completely filled the large dining hall. Informal and impromptu songs and speeches were offered by the various state groups, before the toastmistress of the occasion took charge, after which the presidents of the various states responded in splendid manner to the toasts offered to their respective states.

Smillie P.-T. A. Closes Year of Success and Progress

A meeting of the Parent-Teache association of Ella W. Smillie school was held Friday, Mrs. R. M. McFarland, presiding.

Each chairman and officer gave a resume of the year's activities. The membership chairman, Mrs. W. L. Schell, stated that the association had more paid up members than ever before.

Mrs. Rhea Pearce, council representative, gave a report of council meeting.

A plea for the support of the schools in the better homes campaign was approved. Smillie school has three representatives who are accomplishing much in the campaign.

Mrs. J. D. Evans, who has done most constructive work as citizenship chairman is accomplishing a great deal in the Americanzation home.

Mrs. Thad Morrison also from Smillie, is program chairman of the Junior Music Study club in home No. 1.

Mrs. McFarland expressed her appreciation of the support the association has given her and gave a detailed report of her year's work.

Miss Smillie urged the registration of children for the kindergarten classes by May 19 and stated that on that day a physician will be present to present the needs of the children.

Mrs. McFarland, who has served so untiringly and capably as president of the association the past year was unanimously reelected. Mrs. Albert Waldon, vice president was also reelected. Other officers elected wee: Mrs. F. H. Naedele, secretary; Mrs. Frank Reed, treasurer; Mrs. R. E. Camp, corresponding secretary. Two members of the executive board were elected from the floor, htey were: Mrs. O. H. Mathews and Mrs. W. N. Massengale.

The second and sixth grades had the largest number of parents present and were awarded prizes.

The sixth grade children were the honor guests at this meeting. They entertained the association with songs and dances.

Mrs. McFarland, in well-chosen words gave an inspiring talk, especially to the sixth grade.

After the business meeting adjourned the auditorium was given over to dances, games and other forms of entertainment for the sixth grade.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. To Sponsor Comedy.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. will sponsor "Dr. Jack," a Harold Lloyd film comedy, Monday evening, May 18, at 7:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium. Music and two solo dances will precede the picture. Price 10 cents.

Smillie School Registers Kindergarten Class.

Parents wishing to register children for the kindergarten class at Smillie school are urged to do so Tuesday, May 19, as a reputable physician will be on the premises on that day to examine the child physically, and if attention is needed to present the need to the parent.

O'Keefe P.-T. A. Elects Officers And Plans Party

The Parent-Teacher association of O'Keefe Junior High school held the last meeting of the year Tuesday evening, Mrs. J. L. Rankin presiding. A group of ninth grade mothers gathered before the regular meeting and discussed the ninth grade party which will be held May 27. The following committees were appointed: Refreshment, Mrs. Fred Scanlon, Mrs. B. R. Firestene, Mrs. C. L. Wilkerson, Mrs. T. H. Wells, Mrs. J. D. Coleman; decorations, Mrs. W. S. Smithie, Mrs. G. W. Pruitt, Mrs. L. O. Laney, Mrs. John Hancock; program, Mrs. Sharp, Mrs. Carl Wesley, Mrs. Joel Hunter, Mrs. W. S. Jackson.

The officers and chairmen gave yearly reports.

Miss Wright, the nurse at O'Keefe told of her work in an interesting manner; 265 patients have been treated, she stated, since her installation a short time ago. One minute talks were given by the O'Keefe delegates to Macon. Mrs. V. C. Wilkerson spoke on entertainment; Mrs. Richard Jones, posters; Mrs. F. R. Jones, moonlight schools in the mountain district; Mrs. Julian Harris told how favorably Professor Sutton is regarded throughout the state. Other representatives were Mrs. Roy Jones, Mrs. R. M. McFarland, Mrs. McLaurine and Mrs. J. D. Coleman.

Mrs. Rankin said that vocational guidance was advocated as being eminently successful.

O'Keefe school holds third place in the standard of excellence in the state of Georgia.

Dr. Theodore Toepel, of Atlanta, introduced Dr. W. A. Mulherin, of Augusta, a visiting physician who specializes in children's diseases.

S. M. Hastings, the principal, made a short address, thanking the association for their cooperation the past year in the various activities, and announced the graduation exercises June 4, at the Baptist tabernacle.

The following officers were unanimously elected for next year: Mrs. Roy Collier, president; Mr. Jett, first vice president; Mrs. L. O. Laney, second vice president; Mrs. Von Herman, secretary; Mrs. Wiseburg, treasurer; Mrs. McAdams, assistant treasurer.

English Ave. P.-T. A. Meets.

The Parent-Teacher association of English Avenue school met Friday afternoon, May 8, with a large attendance, Mrs. J. V. Chastain, the president, presiding.

Mrs. C. D. Reed, the treasurer, made the yearly report, showing the result of splendid work done by the association during the past year. Miss Kingsbury, the school principal, gave a financial report of the work done by the school this year, reporting $400.64 being made in different ways.

The delegates who attended the Parent-Teacher association convention that was held recently in Macon made interesting reports.

The prizes for the most mothers present were won by Miss Wallis, high school, and Miss Lazarus, kindergarten.

Mrs. Ransbotham having the lucky number won the beautiful flower basket given by the president.

The nominating committee submitted the following names for officers for the next year: Mrs. A. D. Reed, president; Mrs. S. H. Ransbotham, vice president; Mrs. Smith, second vice president; Mrs. Hattie Waits, third vice president; Mrs. Pearl Shelton, treasurer; Mrs. Arnold, secretary; Miss Fitz, corresponding secretary. Professor Hastings, from O'Keefe school, gave an interesting talk.

The Glee club rendered a program Tuesday evening for the benefit of the association.

The next meeting will be on June 5. This will be a daddies' meeting and open-house day at the school.

Plans Completed for P.-T. A. Summer Course at Georgia

Plans for the Parent-Teacher short course at the University of Georgia summer school are being rapidly completed. Widespread interest in the course is being manifested over the state and it is the hope and belief of those in charge that this year will be the most successful course yet held.

Each year the services of Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, national executive secretary, are more and more in demand in all sections of the country, and that it is an especial privilege Georgia enjoys in having her again this summer. Last year there were 160 enrolled. It is hoped that the number may be doubled this year.

It is the suggestion of the summer school director that each large association send at least one student delegate, expenses paid, and that one person at least be sent from each small town. It is better to choose a person who will not only be able to take in the work, but will be able to give it again the association in which he or she may work. In all cases where it is possible the president should be the one chosen.

Let every district vice president and every local president get busy and see that their district is well represented. The benefit which will be derived from the three weeks' intensive training will far outbalance the small financial output which will be necessary.

The course carries college credit, and those working towards a degree will receive full credit for the same.

The course will be held from June to July. Registration fees will not exceed $3. Rooms and board will be furnished at minimum rates by local P.-T. A.'s.

For full particulars and railroad certificates, address Mrs. Walter P. Warren, state chairman of accredited short course, University campus, Athens, Ga.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

The Parent-Teacher association of Druid Hills Presbyterian church will meet Friday night, May 22, at 8 o'clock in the Men's Bible class room. Dr. Dunbar Ogden will address the meeting.

The Moses W. Formwalt Parent-Teacher association will hold their last meeting of the school year, Wednesday, May 20, at 2:30 o'clock. Yearly reports of the president, treasurer and chairmen of all committees will be read and the annual election of officers will be held. Every member is earnestly requested to be present.

The P.-T. A. of the James L. Key school will have their usual monthly meeting at the school on Wednesday, May 20, at 3 o'clock. The election of officers for the year 1925-1926 will be voted on and it is important that all members attend.

A meeting of the Crew Street pre-school-age will be held Tuesday morning, May 19, at 10:30 o'clock, at the home of the chairman, Ms. R. Kahanow, 312 Washington street. Dr. Sims will give a talk about infants. All mothers are urged to attend.

An interesting meeting of the Girls' High school Parent-Teacher association is planned for Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the new school building on Rosalia street. Of interest to all mothers will be the talk to be given by Miss Jessie Muse, the principal. It is hoped that every member of the association will be present to enjoy this feature of the meeting. Reports for the year by the chairman of the standing committees and the report of the nominating committee will be heard. Election of officers will follow. This is the last meeting of the year and a full attendance is expected.

There will be a meeting of the All Saints P.-T. A. in the chapel on Monday, May 18, at 4 p. m. Mrs. Jake F. Ridley will make a talk. A full attendance is urged as this will be the last meeting till fall.

College Park P.-T. A. Hears Annual Report.

The College Park Parent-Teacher association met at the Temple Avenue school Monday. This being the annual meeting the chairmen of standing committees gave their reports of the year's work.

The delegates to the state convention gave their reports, which were interesting and inspiring. Those attending were: Mrs. Charles Center, Mrs. B. L. Willingham, Mrs. E. H. Martin, Mrs. G. P. Wright, representing the P.-T. A.; Mrs. B. H. Sullivan and Mrs. C. W. Evarts, Jr., representing the pre-school circle.

Mrs. Ben McClary gave a report of the fifth district meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs held at Buckhead.

Mrs. E. H. Martin, chairman of membership, reported that the prize offered during the membership drive to the grade securing the largest percentage of new members was won by Miss Fleeta Cooper's grade. Mrs. B. H. Sullivan, chairman for this grade, did splendid work; it was through her efforts that the third grade won.

The prize of $1.00 to the grade having the most mothers present went to Miss Cooper's class in the grammar grades and Miss Wilson's class in high school.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Charles Center; first vice president, Mrs. Frank Ison; second vice president, Mrs. C. B. Brown; third vice president, Mrs. Witherspoon Dodge; recording secretary, Mrs. Fred Pierson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ben McClary; treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Pullen.

Mrs. Hutchinson Heads North Ave. Presbyterian P.-T. A.

The Parent-Teacher association of the North Avenue Presbyterian school held its last meeting for the year on Tuesday, the retiring president, Mrs. Paul Fleming presiding. The following officers of the association were unanimously elected: President, Mrs. W. M. Hutchinson; vice president, Miss Thyrza Askew; recording secretary, Mrs. C. E. Harrison; treasurer, Mrs. S. J. Canada; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. K. Adams.

Mrs. Fleming, who has served the association with intense zeal, was given a vote of appreciation for her splendid work. Mrs. Hutchinson, the new president, was introduced.

Announcement was made that the medal offered by the U. D. C.'s for the best essay on a given subject had been won by Jean Nutting, of the freshman class.

A splendid report was made by Mrs. George T. Smith, Better Films chairman, who requested that the parents adopt as a slogan for their children, "One Movie a Week and That Saturday Morning," since the Saturday morning pictures are always supervised by the committee.

Miss Askew spoke entertainingly of the experiences in Macon while attending the meeting of the Georgia Educational association, stressing particularly the ease with which Macon entertained this large body of educators.

"The Cecilians," the Dramatic club of the school have been invited to enter the contest for the Lucile King Thomas cup, offered by the Little Theater guild. The four schools competing will be North Avenue, Commercial High, Boys' High and Central Night schools.

The attendance award for the meeting was won by the fourth grade, Junior I, and the senior class.

Ormewood P.-T. A. Reelects Officers.

The Ormewood Parent-Teacher association met at the school Friday.

The chairmen of the different committees gave their reports. Mrs. C. W. Stone gave a report of the P.-T. A. convention held in Macon.

Mrs. Howsmon, president of P.-T. A. council, was introduced and gave a short talk.

All the officers were reelected to serve another year. Mrs. J. H. Wright, recording secretary, resigned and Mrs. Hilley was elected to take her place. A count of the mothers present was taken and the kindergarten won the prize for having the most mothers present.

After the business meeting a delightful program was given by the kindergarten children. There was also a program and demonstration by some students from Bass Junior High school, in charge of Miss Greene. Mr. Collier, from this school, told of the many advantages of Junior High.

Mrs. Sudderth presented Miss Caroline Hansell and Miss Mary Watkins, June bride-elects, handsome silver pieces from the P.-T. A. The faculty also gave them silver.

Refreshments were served to the mothers by the teachers.

The usual noon lunch was served the faculty by the kindergarten mothers at the home of Mrs. Stone.

Davis Street P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The regular meeting of the Davis Street Parent-Teacher association was held Wednesday afternoon.

The main business taken up was the election of officers for next year. Mrs. W. B. DuVall was reelected president; Mrs. Leah, vice president; Mrs. Timme, secretary and Mrs. Roy Jones, treasurer.

Dr. James K. Fancher was the speaker of the afternoon. He gave a most helpful talk to the mothers on how to keep in good health.

A short musical program was given by some of the children of the school. Jewel Plunkett and Ward DuVall gave piano selections. Jacob Bredosky sang two "Mother" songs and little Marie Barrett gave a poem in praise of "Mother."

Mrs. Sill, the pre-school chairman, announced that meetings would be held during the summer. Mrs. Percy Jones and Mrs. Plunkett gave reports of the Study club, which met at their homes recently.

It was announced that on May 19 a doctor would be at the school to examine the children who will enter in September. The parents may also get the entrance tickets for the children at the same time.

After the grade count and the awarding of the prizes to the kindergarten and fifth grade, delicious refreshments were served and an informal gathering was held.

The Story of the Revolt Of All the Small Boys of Harlow Hills Against All Their Pageant Loving Mothers; The Result ---a Wedding, Shocked Society, Vindication, And Bruises.

"I DID not raise my boy to be a fringed gentian," said Erskine.

Ordinarily he does not raise his voice. He did so now. Every one hearing that he did, knew that he was mad.

"Don't be unreasonable," said Edith. Edith is Mrs. Erskine Judson. "It was an accident. Your daughter is temperamental."

"My daughter is like her mother, who will take care of her," said Erskine. "The blame does not lie with her. It's deeper than that. I'm not worried about Pat. I'm worried about my sons. I'm prepared to have them wild at times as they grow up, but not as flowers."

"It was so warm a day," said Luella Pronze, "that the ladies thought the crepe paper might be pinned or sewed over the undies."

Luella was Patricia's governess and also the teacher of expression in the school.

Erskine visibly controlled himself at the word "undies."

"I'm with you, Erskine," said Edith's sister, Sherry. "When Dickie came bolting through the hedge in his B. V. D's and that ludicrous yoke of crepe paper about his neck, I wanted to send a lot of women back to the harem."

"I'll go in and get ready for dinner," said Erskine abruptly.

He smiled and thus seemed to ask everybody to forgive him for raising his voice. Edith followed him. Erskine was to be mollified, but managed and made urbane for dinner.

"It's time for Patricia's bedtime French," said Luella Pronze. Patricia heard of Billie Rabbit in French, and hated him and it. So, also, did Luella. Luella was a lady and hated herself. She hated herself as Patricia's governess and also as teacher of expression in the Harlow Hills school. Sometimes she thought the only thing she did not ever hate was Kayo Williams, the prize fighter, whom she had known as Percy in the old home town of Plainsville when she and he were kids. Percy as Kayo was comfortably realistic. His occupation recognized facts and did not deny them. One more fight and he would be middleweight champion, he hoped.

When Erskine and Edith and Luella had gone into the house there were only seven of us left on the lawn. In addition to Sherry Allison, there were six of her beaux. Erskine once said he knew how the caretaker at Gaunt Ithaca felt about Penelope when the suitors came and remained for dinner. Marriage at any price.

All our north shore villages love wild flowers and peace, the shade bush blossoms, the hepatica on the hill slope and the blossoming thorn, trillium under the oaks, sanguinaria, the beds of toilets, My Lady's Bed Straw, and the Devil's Paint Brush, winking at the edge of the thickets. Also the rare lady slippers, the fringed gentians, and the hardy wild geranium and phlox.

The realtor advances in muddy boots. The pale faced Fordite parks, alights, and picks. His heavy wife and his elfish offsprings grab. The hepatica is a dying race. The Greeks of the woods retreat.

We try to stem this tide. Once a year the resistant villages unite and organize a wild flower pageant. It satisfies the higher ideals of the mothers, and it is presumed to teach the young citizenry not to manhandle the hepatica.

Dickie Judson had been a fringed gentian in the great wild flower parade. He led the procession of 1,000 little living wild flowers out of the woods into the stadium. His little sister Pat walked with him at the head of the parade. Pat was a wild geranium. Occasionaly a geranium, always wild.

As Luella Pronze had explained to Erskine, the day was warm and the ladies of Harlow Hills who had made costumes had decided that the crepe paper could be pinned or sewed over the underwear.

Dickie, with green leaves and blue, convoluted petals over his summer shorts, was an inwardly surging male victim of an oppressive matriarchate. The knowledge that his elder brother Archie had escaped this and probably was jeering in the stands infuriated him.

The fact that he had to take the hand of his sister Pat and thus proceed out of the woods towards the stadium in the presence of several thousand imbecile children made him wish he had a dagger in his hand to bury it in the bosom of whatever adult god it was who sat up nights thinking of ways to humiliate children.

Dickie, with a fringe of blue crepe around his neck, was exposed in his underwear before the gala world.

Dickie was a snarling, curly wolf as he paraded into the stadium holding little sister Pat by the hand.

The fatuous adults thought it was sweet. They murmured and clapped their hands softly in applause. The orchestra played "Siegfried in the Forest."

Little sister Pat, an angelic child, as serene as a daisy in a July field, knew Dickie was in a raging torment, and she was happy because he was. She could be happy as a wild geranium if he were furious as a fringed gentian.

"Cut it out," said the fringed gentian, "or I'll bat you one."

"Pie face," she said.

The little wild geranium made a snout at him, and the fringed gentian gave her a short arm punch in the ribs. It was adroit and not observed. Neither was the tug she gave his envelope of cerulean petals, but it was observed that they came off.

Dickie, with a fringe of blue crepe paper about his neck, was exposed in his underwear before the gala world. flat, and plunged into the underbrush and on through the woods the half mile to home. Juvenile jeers and shrieks and uncontrollable, although not unsympathetic, adult laughter sped him.

Sherry had seen him crossing the lawn, almost in convulsions, and had followed him to his room and comforted him.

Frederick was the beau of oldest standing of the six about Sherry on the lawn. Claude was the newcomer. Henry Simpson had just brought him over that afternoon, after the flight of the fringed gentian.

Claude wore horn rim glasses which did not help him to seem a forthwith up and doing cave man. He had broad shoulders if you happened to look at him, but his spectacles seemed to be his physical and social index.

"This, Sherry," Simpson had said, "if my friend Claude. I brought him over."

"Clarkson, Miss Allison," said the young man. "I've read somewhere that in introductions one always mentions the last name distinctly."

"How do you do," said Sherry. Some one always was bringing some one to meet her and some grew to be frequent and nice, and some didn't. Ordinarily Sherry let nature take her course, but she might have paid more attention to Mr. Clarkson if she had not been thinking so much of Dickie.

"Frederick," she said, "the boy was a sight, but I resent his being called an insect."

"What boy?" Frederick asked.

"Dickie."

"I never called Dickie an insect."

"Just as he bolted through the hedge you said 'Who is that insect?'"

"I didn't even see him."

"Whom were you talking about, then?"

"Probably me," said Claude without pride or undue egotism. "Mr. Neckker was looking at Simpson and me. We were coming down from tennis."

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Frederick. "If I made the remark, I've forgotten it. It was probably a June bug."

"That's me," said Claude. "I'm not proud of it, but I have been called a June bug. Simpson here does it frequently. I don't mind, Mr. Neckker."

"Sherry, I resent what you're pinning on me."

"Don't get miffed, Frederick. What happened to Dickie is exasperating. I declare these lovely sweet mothers and lovely old maids around here are terrible sometimes in what they do to children. Dickie is a fringed gentian! How do people get that way?"

"I've read somewhere that American boys are too much under the woman school teacher," said Claude. "It's said to feminize the stock."

"Is that from reading or experience?" Frederick asked in his best nasty manner. He had decided to resent the appearance of Claude in Sherry's line.

"You know, Miss Allison," said Claude, ignoring Frederick, "I've got an idea. I don't often have ideas. But you've given me one."

"Shoot," said Sherry.

"As a man of few ideas I'm bashful," said Claude. 'These devils will razz me. Simpson's beginning to say something wicked now. You know you are, Hank."

"Look here, Claude," said Mr. Simpson, "you know I did you an enormous service in bringing you out here. He begged and begged, but I knew nobody would like him, and in kindness to him I wanted to keep him away, but he's so infatuated he said he would not mind his suffering. He'd like it."

Sherry—Infatuated with whom?

Claude—I was about to suggest—

Mr. Simpson—With you or your pictures, Sherry. It's all the same.

'You were about to suggest, Mr. Clarkson," said Sherry, 'that we go over and sit on a bench by the spruce while you tell me your idea."

"If it is not presumptuous," he said.

"Come along," said Sherry.

"Are you sneering or smiling, Frederick?" Simpson asked as Sherry led Claude out of earshot.

"When did you take up entomology?" asked Frederick.

"I'll make you a bet, Frederick. If either you or Claude marry Sherry, Allison, it won't be you. One hundred to ten."

"You annoy me," said Frederick, turning away.

* * *

"It isn't much of an idea," Claude was saying to Sherry, "and I'm sorry I spoke of it, but it occurred to me and I guess it slipped out. Probably if it's any good, you can develop it."

HE took off his horn-rim spectacles for a minute, and Sherry thought it wasn't at all a vacuous face. He put them back on, and she feared it was.

"This show they gave wasn't the thing for boys at all, was it?"

"I don't think so," said Sherry. "I believe in preserving wild flowers. I don't like the way the pink and yellow moccasins have disappeared and I like to find fringed gentians—and not pick them. But I don't believe in torturing little boys' pride."

"That's it. These sentimentalists made a mistake in juvenile psychology. The kids need a tonic now. My idea was to get up a boxing tournament—on the q. t. We might let a few carefully selected fathers in on it, but I think we'd keep all but the most exceptional mothers out."

"Very few, and few any good," he said gloomily. "All rotten, like this one."

"This one! I think it's corking."

"Not really"

"Yes, really."

"Well, upon my word. Now how many have we in our stable?"

"Our stable? What have horses to do with it?"

"I beg your pardon. I've read somewhere that a prize fighting establishment was called a stable. I was thinking of your sister's young sons. We'd want to enter them and, of course, we'd want them to win in their classes."

"Yes, of course. I never had thought of them as a stable before. who's twelve."

"I'd like to see them win. I was a dub and a duffer myself as a child. I am now, but I've read a good deal about boxing. I studied Jim Corbett's 'Art of Self-Defense' before a mirror for a year. If you haven't got any one better, I'd like to train your nephews."

"Shake on it," said Sherry. "The job is yours and I'll pull this affair off if it takes a leg."

SHE got the little boys of Harlow Hills rounded up secretly, and they took to the boxing tournament like water to a hillside. They were on the square with her and did not breathe a word. Several discreet fathers were let in, and approved, and brought home the boxing gloves. Edith Judson was the only mother in the know from the beginning. Later there was Mrs. Archdeacon.

Edith yielded, but did not approve, and asked to be told nothing more about it. What she did not need, she said, was any responsibility for it.

"I'm afraid," she said to Erskine, "that the social consequences of this thing Sherry is doing are going to be something like the fall of Rome."

"I don't give a hand," said Erskine. 'I didn't raise my boy to be a fringed gentian."

"They want to build a platform out on the lawn for the tournament."

"I'll pay the bill for the lumber carpenter."

* * *

"It's gratifying," said Claude to Sherry, "that Frederick is taking the affair so earnestly. I wasn't sure he approved because it was my idea and he doesn't like me. But he does approve."

"Does he?" Sherry asked. A question can admit skepticism.

"I'm quite sure. When I had the boys out on the road this morning we passed the Foster kids. They were in sweaters running along, and Butch Miller was with them. Frederick was in an automobile."

"Butch Miller?"

"He's a prize fighter," said Claude. "I recognized him from his pictures in the papers. He went ten rounds with Harry Greb the other day to no decision. It was a good fight. I read about it in the papers. I think Frederick has interested Mr. Miller in our little effort for the boys."

"You mean he's got a prize fighter in to train some boys to lick Dick and Archie?"

"That's fair enough, isn't it? We're training Dick and Archie to lick other boys if they can."

"I know," said Sherry, "but you're training Dick and Archie, and this Mr. Miller is training the Foster boys."

"I get your point," said Claude. "I've always been sensitive to such points, but it does prove that Frederick is with us, which was what I started out to say."

"With us?" said Sherry. "Training some boys against our boys?"

"With the idea of making it a success," said Claude, as if he believed a woman would think an event a success which defeated something she loved. "Frederick is doing what he can to make the affair go. I think it is generous of him because it was my idea, and some men might not have cared for it."

"It is generous of him," said Sherry. "Archie and Dickie will get a licking. That's nice of Frederick. He's helping you make it a go. How's he going to keep everybody from knowing about it if prize fighters are here?"

"Frederick probably hasn't told who Mr. Miller is," Claude suggested, "and maybe the ladies don't know him so well. I guess I'd better protect Dickie and Archie. I don't know enough to compete against a professional trainer. I'll go into town, and take a run around the gymnasiums and see if I can't get some help."

A day later Claude asked Sherry to meet two gentlemen. "They're out in the summer house," he said. "I was very fortunate. I got Kayo."

He paused. It was a touch of reverence.

"He's a wonder. He's out there with his manager. Ever since he fought at Anne Morgan's benefit for devastated France his manager has been eager to be with the society column. I told him this was a strictly first class society affair. He made Kayo come. Kayo was a bit cold. I think the manager sees himself in the newspapers in a society group. I'll have to arrange that."

"If we're to have prize fighters all over the place," said Sherry, "I'd like to be told how any secrecy is to be had."

"I've thought that out," said Claude. "I saw just that problem. I'm not good at seeing problems, but I saw that. I said 'how are we going to do it.' When I see a problem I'm not good at figuring it out, but I had better luck in this one. Greek dancing. Isn't that simple? Greek dancing. What more so?"

"Nothing," said Sherry, "unless, maybe, mud."

"Come out and meet Kayo," said Claude. "I'll explain, but we'd be a little safer if we knew just what they were doing in the summer house, or thereabouts. The manager has such a passion for society that he might initiate things, and Kayo has no control over him in such cases."

Sherry saw a squat man and a glorious youth. The squat man had a neolithic forehead, a Neanderthaloid jaw, a white and black checked suit, a fuzzy green hat, yellow gloves, tan spats, a yellow cane, and a badly chewed cigar. The glorious youth was so complete as an exeful that one couldn't dissect him, sartorially, biologically, anatomically, or otherwise. All one saw was that he had yellow hair, a bit curly, and what he suggested to imaginative eyes was a rapier blade, with gold on the guard.

"Miss Allison," said Claude, "may I present Mr. Williams and Mr. Gutz?"

"Pleasta metcha," said the squat gentleman. The glorious youth bowed.

Shake," said the squat gentleman, offering a yellow glove.

Sherry shook.

"These are the gentlemen who will help us out with the boys," said Claude brightly. "They know that Butch Miller is training an opposition."

"Cheese," said the squat gentleman.

"They think he is overrated."

"Raspberry," said the squat gentleman.

"As a trainer of youth," said Claude.

"Applesauce," said the squat gentleman.

"In short, that it's going to be easy."

"A kick in the pants," said the squat gentleman.

"The extravagance of a manager, Miss Allison," said the glorious youth. "I'll be happy to help the boys."

"Are you the prize fighter?" Sherry asked. She looked at him and then at the squat gentleman. "I thought—"

"He's a prize fighter w'en I'm with him," said the squat gentleman. "If I throw him, he's a bum. A kick in the pants. I taught him to use his left."

The glorious youth smiled and lightly shifted on his feet. It was as if a sunbeam had flickered on the wall.

"I've told the gentlemen it must be disguised as Greek dancing," said Claude. "You know. For the boys. It will appeal to the better elements of the community, you know. This way."

Claude endeavored fo become a flying Mercury. The glorious youth picked him up.

"Thanks, Kayo," he said. "Thank you. Don't bother. I can dust myself off. I seem to have slipped. I—I overbalanced myself. But you get the idea."

"Horseradish," said Mr. Gutz.

THE life of a lady in Harlow Hills had nine chances in ten of being a busy one. There was a sort of intellectual commons on which you might find everybody; say the near east relief, the community shoppe, the community house, the Harlow Hills commission, the school, the park and the Fortnightly. Here nearly everybody assembled and from this commons paths went off into pastures, just as green, but more selective.

Of three ladies who sold buns at the community shoppe of a Tuesday, one of a Wednesday might be interested in the matinee, another in bridge, and the third in some Russians at Hull house.

Or one might spend Wednesday canvassing for the Red Cross, another might go in town to a reception to Miss Alice Paul, and know a great deal about the twentieth amendment when she came home, and a third might be telephoning about for old clothes for the Salvation Army or might be arranging the program for the fortnightly.

The appeal of the times to Forward Looking Women was undoubted, and with wild flowers disappearing where they knew about them, and wild men increasing where they heard about them, the Stalwart Womanhood of the Republic seemed to hear a call. Every tick of the clock recorded the issue of a second in this impregnated time to pass as a challenge to womanhood.

Luella Pronze was fatally destined to be called Lu Prunes as teacher of expression in the school. Expression was anything which Luella wanted to invent. It might be floating red and blue balloons in the air for the five year olds, or drawing pink baboons on the blackboard for the eight year olds.

Luella was a hypocrite. She hated expression, pink balloons, pink baboons, the twentieth amendment, classical dances, Greek robes, wild flowers, earnest woment, the Armenians, the near east, the Salvation Army, the Russians, any children but the ones she might have later, fat dames, slender, serious dames, dames who knew diets and hygiene, dames who knew bridge and golf, dames who subscribed to opera and dames who knew traffic cops well enough to park their cars in town illegally at the price of a smile and two bits.

Luella read the sporting pages. She knew what Babe Ruth was batting on July 29. She knew Ty Cobb's stolen bases for ten years. She knew how many hits had been made off Mordecai Brown in 1902. She knew what Zev could run a mile and a quarter in. She knew the skating records, six day bicycle records, the phenomenal young Kayo she knew by chart.

She had been raised in the same town with him when he was Percy Williams. They had been hickory nutting together. They had been at parties playing postoffice and pulling taffy. They had been on bob sled rides and had cut pumpkin heads and popped corn together.

He had worked in Miller's store. She had gone to normal school. He had gone into the navy. She had studied interior decorating, dramatic art, elocution, and our native landscape. He had studied rope skipping, shadow boxing, bag punching and the improvement of his left. He had naturally a good right.

She always had been in love with him. She knew every knockout to his credit. Every time she read of one she saw Miller's store and him weighing out granulated sugar. It was as news from home. And now he came to Harlow Hills.

Greek dancing had been accepted as the explanation of Kayo and Mr. Gutz in one stable, and Mr. Butch Miller in another. In Fortnightly circles it was regarded as a distinct evidence of regeneration of elements in Harlow Hills, which had not been all they might be wanted to be.

"Fancy meeting you," said Kayo to Luella, seeing her when he was out doing road work with Archie, Dickie, and Mr. Gutz.

"Yes, what do you know about that?" said Luella.

"Run along, kids," said Kayo to Archie and Dickie. "Do two miles and come back. Lu, allow me to present Mr. Gutz, my manager."

Mr. Gutz was driving an automobile. That was the way he did road work.

"Shake," said Mr. Gutz.

Luella shook.

"How are you getting away with this, Percy?" Luella asked.

"He isn't," said Mr. Gutz. "I am. Greek dancing. It's a kick in the pants. These wrens are crazy about me. The frails always did fall for me. Take me away and he's a bum. His name's Percy. Bit him, Fido."

"There's something in what he says, Lu," said Kayo. "I'm glad to see you. Gutz, take a spin down the road."

"What do you mean" Mr. Gutz asked.

"I mean get out of here. Beat it. Get the air. You're too numerous. You're too many and too much. Get away from here. Do you want me to throw you and your car over beyond the next hill? Step on it."

Mr. Gutz with an alarmed expression went away at thirty miles an hour.

"A manager is a manager, Lu," said Kayo. "Part of the time you allow them to know it, but once in a while you've got to make them know it. It's like a letter from home to see you again. Let's take a walk. Do you mind?"

"A kick in the pants," said Luella, laughing.

ERSKINE had carpenters put up the platform for the tournament. Edith was afraid the sound of hammers would get around the neighborhood and cause inquiries, but it didn't. She had been game for the preliminaries, but welshed on the finals. She could not stay at home the day the little boys were to baste each other.

"I know I'm wrong," she said, "but frankly I'm a woman. If I saw some boy knocking Archie or Dickie in the nose I'd get up and stop it, So I'm going away for the day."

Next door to the Judson place was the Foster place, the two of about the same size and landscaping, five acres, about the same in delphinium, phlox, hawthorne, golden bantam, crabs, elders, plums, Bartlett pears, drawf apples, oaks, red bud maples, cottonwood, wild grapes, viburnum, and the like.

Mrs. Foster had two sons, Sid and Billy. She was president of the Fortnightly. She received a notice of an improvised meeting of the Fortnightly to be held on her lawn of a Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock. The subject was Greek art. The speaker was a Mr. Gutz. She did not know how this had been arranged and she thought she might have been consulted. But she accepted the meeting.

Some of the best things of the Fortnightly had been extemperaneous. When the Hindu poet—Mrs. Foster never could remember his name, but he spoke so nicely of Nirvana—had come out, it had been quite on the spur of the moment. It was the same way with Amundsen, and it was so lucky they had a snowstorm that afternoon. Also thus when Carl Sandburg and Vachel Lindsay had danced their poems. Mrs. Foster liked the inspiration of the extemporized.

This inspiration was introducing a Mr. Gutz to the Fortnightly. He came to talk of Hellenic physical culture and its relation to beauty. It was requested that mothers should bring their daughters.

Erskine came home at noon that Tuesday for the show at his house. A dozen of Sherry's beaux had ringside seats. Claude was referee. He appointed Simpson and me to be in the corners with the water buckets, towels and sponges.

"I wonder if either of you can squirt water through your teeth?" he asked.

Neither of us could.

"I've read that it's a part of the technique," he said. "Well, we can't expect to be altogether professional. We'll do the best we can, but I wish you could squirt water through your teeth. I hope I can flap the towels."

Kayo and Butch Miller, the real handlers who had to be suppressed behind the fictitious seconds, each took a wet towel and glared at each other. Kayo had been trying to get a fight out of Butch by giving away fifteen pounds.

Only one dependable mother had been found. She was Mrs. Archdeacon. She is the great nonconformist of Harlow Hills. It is probably a revolt against the name of Archdeacon. She is rich and lovely.

She had a son on the card and she wanted to see him smash or if it had to be, get smashed. She and Sherry were the only ladies at the exposition and, with the instinct for the feminine softening of brutality, each had some needlework and they sat in wicker chairs on the lawn.

WE started off auspiciously. Claude introduced the first pair of boys.

"Ladies and gentlemen—in this corner Master Bullfinch, the Wild Bullfinch of the Pampas; in this corner Master Jenkins, the Battling Shrimp. Two rounds to a decision. Both mem-bars of this club." He had read that somewhere.

The Wild Bullfinch and the Battling Shrimp met in full career and both knocked each other and themselves down with two wild right swings. They arose and declared all rules off. They were kicking each other's shins when Claude picked one up in either hand and dropped them out of the ring.

"It's a draw," he announced judicially.

"Kill the referee," said Mr. Butch Miller.

"My kids will knock your kids' blocks for ten furlongs," said Kayo.

"If they do I'm a geranium," said Mr. Butch Miller.

"You're a rat," said Kayo.

Claude announced Archie Judson, the Kayo Kid, and Billy Foster, the Child Heenan.

Butch Miller arose by the ropes. "Kill the little skunk."

"Ten dollars he can't," said Kayo.

"Can't hear you," said Butch.

"A hundred to ten," Kayo.

"You're on," said Butch.

Billy made a wild swing. Archie stepped in and hit him such a wallop in the nose that the fountain of life was released.

"Good kid," cried Claude, forgetting his judicial equilibrium. "We told you to do that."

"That costs you ten," said Kayo to Butch.

"Come and get it," said Butch. "Kill the referee."

Claude was stricken with remorse and put his arms around Billy.

"Can't we stop it, fellow?"

"Gimme a sponge and I'll kill him," said Billy.

"Another draw, ladies and gentlemen," said Claude and deposited both boys outside the ring, whereupon Billy started another fight which Sherry stopped.

On the Foster lawn Mr. Gutz had been introduced again to Luella by Frederick.

"I know the skirt," said Mr. Gutz. "Pleasta meetcha again, but what are all the gals doing here? The show ain't here."

"We're here to hear you talk on physical training," said Luella. "On the physical excellence of the Greek."

"Say," said Mr. Gutz. "Any Harp can lick any Frog, any Frog can lick any Englishman, any Englishman can lick any Wop, and any Wop can lick a Greek. Where do you get this Greek stuff?"

"What," asked Mrs. Foster severely, looking at the grouped ladies of the Fortnightly on her lawn, "are we here for?" She seemed particularly to ask Frederick.

"Maybe there's a mistake," he said.

"The show's over there," said Mr. Gutz. He pointed across the hedge to the Judsons. "Have you been kidding these dames?" he asked Frederick. "I didn't know you were bringing me here. I'm due over there."

"What is all the noise over at Judson's?" asked one of the ladies coming from the group.

"Somebody's a joker," said Mr. Gutz. "The show's over there."

"But you were to give us a lecture on Greek dancing," said a lady.

"Applesauce," said Mr. Gutz.

"He means that there is an exhibition of Greek dancing over at Mr. Judson's," said Frederick.

"Lovely," said Luella. "Let's go over." And Luella winked at Frederick, who was frozen faced.

She led the way through the hedge, closely followed by Mr. Gutz and Mrs. Foster and more leisurely by the other ladies of the Fortnightly. Frederick did not follow.

It was quite extraneous to the merits of the battle between Jerry Archdeacon and Sid Foster that Mrs. Foster should arrive through the hedge with Luella, Mr. Gutz and the ladies of the Fortnightly.

It was probably the most amazing if not appalling scene Mrs. Foster ever had seen, to say nothing of the other ladies of the Fortnightly, but much as they saw they did not see, as did Mrs. Foster, an offspring in the ring battering and being battered.

There was Sid in the ring. There was Jerry Archdeacon in the ring. There was Mrs. Archdeacon with needlework. There was Billy. Billy evidently had been in the ring. He was sitting on the grass watching the ring proceedings, but he had a wet towel to his nose.

Mrs. Foster was famous for poise and made much of it. This was a good time for it. It would take a lot of it. Erskine arose and offered her his chair. She smiled and refused it, thanking him.

"Do stay," said Mrs. Archdeacon. "It's really interesting. The boys show such good spirit."

Mrs. Foster smiled again. There had been no interruption of the proceedings in the ring.

"We must be going," Mrs. Foster said. "Come, Billy. Come, Sidney."

Sid heard the wholly unexpected sound of his mother's voice. He did not know she was on the premises. For nearly two minutes Jerry had been the only thing in his life. He turned his head at her call and just in time to place his chin against Jerry's glove coming up from the knees. It was a clean knockout, curtains for Sid. He was cold in dreamland. The idiotic Claude began to swing his arm and count over the fallen warrior. Some things are too much for poise.

"We've got to get out of this town at once for a month, at least," said Edith.

"Oh, it will blow over for us," said Erskine.

"It isn't going to blow over us. We're going to the woods—tomorrow. I love wild flowers, but I can't stand wild mothers."

* * * * *

"The bet still goes," said Simpson to Frederick. "If either you or Claude marry Sherry, it isn't going to be you. A hundred to ten."

"You annoy me," said Frederick.

"And I won't tell that it was you who invited the ladies of the Fortnightly to meet at the Foster place and queer the Greek dancing over here. That ought to be told on you, but I who know won't do it."

* * * * *

"I want to know about this," said Mr. Gutz to Claude. "My man has run away with a skirt. Kayo's gone with that Lu. Left a note saying he's going to be married. See me later. I'll say he will. You'll see me now. What do you think you are, you bum, to make a bum out of me? Think you can spoil my meal ticket? I'll tell the world you can't."

Mr. Gutz earned what he got. He led with his right. Claude led with his left and crossed with his right. Even if Mr. Gutz had not worn spats the most conspicious thing about him would have been been his feet.

* * * * *

"Anyway," said Erskine, exulting as he packed the woods things into the car, "I didn't raise my boy to be a fringed gentian."

The High Cost of

The Road to Fame as an Artist Is Long and Hard, But These Women Raised Their Children as They Struggled for Success.

THE difficulty of bringing up a family and of carrying on a career on the outside was encountered by Mrs. Beatrice S. Fetz who thereupon decided to solve her problem in a unique and practical fashion.

Mrs. Fetz had been a librarian in the children's department before her marriage. Later, when Curt and Sigrid came, she had fully planned to stay at home and devote herself to bringing up her two children. But only one who has had interesting work outside the home knows how monotonous the daily chores of a housewife can be! Not the actual care of children, for to Mrs. Fetz that is the most interesting work any woman can have, but those thousand and one duties that fall to the lot of the housewife whose only help in the home is the spasmodic aid of an untrained maid.

So when the children had reached toddling age, Mrs. Fetz decided to again take up her library work for half a day. But she was unhappy away from her youngsters and though she felt she must provide the wherewithal for the salary of the maid she wanted to relieve her of the daily drudgery of housecleaning, Mrs. Fetz decided quite emphatically she must earn that money within her own home.

So about five years ago, there began the career of the substitute mother! For that is the work Mrs. Fetz carries on within her own home and thereby earns a comfortable income. There are may day schools in every large city, especially in New York, where a mother can bring her children early in the moning in time for her to get down town to her own work, and take care of the child until the mother's return about six. But the mother who works is still up against it on holidays, week ends, and in case of slight illnesses. She cannot afford to give up her work and these day schools still leave a large share of the responsibility on the mother. And she, poor thing, is usually having a hard time of it holding down a job!

SO Mrs. Fetz, knowing of this difficulty, decided to open her home to a few other children whose mothers worked and who could appreciate the advantages of home life in her family group. She is now mothering this winter three other children in addition to her two. The mother of two of the children had a position that keeps her from home from nine until five-thirty. Formerly she had a maid who came in every day and took care of the three-year-old baby and prepared the evening meal. But so often did this maid disappoint the mother that she was compelled to make some other arrangement for the comfort of her children. Then Mrs. Fetz was called in and offered to take care of the children, send the older boy to school with her son, and to assume entire responsibility for the little girl. The mother, whose income is necessary for the support of her family, lives in the neighborhood, and usually when not taking on extra work, comes to Mrs. Fetz's for dinner. Sautrday and Sunday she spends with her youngsters, but during the week, she can give herself to her job, confident that her children are getting a normal family life.

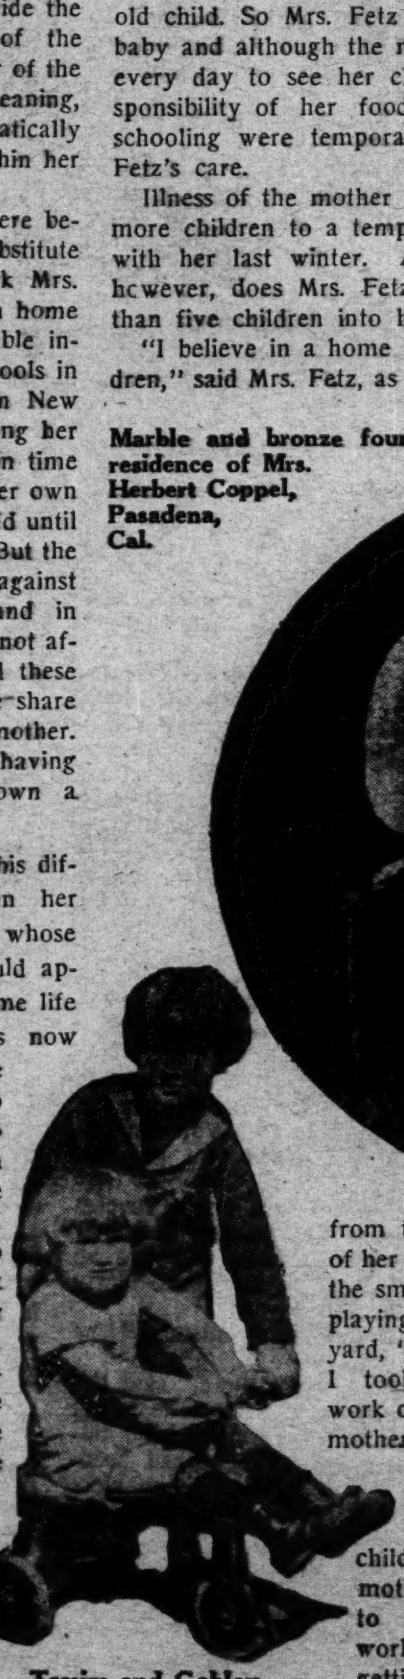
Another mother was also compelled to depend on the unintelligent care of a casual maid for the welfare of her little girl. The only solution of her problem was to let the child make her home with Mrs. Fetz. A young couple who live three-fourths of the year in the country decided to come to town for three months. A hotel life was all right for them, but not for their active, noisy four-year-old child. So Mrs. Fetz took in the baby and although the mother came every day to see her child, the responsibility of her food, play and schooling were temporarily in Mrs. Fetz's care.

Illness of the mother brought two more children to a temporary home with her last winter. At no time, however, does Mrs. Fetz take more than five children into her home.

"I believe in a home life for children," said Mrs. Fetz, as she watched from the window of her living room the small children playing in the yard, "and I think I took up this work of substitute mother more for the sake of giving a home to children whose mothers have to go out to work than of getting an income for myself. I know every intelligent mother enjoys the contact with her child, but so many must for economic reasons be deprived of it. And as I think it's almost as easy to take care of five children as of two, and my husband agreeing with me, I decided on this particular job. I am at home all day, I get the older ones off to school, I plan the playtime of the little ones, and I try to do everything for my temporary family that their own mothers would do."

Within a year, Mrs. Fetz expects to carry her plan even further. She has taken a few children to the country for the summer months, but Mr. and Mrs. Fetz are building a house in the country where they will live permanently. There will be room for fifteen children who will become part of the family and lead the normal family life. Mothers who work will have first opportunity to enroll their children; in fact, it is in order to give these children a home life that the new house is being built. There will be a farm manager who will work with the children in the care of their own special pets, a truck farmer to help them develop their gardens, a tutor for the more academic work, a carpenter for the carpenter shop, and a full, complete life for every child fortunate enough to be welcomed into the Fetz home. And so, out of the sympathy for the trials of the mother who must work, has come one of the satisfactory substitutes for the usual home life!

Marble and bronze fountain in the residence of Mrs. Herbert Coppel, Pasadena, Cal.



Tessim and Gohlov.

NOT all mothers are as fortunate as the friends of Mrs. Fetz! Madame Marie Apel, a sculptress as well-known in England as in this country, came to these United States about ten years ago and brought with her her only child, a daughter of seven. At home in England Mrs. Apel had made quite a reputation for herself in her chosen work; she had made garden decorations for Lady Cheylesmore, the Duke of Connaught, and other members of the Royal Family. But nevertheless she decided there was a place for her on this side of the Atlantic and made the journey across.

Here life was a little more complicated than at home. In London, Mrs. Apel had made her home with her mother, who had taken over the supervision of the home and of the little daughter. But in her studio in Washington Square, Mrs. Apel realized that she was alone, without family or friends, and her future was dependent on her talent.

It was so necessary that Mrs. Apel concentrate on her work and therefore so difficult to give her child the companionship and care the wee lassie needed, that the only solution was boarding school. So the young mother, because she thought her child had a right to a happy life of her own, sent her child away from her that she might the better be able to provide for her.

Success came very quickly. There are many pieces of work from California to New York, north and south, from the studio of Mrs. Apel. Perhaps you have seen some of her work; the head of Guynemer, the famous French aviators who fell in the World War. Or perhaps one of the fountains Marie Apel has fashioned for some of the beautiful estates in this country?

NOW, the young daughter is seventeen, boarding school days are over and little Miss Apel expects to make up for those years when work and school separated her from her mother. And to Marie Apel, the happiest time of her life is at hand, for she has success and the companionship of the little girl for whose welfare she is planning and hoping so much.

Still another mother, also an artist whose children have had a determining force in her life, is Marguerite Zorach. Mrs. Zorach was a successful artist of the modern school long before her marriage and confidently expected to be able to continue her painting after her marriage. But the advent of Tessim and Gohlov made a change in her plan.

"It wasn't difficult when they were babies," explained Mrs. Zorach, "to paint in the studio, but when they began to walk, and to become interested in their surroundings, and curious, I had to watch them continually. Every mother knows what it means to have an eager toddler under foot. Painting, I found, took so much concentration, that I couldn't have the babies with me. So in order to take care of them, I temporarily put aside this part of my work and instead began making the modern hooked rug."

These hooked rugs of Mrs. Zorach are works of art. First a pattern is made, a scene, a fantasy, in fact, the result is as varied and as decorative as a painting. But the method is the old-fashioned rug hooking, so popular a few centuries ago.

Only an artist could produce the completely satisfactory hooked rug exhibited by Mrs. Zorach. Not only does it express beauty as well as a practical service, but by way of this revived art, Mrs. Zorach was able to keep up her work in the company of her children. Which was the solution of a difficult problem!

Now, of course, the children are of school age and Mrs. Zorach has more leisure and freedom to take up again the painting which she had to put aside when her babies were young and needed her. But fortunately for those who appreciate the decorative beauty of a Zorach hooked rug, there was a time when Mrs. Zorach put aside her palette and canvas because they took too much of her time and turned to the making of rugs.

Those stories of mothers who have the double life by choice or necessity that have never had the publicity of publication are sometimes the most tragic. The dramatic details of some confessions that have come my way have been too intimate to give out to the public, no matter how sympathetic an audience it may be. But the experiences of these mothers who shall be unnamed are worthy of the interest of those who are conscious of the variety of problems the modern woman must face.

One young woman, an art student in New York City, had a splendid future before her. She married a fellow student instead of going abroad and though the most complete companionship was the result of this union, neither was practical enough to provide a definite income. Soon a little daughter was born to them, the father got a job teaching, but in order to make both ends meet, they were compelled to move to the suburbs where rent and living were so much lower than in the city.

Naturally the upkeep of the home was the wife's responsibility, but despite her daily household duties, she managed to get an hour or two to paint. But she couldn't afford to go to town!

Kurt and Sigrid Fetz.

The year the little boy was born, the daughter was a victim of infantile paralysis and as a result, was bedridden for two years. The family income never quite covered the needs of the family and now there were doctors' bills to meet. Of those days Mrs. M— says: :

"I often scrubbed the floors with my tears."

With an invalid child and a young baby it was not easy for Mrs. M— to find time to paint, but she did. Her future, the future of the family, she seemed to feel, depended on her ability to keep up her work. The husband had to keep his nose to the grindstone to provide a small income.

BUT the luck did change. Some friends gave the use of their studio for an exhibit. A wealthy woman, conscious of the quality of the mural decoration and designs by this young artist, who for seven years had been almost isolated and limited by the demands of her family and the lack of money for even materials, gave an order for a set of panels that meant success for the young mother.

Marie Apel, noted New York sculptress, is shown with her finished memorial, to be erected in Washington, D. C., to the members of the Air Service. The finished memorial will be 30 feet high. This is the small working model.

Since that day, success has come to her. The young daughter, after a series of operations, is able to walk with but the slightest limp, the son is a fine young boy and the whole family has pulled through the darkest period of its existence because the mother, though depressed by poverty and ilness, managed, nevertheless, to carry on her art work which eventually was the lever by which the little family took its place in the sun.

Another instance of mother perseverance concerns a young actress who had achieved some popularity on the stage before her marriage. The arrival of her children, a boy and a girl, within three years, cut short her career and made a thorough-going homebody of her. The husband, in the meantime, was continuing on the stage and was providing a comfortable though not luxurious living for his family. Needless to add, there was not enough surplus after doctor bills were paid to put away for that rainy day that inevitably comes.

A serious illness forced the father into a hospital, where he was compelled to stay for more than three years. The mother could not think of going back to the stage, for such work would take her away from the city and home. So she, untrained, learned to type, to make costumes, to do any kind of work that would enable her to stay at home with her babies.

She managed to support them through those dark days. Her husband was taken from the hospital by his parents who took him home so that he might have the care which his wife, handicapped by the problem of making a living, was unable to give him. The wife began to get better paying work, the husband to improve. Her experience in the theater and her contact with the executive end of producing eventually fitted her for a responsible position in the office of a producer. Such a position now gives her a comfortable salary, her children are happy, and the family looks forward to the day when father, completely recovered from illness, will be able to join them again.

Mothers seem to have that happy faculty of coming through difficulty into happiness. No easy job is it, to manage a home and a job, and those women who have made good on both contracts, deserve the respect and admiration of those women who have been guarded from financial worry and have lived free from the worry and strain that hangs over the business woman who also mother's a brood.

Cooling the Scorching

How Science Is Succeeding in Making Life in the Almost Waterless Wastes of America's Hottest Desert More Endurable for the Men Who Work Its Rich Mines.

THE idea of cooling the scorching air of a desert by artificial means is surely one of the most novel imaginable. Yet the thing is even now being done.

It has been made a practical success in the dryest and hottest desert in the United States—the frightful waste in southern California which bears the gruesome name of Death Valley.

Not that any attempt is being made to cool the entire valley, of course. That would be altogether impossible. What is being done is to chill and humidify the dry, hot air in various localities, so as to render it possible for human beings to live there with a fair degree of comfort.

In former days Death Valley was inhabited only by a few Indians; at the present time it has a population of more than 500, drawn thither by extra high wages to work in the borax mines or to pursue activities in connection with the mines.

On account of the terrific heat, the miners can work only during the earliest hours of the day and after sunset. The temperature often rises above 120 degrees in the shade, and the weather bureau observing station, established there in 1911, took note of 134 degrees on July 10, 1913, as recorded by a thermometer in a ventilated wooden shelter. In lower parts of the valley the heat is presumbly greater.

The valley is a vast "sink," the whole of it below sea level. Its deepest point, 276 feet below the level of the sea, is the lowest to be found anywhere in the United States. Yet that point is only eighty miles from Mount Whitney, the highest mountain in this country.

The borax mining company has accomplished a miracle by reclaiming a tract of sixty-five acres in the midst of this dreadful desert, the water for irrigation being obtained from warm springs in the mountains. These springs maintain throughout the year the flow of a small stream which drops into a depression where the air is as hot as the blast from a furnace. For this reason the stream is called Furnace Creek.

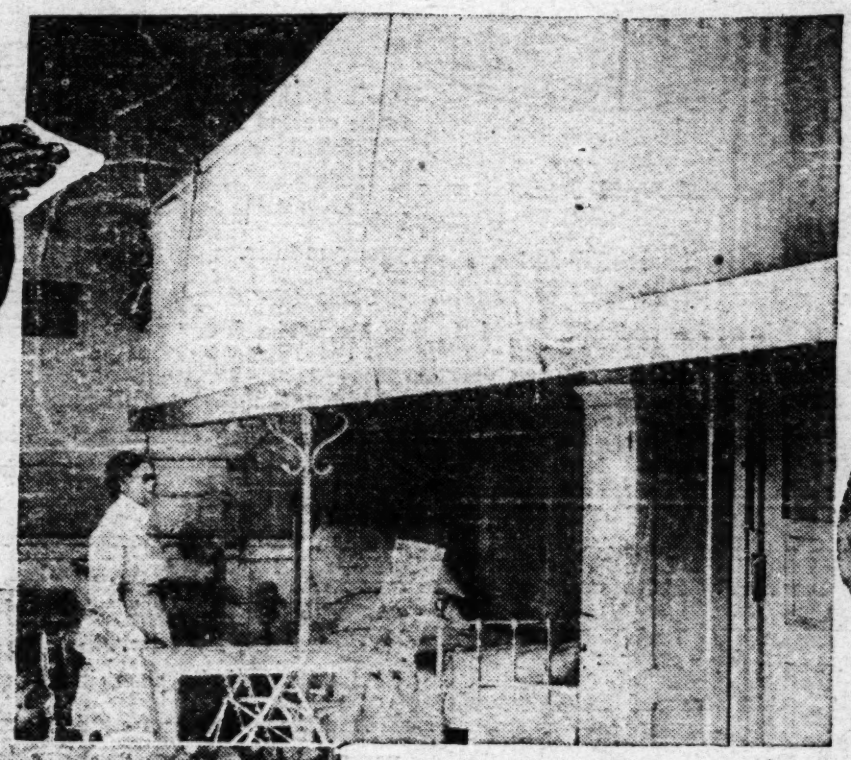
THE water used for irrigation issues from the ground at a temperature of 100 degrees, and, owing to the extreme dryness of the atmosphere, half of it evaporates before it reaches the cultivated fields of the Greenland ranch, as the borax mining station, with its big farm, is called. The name is not inappropriate, because fields, planted mainly with alfalfa, make the ranch a huge patch of vivid green on the brown desert. The warm water is good for the alfalfa, which yields four crops a year.

The mining station consists mostly of bunk houses, eating quarters, kitchens, rest rooms, pool rooms and offices. Cattle and poultry are raised for meat, and the farm also produces vegetables, dates, oranges, lemons and grapefruit. The place serves incidentally as a rescue station for occasional travelers. It has saved the life of many a lost wayfarer or prospector who has staggered in with parched throat and speechless, swollen tongue.

Although, under such conditions, it is possible for men to live in Death Valley, they suffer dreadfully from the almost intolerable heat. There is almost no moisture in the air, and for this reason evaporation is so rapid that one feels thirsty all the time. One may drink gallons of water and yet want more. Bodies of people who have perished of thirst in that most dreadful of deserts do not decay; they dry up into natural mummies.

The first suggestion of a means whereby life at the mining station might be rendered more endurable was derived from an ingenious contraption invented by a foreman named Denton. He rigged an overshot water wheel that drove a revolving fan in front of which he hung a wetted blanket. Along side the blanket he slept, and the rapid evaporation of moisture

The "chuckwalla," one of many varieties of the lizard family which thrive in the torrid heat of Death Valley. This variety is notable because its flesh makes an excellent food.



A hospital room cooled by the evaporation of the moisture from the expanse of sheeting on which cold water drips continually from a perforated pipe. This is the same method now being used on an immensely larger scale to make Death Valley a more comfortable place from the blanket kept him delightfully cool during the night hours.

A woodsman's iceless refrigerator. Through a hole in the bottom of the can water drips on the burlap covering of the refrigerator and the interior of the latter is kept cool by the evaporation of moisture from the burlap.

Upon the same fundamental principle is based the huge and elaborate mechanical apparatus which the borax company has newly installed at the station, for cleansing, cooling and humidifying the air of the various buildings and also—the thing that seems really marvelous, and which never before was attempted—the atmosphere of the grounds surrounding the station.

FOR this purpose is used an "air washer," which is a large cubical chamber provided with some hundreds of spray nozzles, the latter distributed in rows one above another on the interior walls of the box-like structure.

The dry desert air, drawn into this chamber, comes into contact with a water spray that fills the chamber with moisture so minutely atomized as to form a mist. It is as if a big room were filled with a cloud-stuff of such density that a person standing on one side of it cannot see the opposite wall, or, indeed, his own hand out-stretched.

By this means the air is laden with as much moisture as it can possibly carry; and thereupon it is blown out of the chamber by nine powerful multi-blade fans, being discharged through pipes of large diameter directly into the various buildings, and escaping therefrom into the open.

The air thus humidified has not only the effect of contributing moisture to the atmosphere inside the buildings and outside in their near neighborhood. Its moisture, evaporating, cools the atmosphere locally, just as the evaporation of water from Foreman Denton's blanket made coolness for him while he slept. In both cases the heat required to accomplish evaporation is extracted from the air, whereby the coolness is obtained.

The hotter the air, the more rapid is the process of evaporation. Hence, at Greenland ranch, the apparatus gives the greatest cooling on the hottest days—that is to say, at just the times when the relief is most needed.

Human beings, in cold climates, have always had to protect themselves against cold. The idea of defense against heat is new, though perhaps not less important. Within recent years it has been seriously taken up, and already much attention is being given to what is called the "conditioning" of the air of public buildings, auditoriums, hotels and many factories.

This means the regulation of temperature and humidity for comfort and health, the air, as it enters from outdoors, being "washed" and moistened by sprays in dry weather, cooled in the summer time by passing it over ammonia coils, or heated in winter by steam coils. Steam-driven fans furnish the requisite current.

In various industries, such as cotton spinning, candy making and the manufacture of photographic films, it is essential that the air shall be just right in respect to temperature and humidity. Problems of this kind are now engaging much attention at the laboratory of the Bureau of Mines in Pittsburgh, the work being done in cooperation with the American Association of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

THE immense "sink" called Death Valley, lying between two ranges of mountains 11,000 feet high, was in ancient times a lake. With gradual failure of rainfall—nowadays six months often pass without a drop of rain—the lake shrank and the mineral salts with which its waters were laden (originally derived from the rocks of the mountains) became highly concentrated. Finally it dried up, leaving the salts behind.

Borax, in the form of borate of soda, is found in beds 100 feet thick in some places. Along the sides of the valley are enormous deposits of magnesium salts, so clean and white that they look like drifted snow. Though exposed for ages, they have not dissolved, owing to the dryness of the air.

These salts the borax company now proposes to attack by hydraulic means. A reservoir, built at high level in the Funeral mountains, will hold the requisite water. This will be piped down into the valley and discharged in powerful streams against the banks of salts, washing the stuff into sluices and thence into settling tanks.

Inasmuch as the salts dissolve much faster in hot water, the latter is to be provided by great solar heaters —apparatus that will employ the heat of the sun for the production of high temperatures.

A view of Ryan, one of Death Valley's mining settlements where science is applying for the first time on so large a scale the well-known principle that air is cooled by the evaporation of water.

A grim reminder of the many travelers who have met death in the burning sands of this California desert.

Death Valley is about 150 miles long and ten to thirty-five miles wide. The lofty mountains that form its walls are wholly bare of vegetation.

Rattlesnakes are more plentiful in this valley than anywhere else in the world—especially the "horned" rattlers, otherwise known as "side winders" because, when seeking to escape, they move away sidewise. The "tiger" rattlesnake, also numerous, is three and a half feet long.

There are millions of horned toads (really a kind of lizard), and desert toads that spend a year or two in solid ground, baked in, as it were. When rain comes, they crawl out.

The "chuckwalla" lizard, a foot long and fat, is good to eat. Another species of lizard, the "gridiron-tail," runs with amazing swiftness. No horse or dog can keep up with it. It starts at full speed and stops with equal suddenness, thus eluding hawks, coyotes and other foes.

The "whiptail" lizard, clad in armor plates and resembling a dinosaur in miniature, feeds on insects and travels like a streak of greased lightning.

Death Valley, although such an abode of desolation, is beginning to be appreciated for its wonderful scenery. It is only 280 miles from Los Angeles, and automobiles have made it accessible. Two airplanes skimmed over it the other day. The valley is brilliant with color, and mirages and dust storms add to its weird interest.

Our deserts seem destined to become the great open air breathing places of the future. Their scenery is gorgeous, the atmosphere perfectly clear, with everlasting sunshine and no suspended moisture in the air to diminish the brightness and color effects. The automobile has brought them within reach. In a motor car one may travel 200 miles a day in any direction one chooses, over a country so flat and smooth that roads are almost unnecessary.

The climate of Death Valley is altogether agreeable, and even delightful, in winter, and it is likely to become a favorite resort at that season of the year for tourists and auto campers. Numerous sign posts mark the routes and water holes, so that nobody need fear going astray or dying of thirst.

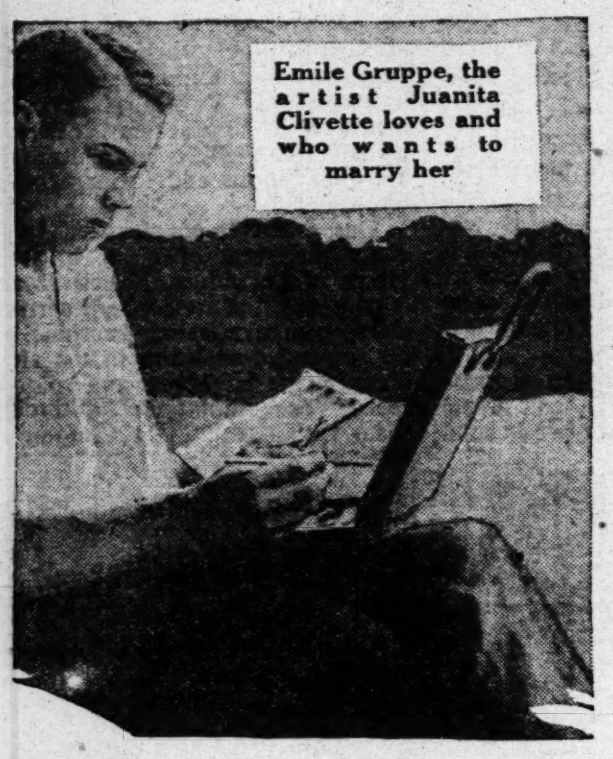
Must the Modern Sappho Also L

Curiously Troubled Roman Who Is Being Made Unh Way From the Ill-Fate Whose Reincarnati



Emile Gruppe, the artist Juanita Clivette loves and who wants to marry her

SAPPHO, the poetess, was one of the most fascinating figures of ancient Greece. The fiery love poems she wrote are still read and admired as examples of lyric art at its best.

Juanita Clivette is the pretty young New York girl who astonished the world in her early girlhood by declaring herself the reincarnation of the ancient Greek poetess. And she supported her claim to being Sappho reborn by producing a great number of poems which critics pronounced as admirable as any the original Sappho ever wrote.

Juanita's parents, after they recovered from their surprise at having brought into the world a little girl whose soul and mind are said to hark back twenty centuries for their inspiration, were quite delighted with the distinction of having such a child.

As she grew older they enjoyed more and more the praise her poems received and the eagerness with which grave college professors and members of literary clubs hung on her words. They hoped and expected that she would keep right on devoting herself to the making of verses.

But, as every student of Greek literature knows, the ancient Sappho had other passions besides the composing of lyrics. She fell in love with Phaon, a handsome and charming young Greek, and when she found that her love was not returned, she was so broken hearted that she flung herself into the sea and was drowned.

WHAT more natural than that the reincarnation of the ancient Greek poetess, the charming "Little Sappho" of New York's Greenwich Village, should also fall in love?

That is exactly what the modern Sappho began doing at an early age—an age when most girls know nothing more serious than the puppy love of dancing school beaux. First it was a well known New York lawyer she wanted for a husband. Then it was a famous portrait painter, then a rich banker, then a dashing naval officer.

Juanita's parents did not like this at all. They were quite willing for their pretty and talented daughter to live out the literary side of the ancient Sappho's life, but when it came to following out the romantic side of her career—no, No, NEVER—or, at least not for years and years.

Mr. and Mrs. Clivette—and particularly the latter—set themselves sternly against each of these romances. Without doing any lasting damage to the girl's heart they succeeded in convincing her that none of these eager suitors was the Phaon for whom fate had destined her.

"Wait, my child," counseled Mrs. Clivette. "You are only seventeen and even a reincarnated Sappho should not think of marrying at that age. Keep right on with your verses—but don't think you must have any real man to inspire them.

But within the last few weeks there has come into Juanita Clivette's life a romance which her mother found it impossible to nip in the bud as she had the previous ones and which, to her great dismay, threatens to flower into marriage.

Its hero is Emile Gruppe, the artist son of an artist father. The latter, Charles Gruppe, had painted a portrait of Juanita. But if you guess that the younger Gruppe fell in love with the portrait as young men so often do in the story books you have guessed wrong. He felt only a cold technical admiration for his father's picture and not the slightest interest in the original.

A few days later, however, when he faced Juanita Clivette across the tea table in an artist's studio, he felt that his father's brush, for once in its long and rather notable career, had failed to do anything like justice to a surpassing specimen of girlish beauty.

If the cup of tea Juanita poured for him had been some mystic Oriental love potion he could not have fallen more quickly and deeply in love with her. He instantly forgot all about the other girl to whom he was almost engaged and whom he had half promised to take to the theater that very night.

AS for Juanita, she has since confessed that when she laid eyes on Emile Gruppe she realized what spurious imitations of the real Phaon for whom her heart yearned all her previous lovers had been, and that here at last was the real thing.

Before that studio tea was over a note had been dispatched to Mrs. Clivette, waiting at the Waldorf, saying that her daughter would be unable to dine with her as planned. Juanita and Emile Gruppe had dinner together, went to the theater, supped and danced after the show. Long after 1 a. m. they burst in on Mama Clivette with the announcement that they were engaged and would be married within the next few days.

"Never!" cried the modern Sappho's mother with temperamental stamps of her foot and shakes of her auburn head. "You are too young to marry anybody—even a reincarnated Phaon."

"Absurd!" retorted the modern Sappho. "What is age to me who am eternal? I am an individual and have a right to marry whom I please."

Unfortunately for the lovers, the laws of the State of New York are on the side of Mama Clivette, for Sappho, although she claims to have existed some 2,000 years will not be of age for five months, and cannot legally contract a marriage without her parents' permission. This, her mother says she shall never have.

"Juanita is too young to marry anybody," Mrs. Clivette maintains. "And then there is her wonderful gift. Poetry has always meant more to her than anything. I am afraid that if she marries she will submerge her personality and gifts in those of her husband. He is an artist, you know, and artists—as who should know better than I—are difficult!"

The Sappho of ancient Greece as pictured in the celebrated painting by Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema.

"Ah, but poetry and painting are so closely allied," Sappho sighs. "That is why Emile and I are so sympathetic. He will illustrate my poems and I will title all his pictures."

Since falling in love with Emile Gruppe the poetess has been inspired to write several poems to him— something she never did with any of her previous lovers. One reads like this:

YARNS OF THE BIG WOODS

By Art Childs

An Old Legend

(Up in the great lonesome woods of the North the old guides have made up many yarns which they tell over and over to the tenderfoot from the cities—their own way of explaining the strange tracks and weird noises. Mr. Childs, who used to be a game warden in the woods of northern Wisconsin, collected these stories himself from the "oldtimers.")

"Old White Deer, that Indian chief that came into camp one day to confab with me, says his grandfather could remember very well the days when the bears in these parts had beautiful, long, bushy tails," declared the Old Guide thoughtfully. He was seated comfortably on the ground, his back against a tree trunk cleaning his gun.

"I certainly never heard about any bears that had long, beautiful, bushy tails," declared Sonny, who was stretched out full length at the feet of Snowshoe Bill, the Old Guide.

"Oh, I'd heard tell of it," declared the Old Guide, in an off-hand sort of manner, "but I never got the straight of it before."

"Well, what is the straight of it?" asked Sonny, swallowing the hook.

"The bears wore their tails clean off, that's what they did," related Snowshoe Bill. "One nice sunny afternoon after a heavy shower a bunch of young bears were going up a steep, muddy hill hereabouts when one of them happened to slip. He lost his balance altogether, and away he slid down the hill, plumb to the bottom.

"Well, sir, that bear had never had such fun in his life. While his friends were feeling sorry for him, he climbed back up that hill, sat down, took hold of his hind feet, and slid down again.

"The others thought he was crazy, but one of the bravest ones decided he'd try the trick, too, and away he went down the hill after his friend.

"The rest of the young bears saw that they must be missing some sport, so they joined in, and pretty soon the whole bunch was sliding down the hill, again and again.

"They kept on until they wore their tails clear off, and ever since then there haven't been any bears with tails."

Kathie Manages

"I do wish Mr. Smithers would go home," sighed Elsa as she glanced downstairs and saw that the visitor's hat still lay on the settee in the hallway.

"He's such a bore," agreed her brother, "and poor mother is too polite to get rid of him. She promised to make us some popcorn balls when we were through studying, and now we're all through and he's still there, and what'll we do about it?"

Their pretty widowed mother was a great problem to the twins. They felt a very protective air toward her, and especially felt it their duty to discourage boring visitors.

Kathie, the little tortoise kitten curled up sleepily against Elsa, blinked sympathetically. She did wish she could do something to help the twins get rid of the longwinded man downstairs.

The twins, having finished their studies, started to do a crossword puzzle together. Kathie wandered off downstairs by herself, looking for something to play with.

She hopped upon the settee in the hall, her favorite place for a cozy nap. But she could not find her favorite cushion. There seemed to be something on top of it. She walked around on top of the settee, waving her little tail disapprovingly. Then she ran into something hard and round which slid to the floor. Kathie hopped off to see what that new plaything could be.

She found it a very nice plaything, indeed. It was something that could be rolled about. She had great fun making little rushes at it and sending it tumbling. So absorbed was she that she did not realize what had happened when suddenly everything became dark. Something was on top of her, stifling her. She started running in circles, and making frantic dashes.

It was one of these dashes which brought Kathie in full sight of the living room. "My hat!" cried a man's voice. "What—what—" then he caught sight of Kathie's tail. "Those children have done this!" he cried angrily. "The way you let them play tricks, and—"

The twins' mother got up with dignity. "I can manage my children very well," she said, and somehow, the man found himself going home

"Nice Kathie!" said Elsa, as she munched popcorn. "It's so nice of you to save us the trouble of doing a trick like that, though we'll never, never be able to convince mother we didn't."

Magic Hatrack

You can mystify your friends with this easy trick, for which all you need is a lead pencil and a hat.

Take a smooth hexagon (that means six-sided) lead pencil and cut the rubber or metal end from it. Place it against a door or window casing. Then, with a firm, heavy pressure, slide the pencil three or four inches and it will stick to the casing as though glued there. You will be able to hang your hat on it easily.

When you slide the pencil along the casing, do so without any apparent effort and it will appear as though you had hypnotized the pencil.

When you are ready to take the pencil down, grasp it so that your fingers slide under its sides and you will have no trouble in taking it from the window or door casing.

A SPOTTED DOG

(A true detective story which a veteran detective tells especially for this page.)

Once a little spotted dog helped solve a big stolen jewels mystery—but of course he didn't know the important part he was playing. He'd played other parts, though, but—well, this is the story.

A famous actress—I'll call her Miss Alan, but that isn't her real name—stepped out of a cab in State street, Chicago, a few years ago, and as she did so a handbag slipped from her lap, unnoticed, and dropped into the gutter. She entered a hairdresser's, and the cab moved away.

Two young women, one leading a small, spotted dog on a chain, were passing. They saw the bag fall, and when the cab moved away one of the girls picked up the bag. She went into the hairdresser's with the bag, while the other girl waited outside, amusing herself by making the dog sit up and beg and do other tricks. Then the other girl came out, as though she had left the bag, and away they strolled.

Shortly afterwards Miss Alan discovered that her bag was missing and the detective bureau was set on the trail.

The only clue was that a man had seen the girls and the bag, just as described. He didn't remember what they looked like, but he did remember the clever little dog.

The detective in charge figured that if the dog was as clever as the man said, he might very well be part of an animal act in a vaudeville show, so he set his detectives to "cover" all places in the city where theatrical people were usually found.

Miss Alan had offered a thousand dollars reward for her jewels, so people were on the lookout. In a few days a man called up and said a young fellow he knew only slightly had that day tried to sell him a necklace which seemed like one of those Miss Alan said she lost. A detective soon found the young fellow, searched his rooms, and found part of the missing jewels.

The young man confessed that the jewels had been given him by a girl friend to sell for her. He said she was a vaudeville performer—part owner of a trained animal act—but had left town the day before and he didn't know where she could be reached.

Detectives found the place the young lady had lived in and discovered that her trunks had been expressed to Cincinnati.

Here again the spotted dog helped. Detectives in Cincinnati were phoned, and when the dog came off the train they arrested the girl who led him, and found the rest of the jewels.

Her Unlucky Day

"Friday the thirteenth." That's what Lucille saw on her desk calendar when first she woke up. Lucille, who believed in all sorts of signs, blinked, looked again, and then shivered with dread. "I'd just like to roll right back into bed and stay there all day," wailed Lucille. "Something trerible always happens to me on Friday the thirteenth. I just feel it in my bones that something awful is going to take place."

"Lucille!" her mother's voice called again from downstairs, and Lucille began hurriedly searching for a clean blouse to wear to school.

"You have one stocking on inside out," exclaimed her mother, as Lucille came down to breakfast.

"Good gracious!" cried Lucille. "I know that's some sort of horrible sign. What a terrible way to start the morning." She quickly changed the stocking and dashed off to school.

She was running along the street, about a block from school, when suddenly she saw a big black cat coming along the north and south street. Lucille was going east and west, which meant that about the time she reached the corner the cat would cross her path.

"I can't let that happen," decided Lucille. "I would have bad luck then for sure." As she approached the cat she yelled, "Scat!" The big cat took no notice, however, but walked straight ahead with great dignity. "It's going to cross my path. What will I do?"

She could think of only one thing to do. She must run to the corner before the cat reached it. So she started to run very fast. When the cat saw her running he began to run, too—but in the direction he had been going. Lucille saw that he would reach the corner first, so she started running parallel to head him off. Running like this, she chased along for nearly a block out of the direction she wanted to go. Finally she managed to "shoo" the cat back without his crossing her path.

As she stopped to get her breath she noticed that in her frantic running she had passed right under a ladder out over the sidewalk! She gasped with horror—and then she glanced at her watch. "Late for school now!" moaned Lucille. "I just knew Friday the thirteenth meant bad luck."

"SECRET OF SLOW BALL IN SPRINGING SURPRISE"

—AL DEMAREE

This is the last of a series of inside tips on playing baseball by Al Demaree, formerly a pitcher for the New York Giants. Mr. Demaree tells how to throw slow balls today—and shows you exactly how it's done with illustrations he made himself.

WHIFF!

After striking at several exceedingly fast balls and fouling a couple of them, the batter has been served a slow ball—one that seemed to float up to the plate—and he is walking back to the dugout wondering what caused him to miss it.

SURPRISE — that's the whole secret of the slow ball. It is used most effectively after the pitcher has thrown a number of fast balls and the batter's eye is looking for speed.

Ball Doesn't Revolve

The slow ball is one that is thrown so that it does not revolve. This is accomplished by raising the fingers at the moment the ball is released from the hand, thus giving it no chance to roll.

Very little wrist motion is used—it is more like a "pushed" ball than a thrown ball, but part of its success depends on its being thrown with the same delivery as any other ball.

Slow balls may be held in a number of ways, chief among them being with the palm, forked fingers and knuckles.

Raise Fingers Slightly

When thrown with the palm, the ball is held in the palm of the hand with the fingers extended around it. As it leaves the hand the fingers are raised slightly to keep the ball from revolving.

The slow ball thrown with forked fingers is difficult to use unless the hand is large. It is held in the fork between the first and second fingers and must be gripped tightly to be thrown effectively.

Knuckle Ball Is Favorite

The knuckle ball is a favorite among boys, and league players, too, for that matter. It is held with the ball against the palm and knuckles of the first two fingers, the thumb being lower and well around it. Like the others, it is thrown with an overhand motion.

Before trying to throw a slow ball, spend some time in learning to hold it correctly and in swinging the arm with it. Make sure that you can grip the ball tightly, whichever method you use.

Practice Throwing

Then practice throwing—slowly at first—and with increasing speed as you master the knack of the throw.

Such pitchers as Eddie Rommell make use of the slow ball to good advantage, but with them, too, it is effective as part of a surprise attack.

But above all, deliver the ball in the same manner as you would any other. This will keep the opposing batter from guessing what you will throw by noting a change in your method of delivery.

"The biggest piece of advice I can give any boy learning to play ball is this: don't be discouraged," says Al Demaree. Then he adds, with a chuckle, "I was released once, when I was first starting out in baseball, from a small southern club, because they said I was too slow for their league. But I kept right at the pitching game, because I'd made up my mind I was going to show them I wasn't too slow for the big league."

The Guilty One

"I can't understand what has got into Carlos," declared Edward. "He used to be the most obedient dog you ever saw. He seemed to understand everything I said. It used to be that when I told him to stay in the house he'd stay. But twice lately he's broken through the screen door and gone out on the porch."

"I'm afraid we may have to get rid of him if he won't stay in the house," sighed Mrs. Grayling. "He's too valuable a dog to be running out without any one to watch him, especially when there's so much traffic on the boulevard. I am thinking very strongly of sending him down to Aunt Clare for the summer."

"If only he'd mind, and stay where he's put," protested Edward.

"But he doesn't, any more," answered his mother.

Edward had a long talk with the big airedale, who looked up into his eyes so intelligently. "Look here, old fellow," he insisted, "when I go away and leave you inside you're to stay there, do you see? No more dashing through screen doors. I don't know what we're going to do about this. Whipping you when we find you outside doesn't seem to do a bit of good."

Carlos wagged his tail as if to assure him that he really meant to turn over a new leaf.

But the very next afternoon they found him on the porch again, and the hook on the screen door pulled out.

"That settles it," declared Mrs. Grayling. "I shall write to Aunt Clare at once that we're sending Carlos to her."

But the next afternoon Edward came home from school and came in the back way, because his shoes were muddy. He could hear Carlos' tail going thump-thump on the floor in the living room. Then suddenly he heard a shrill voice shouting, "Carlos, Carlos!" The voice came from the porch.

Edward ran in, just as Carlos made for the door. "So you're the cause of the trouble," said Edward severely to Madame Poll Parrot, who was left on the porch every sunny afternoon. "And here we've been putting the blame on poor Carlos, who was really trying to mind, after all."

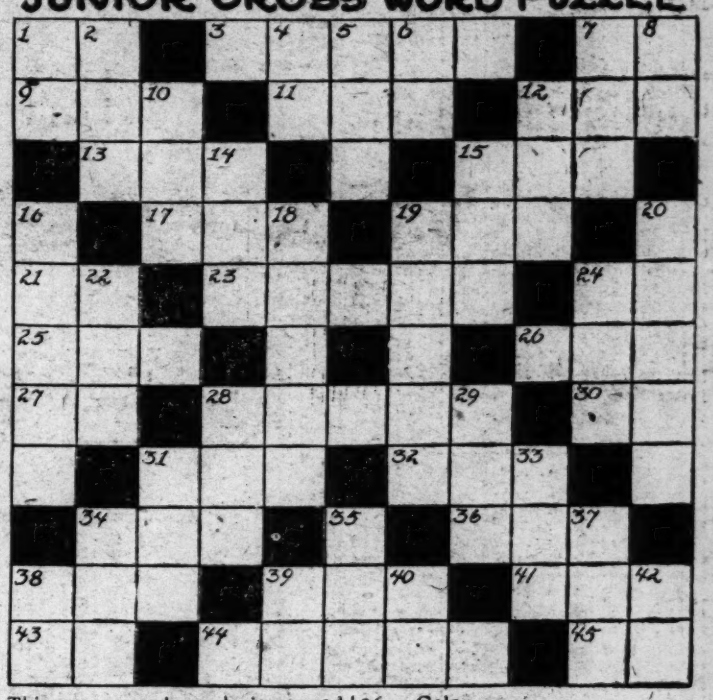
JUNIOR CROSS WORD PUZZLE



This cross word puzzle is a good test of how many three-letter words you know, as they are used almost exclusively in this group.

Each white square represents a letter of a word, those that are numbered being the starting spaces of all words either horizontally (straight across) or vertically (straight down). The black spaces may be regarded as periods, as they signify the ends of the words both horizontally and vertically.

The words are defined below, and when you have guessed all the words, they will read from left to right as well as from top to bottom.

Number One Horizontal is defined as a pronoun. It has two letters. Let us try "it." We can tell if this is correct by referring to Number One Vertical, which must necessarily begin with an "i." Its definition is "within." It is certain to be "in." We can then be assured that our start is correct, and we have several clues to some of the other words.

Here are the definitions:

Horizontal

1. Pronoun.
3. Majestic, princely.
7. Mother.
9. A short sleep.
11. A snare.
12. In possession of.
13. Air.
15. Help.
17. Young boy.
19. Not new.
21. Above.
23. A test.
24. Corelative of "either."
25. A small drink.
26. Color.
27. Masculine pronoun.
28. A shallow vessel.
30. In regard to.
31. Mixture of earth and liquid.
32. Boy.
34. Article used for producing currents of air.
36. To pull vigorously.
38. A plaything.
39. A vegetable.
41. A numeral.
43. Same as Number Twenty-Four Horizontal.
44. The ground.
45. Toward.

Vertical

1. Within.
2. A label.
4. Upon.
5. Affirmative.
6. By.
7. Insane, raving.
8. Like.
10. Chum.
12. To have concealed.
14. Reposed.
15. Total.
16. Thick and spreading.
18. A wood nymph.
19. A fertile spot in a desert.
20. A color.
22. Article of food with a crust.
24. Belonging to us.
28. A biscuit.
29. Negative.
31. Permit.
33. A fruit with a hard shell.
34. Preposition.
35. Feminine possessive pronoun.
37. To procure.
38. Toward.
39. Father.
40. Same as Number Six Vertical.
42. Negative.

Game From Persia Full of Thrills

In olden times in Persia the boys and girls played a very exciting game called "Chinnabeer."

At least ten boys or girls or both are required to play this game—four for the inner circle and six for the outer. With more children, the circles are increased.

A stick is placed on the ground and surrounded by a circle of boys who are to guard it. Outside of this inner circle is another circle of boys, whose aim is to get possession of the stick.

Encircle Players

They attempt to decrease the number of boys guarding the stick. Anybody in the outer ring may encircle with his arms one or more boys of the inner ring and then run back again to his place in the outer ring. Any one thus encircled is called "dead" and cannot play.

The players in the inner ring may, in the meantime, attempt to lessen the number of their opponents by meeting them with the palms of their hands. Any one so hit is "dead" and out of the game.

One boy of the inner ring is special guard of the precious stick, and it is the duty of his teammates to see that he, also, is not touched, as he has to remain right by it.

Capture Stick

The inner circle is usually broken up first and the stick captured.

The baseball words are pitcher, foul and bat.

Then four men from the outer cir- the boys form the offense.

In case the outer circle falls first the inner circle holds the fort again for another attack.

This game is great fun when the players do not hold hands, as then they become so excited about either escaping from their opponents or capturing a new victim that they forget about guarding their circle, and the stick is captured.

A Picture Puzzle

Who Laughs Last

"Nobody is going to fool me this time," declared Jimmy. "All last April Fool's day everybody tried to catch me, but I was on my guard and there wasn't anybody got a chance to yell 'April Fool' at me. Believe me, I'm wise to all their tricks."

His mother, who had already failed in her effort to get him to "come to the window and see the runaway," smiled, but his sister looked a little grim. She was growing tired of Jimmy's endless know-it-all ways.

When Jimmy came home at noon she greeted him with her sweetest smile. "Oh, Jimmy," she said, "I just mixed up a batch of fudge as soon as I got home and it's about cool enough to eat. Would you like a piece?" She brought in the fudge, neatly cut in squares.

Jimmy backed away. "Say, that's an old one. I've been fooled on that cotton fudge before. I'm not so dumb as you seem to think."

His sister shrugged her shoulders and set the fudge away, without touching any herself, at which Jimmy looked very wise.

In the evening when he came home from school again she was waiting for him. "Oh, Jimmy," she announced, "here are a couple of movie tickets. They're comps that Mr. Brewster gave me when I stopped in his store. I'm awfully busy and I can't use them. Why don't you take some one and go tonight?"

Jimmy held his hands behind him. "You're not so good," he grinned. "That old tight-wad Mr. Brewster never gave anybody anything. Why don't you try to catch me on something else?"

Just then their mother called them to go to the store for her. They had a number of things to get which required both of them to carry. As they went along, Jimmy's foot kicked something. It was a small pocketbook.

"Oh, look!" cried his sister.

Jimmy grinned. "That old pocketbook trick!" he snorted, and strode on. "There's a string on it, of course!"

"Well," announced Jimmy that night as he and his sister started to go up to bed. "Another perfect record for me. Nobody caught me on a single April Fool joke."

"Indeed!" exclaimed his sister. "I'd like to know if anyone was ever fooled worse! In the first place, the fudge was real, and good. Mother and I ate it when I came home this evening. The movie tickets were real, too. I gave them to Alice. And as for the purse—I picked it up. There was a dollar in it. People can lose purses on April Fool's Day!"

The Letter Writers' Club

Is Your Letter or Picture on This Page? Write a Letter Real Soon and Join the "Letter Writers' Club"

Washington, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let a little Georgia girl become a member of this merry club?

I am 12 years old and in the seventh grade and go to Oak Grove school. I love my teacher. She is so sweet to me. Her name is Mrs. C. H. Jones. I love my school work and my favorite studies are history and English.

We have a large playground. Our games are mostly football and townball. Our teacher will not let boys and girls play together.

I have a little pet shepherd dog. I have taught her many tricks.

I enjoy reading The Constitution and the funny page. I think it is the best paper we have ever taken.

I am real fond of outdoor sports and especially riding horseback.

I haven't any little sisters and brothers, but I have three grown sisters and one grown brother.

I have the sweetest mother and father. What I enjoy most of all is mother reading to me at night and telling me stories of things that happened when she was a little girl.

If Mr. Waste Basket don't get my letter I will write again. Some of you kiddies write to me.

Love and best wishes to all.
MARTHA SMITH.

Decatur, Ga.—Dear Little Kiddies: I have been reading the letters of the Letter Writers' club and I like them very much. I would like to join, also.

I go to Winnona Park school. I am in the third grade and I like my teacher very much. I have a dog named Foxy. She is white all except her head and part is white and part black. If this letter does not see the waste basket I will write again soon. Please, some of you Kiddies write me.

Your sincere friend,
GRACE McKINLEY.
144 W. College Ave.

Decatur, Ga.—Dear Editor and Friends: I have been reading the letters of the Letter Writers' club and I would like to join, also.

I am 11 years old and in the fifth grade. I go to Ponce de Leon school. My teachers are very sweet.

I have two cats. They are both white with blue eyes. I have a bantam hen that will eat out of my hand.

I joined the Camp Fire girls and enjoy it very much.

If this letter doesn't see the waste basket I will write again soon. Please, some of you Kiddies write to me.

Your sincere friend,
JANE WHITE.
215 W. Howard Ave.

Fayetteville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading your letters and sure do enjoy them. I am glad when Sunday comes so I can read the letters.

I go to school at Bethany. I like to go to school. My teacher's name is Miss Aline Walker.

We play ball at school, and other games.

I am a little cripple boy. I walk to school about 3-4 of a mile.

My father carries me bad days.

I am 10 years old and in the fourth grade.

I have two dogs and two cats. My dogs' names are Spot and Corn. They are bird dogs.

I have a little wagon and like to ride.

On Sunday I go to Sunday school. I sure have a fine teacher. Her name is Miss Mattie Mae Harris.

Your little friend,
JIMMIE BOYD.
Route 2.

Fife, Ga.—Dear Friends: I have been reading the letters in The Sunday Constitution and enjoy them fine. May I join your letter writing club?

I go to Bethany school and like it fine. My teacher's name is Mr. H. D. Gober. He is a real nice teacher.

We play many games at school. We have been playing ball today. And we sure did have a good time.

We have been having tests and I have made a hundred in all of them but one.

An accident happened right near my home last Monday. As a passenger train was approaching Fife's depot the train jumped the track throwing both the engine and the tender off the track. But no one got hurt. We have to write a description on it for Thursday.

I will close hoping to see this in print. With lots of love to all.

Sincerely yours,
FALERA DAVIS.

Whitesburg, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your splendid club? I would like very much to be with you.

We take The Constitution and there's no paper half so fine. I never fail to read it, and I enjoy the boys' and girls' letters most of all.

I like outdoor sports, such as riding horses, playing basketball, and I sure do have fun.

I go to Hannah high school and, oh! it is wonderful. I study the eighth grade and I surely do love my books.

I have six big chums whom I run with. My cousin, Margie Jones, is the one I stay with most. She and I are very similar and we sure do have fun.

We ride horses together and such grand times! I just wish you boys and girls could be with us.

I will now give a short description of myself. So that if you ever see me, perhaps you may know me. But don't mistake me for Margie.

I am 15 years of age, five feet tall, weighing 102 pounds, have medium fair complexion with dark brown hair (bobbed) and brown eyes. I wonder if I shall see my letter in print? I am expecting it and hope I will not be disappointed.

Wishing to remain with you in your club and also best wishes,

Yours respectfully,
BERMA CANSLER.
Route 1.

Bristol, Tenn.—Dear Girls and Boys: I would like very much to join the Letter Writers' club. I am 10 years of age and in the sixth grade.

I tell you folks some of you boys and girls can write nice letters.

My teacher is mighty nice. Her name is Willie Childress.

I have one pet dog. His name is Bounce, and really his name suits him for he bounces all the time.

I have a brother and a sister. My brother will soon be 12 years of age. My sister was six months old the 12th of this month.

I enjoy reading The Constitution very much.

I live in the country and love it dearly because you can have fun and pleasure.

When it snows I snowball my brother. Last winter we'd sleigh ride and have lots of fun. I wish that some of you little Constitution readers would write me a letter. I love to get letters.

I hope to see this printed in The Constitution. I am,

Your unknown friend.
LUCILE CHILDRESS.
Route 2, Box 165.

Rex, Ga.—Dear Kiddies: I am a little girl 10 years of age. I have a dollie and it has got curly hair. And I have a pet kitty and a big mule. I can ride his back and catch him. I have never written to The Constitution before, or any other paper. I have been keeping up with the letter writers. We are taking the paper and I read the comic section. I go to school every day that I can.

Yours truly,
MARJORIE LEE CAMP.

Chatsworth, Ga.—Dear Kiddies: We have been taking The Constitution for several years and since the Letter Writers' club has been organized I want to join.

I go to school every day. I go to Chatsworth high school. I have six studies and I like arithmetic best. I have a very good teacher and he is very kind to me. His name is Mr. Earl C. Foster.

I have been taking music four years now and am still taking. I have been taking from one teacher all the time. Her name is Miss Beulah Naine, and she is a very sweet teacher.

I have dozens of friends, but I have two very sweet ones. Their names are Bonnie Grace Gordon and Myrtle White. Bonnie is in the seventh grade and Myrtle is in the eighth.

I will now tell you how I look. I have light blue eyes, dark brown hair, fair complexion, five feet tall, and am in the seventh grade, and 13 years old and weigh 125 pounds. I am larger than my mother.

My friends and I play basketball and many other games at school. I take my lunch and get out at 3:15.

I have one little sister. She is 9 years old and her name is Louise. She is in the fourth grade and takes music. My daddy is clerk of superior court of Murry county. He was elected in November, 1924.

I am hoping the editor will publish my letter, and some one will write to me.

Sincerely,
IRENE CHAMBERS.
Box 25.

Arlington, Ga—My Dear Editor: I read the young folks' section of the Sunday Constitution magazine every Sunday. I enjoy reading the letters that the girls and boys write, so I want to join the Letter Writers' club.

I am 11 years old and in the sixth grade. I have a mighty sweet teacher. Her name is Mrs. Grant. We are studying the history of our own state. The chief game we play is horse shoes.

I would enjoy it if some of the boys and girls would write to me.

I have a little nephew living with me. His name is Donald Starr, Jr. He is eight years old and in the third grade. He and I take piano. We are learning rapidly. We both have a box of tinker-toys. We build things every night. My daddy is a preacher.

I hope this letter is printed.

Your friend,
O. L. KELLEY.

Acworth, Ga.—Dear Editor and Friends: I have been reading the Boys' and Girls' section every week and thought I would join it, too.

I am 11 years old and in the fifth grade at school.

I have my big doll that I won out of The Constitution. I sure do have a good time playing with her in my playhouse.

I have a collie dog. It's name is Snooks. I have a good time playing with it, too.

I hope my letter will be printed for I want to join your club.

Your friend,
MATTIE LOU CHEATHAM.

Fairmount, Ga.—Dear Unknown Friends: I hope you will welcome a Georgia girl into your letter writing club. I enjoy reading the funny paper. I always try to be the first to get the magazine section and the funny paper. I also enjoy working the cross word puzzle and reading the riddles.

I attend the Fairmount high school. I am the oldest child. I am 14 years old and am in the 7th grade. I have a very nice teacher. Her name is Miss Vernn Ray.

I have two brothers. They both attend school. I have two sisters. One of them goes to school but the other one is too young. She is 3 years old. She is very sweet. She has two dogs and a cat. Their names are Rex and Step and Tommy is the cat's name. She plays with them. She has a large mama doll and a carriage for it which she plays with for hours and hours.

Best wishes to the Letter Writers' club.

Your friend,
ZELA MAE SHELLHORS.

Williamson, Ga.—Dear Friends: I have just been reading the little folks' section and I find it very interesting.

I am 12 years old and in the sixth grade.

I go to school at Williamson high. I have a nice teacher. Her name is Mrs. Ida Grant. My favorite study is English and arithmetic.

If Mr. Waste Basket don't get this I will write again. Some of you friends write to me.

Love and best wishes to all.
PAULINE BALLARD.

Atlanta, Ga. — Dear Girls and Boys: I have been reading your letter writing club and find it very interesting to read. I want very much to join it. I read the young folks' section every Sunday and enjoy it very much.

I am 12 years old and in the seventh grade. I go to Hoke Smith junior high. I have to walk about six blocks every morning.

We have a good time at school. We take "gym" twice a week and we play basketball and other games which we enjoy. We have seven studies but I like math best. All our teachers are very sweet and kind to us. Our principal is Mr. Kimball. Everybody likes him very much.

I have no pets of any kind, or any sisters or brothers.

But I enjoy skating and playing with my girl friends.

I know you are all glad spring and summer are here. Now we can go in swimming and enjoy the summer sports. Atlanta has many parks and swimming pools. Some of them are Grant park, Piedmont, Mozley, Maddox and Lakewood.

Yours sincerely,
CHRISTINE TIPPEN.

reak Her Heart?

of Pretty Juanita Clivette ppy in a Quite Different Ancient Greek Poetess She Claims To Be

You are wonderful, new lover,
More wonderful than evening sunset
Powdering a delicate lake
In her silver radiance. Gleaming little Glints of red-like coral set in folds of Grayed old lace.

More wonderful, too, than the last hour
Of winter when the frost gives way to fire—
The fire of a new season. Bold and jocund spring!
Oh, wonderful in your kiss that penetrates
My soul in an ecstacy of desire!"

of the "Little York's Green- would like so mile Gruppe, her parents' n.

As long as Sappho confines her admiration to poetry her mother is satisfied, but she will not hear of her setting up housekeeping in Emile's apartment in New York.

It was quite a shock to the Clivettes when Sappho first announced her reincarnation at the age of six. The announcement was made on a Pullman car while en route to Des Moines with her family.

"I am Sappho," the child said calmly, "and I lived in Greece 2,000 years ago."

Mama and Papa Clivette did not argue the matter, but they found a Greek poetess a somewhat difficult addition to the household. The first family struggle came when Sappho, evidently remembering that she met her death by drowning in her previous incarnation, refused to take a bath. She accounted for her aversion to the water by producing the following poem:

"Silently the stars are shining,
Shining in the still moonlight,
Softly the wind is singing,
Singing through the night,
Chanting a weird, wild tune of love.

The trees are swinging now,
The sea is deep and fearful.
In its depths I see,
See the drowned, clay body
That once belonged to me."

The distracted mother gave in. "Since that day," she says, "Juanita has been Sappho to us. Many of her ideas seem very strange, but I accept them. She says they belong to her real personality and she has brought them with her."

Since Juanita wrote her first poem at the age of four, she has composed over 3,000 lyrics and odes, which many critics think show remarkable genius. At twelve years of age she produced a document entitled "Why I Believe I Am Sappho," which has puzzled psychologists. They cannot understand how the brain of a child so young could evolve such a philosophy.

"My spiritual essence," she says, "now incased in the body called 'Juanita,' has saturated many bodies of varied personalities, but none so vivid as that of Sappho. My soul reveals her past to me as plainly as if it were a photographic record."

The poetess believes that the soul of Sappho is being given an opportunity to atone for past transgressions in this, her present incarnation.

"My destruction as Sappho came from my voluntary will not yielding itself to the Divine Will," she explains. "The soul of Sappho was bound to be reincarnated again to give it a chance to cast out all material attraction. Every soul has a chance to try again!" Sappho's poems have undergone a decided change since she fell in love with the young artist, Emile Gruppe. One of her earlier productions reads:

"All the universe is mine,
All eternity my time,
And to Zeus will I be wed . . ."

Now she writes:

"When birds are caroling
Sweet songs anew,
Then love and hearts are better Two."

Mama Clivette prefers the former version. She believes that her daughter is really the second incarnation of the Greek Sappho, but she hopes to improve on Sappho's sad history. Marriage has not entered her plans for little Sappho's future. She did not object to any mystic union which might fan the flames of genius, but a flesh and blood marriage would interfere very much with her plans.

"Zeus, Apollo—any of the gods," she says to her daughter, "but Emile Gruppe—never, while I am your guardian. Some day you will be very grateful to me for keeping you from making such a mistake. This is not the real Sappho. This is a flapper's spirit that has somehow taken posession of you. We must get rid of it somehow, and bring Sappho back."

Juanita does not agree. "Emile is Phaon—the only man I have ever really loved," she insists.

She has ambitious plans of what will happen when her 2,000-year-old poetic genius is linked in marriage with the genius of a rising young painter like Emile Gruppe. He is the only man, she declares, who grasps the spirit of her poems sympathetically enough to supply fitting illustrations for them.

But Juanita's parents see no reason why Gruppe should have to marry their daughter in order to illustrate the 3,000 poems she has already written and the thousands more she expects to write.

What will happen to this modern Sappho? Will she brave her parents' opposition and flee to some artistic love nest with her Phaon, or must she be as broken hearted as the ancient Sappho was?

King of the Andes

A Thrilling Novel

SHE tethered him out at the end of a long lariat, new and crimp, swung like a neat nank of pulled taffy to the horn of the saddle, and sat down on a rock to eat sparingly of her package of cold food. A dismal business, thinking. "I have done it," she kept saying to herself. "Now I have done it!" Yes, this was the worst possible thing she could have done. For even if she were not discovered by someone and taken back to the house, she could not think of spending the night in that place. Bolero, of course, would not. He would break halter and leave her there alone, for with an animal's wisdom he knew the place to be infested with wild beasts, wolves and panthers the most to be dreaded. She did not relish the idea of staying there either. And after a horrible day of it, the buzzards always slowly reeling in circles above her, and late evening coming, she went down to where the restless Bolero was tied by a tiny water hole in the rocks and put the saddle on him. She was not any slower getting in the saddle, and given the reins, Bolero made a bee-line for home, a two hours' steady gallop. Charlotte was no less anxious than the horse to beat the descending blackness, and not a human being did they meet on the trail. Much as it was a house of terrors for her now, still its few winking lights it afforded after the black grave of the open Pampas. As a moth she would flutter back to the charmed glow, she who had known nothing but the cheering glitter of the cities. But it was another day gone, spent it did not matter how, and tomorrow Juan would come! And she had left a note for him held down by a rock at the spot where she had met him the day of the horse-breaking contest. Over it she propped a stick, her handkerchief fluttering at the end of the stick. He could not fail to see it, and he would read, and come!

"Dear Juan—My tia and padre held by El Lobo in mountains. I—yo—am held at hacienda by Don Juan. If not, will meet you here—acqui—manana—tomorrow — Sabado—Saturday.

"CHARLOTTE."

On the reverse side of the piece of paper she had drawn a rough plan of house, marking with a big X the window of her room and that of Father Pollito. He would understand.

She relieved Bolero of saddle and bridle and hid them in the tall grass where she could easily find them again, and let him make his own way to the stables. She grew reckless then; the same recklessness that for its panic makes a frightened soldier a hero. She had felt as well the black terror of the Pampas night, and now nothing could keep her from the glow and warmth of human things. Her own humanness, her body, cried for that company and warmth. She must go on taking chances. Lasting this far, and escaping, she reasoned that she would get through another night safely—and tomorrow Juan would come! She prayed God that she might last, and come through as she had come through the other terrible days and nights. A wraith she was, almost indistinguishable, under the deep shadow of the trees, approaching gradually until she stood in front of Father Pollito's window. She looked in.

Not until that moment did she decide what she would do. Father Pollito was not in the room, and she would preempt the place. If nothing more, she could get under the bed and stay there.

CHAPTER 18.

BUT she did not get under the bed, nor did she hide herself at all. That tomorrow would be the eighth day, when Juan was sure to come, and because it was natural she should fend herself against the utter isolation of a night without a roof, embraved her to take this step.

Father Pollito, waddling in, not so pensive and benign-looking when he thought himself unobserved, and with another thick bottle under his arm, was amazed to behold her sitting cross-legged like a pretty boy in her riding breeches in the middle of his great sixteenth century bed with its high carved posters and overhead tapestries that gave it the appearance of a pontifical throne. Inebriated, not having expected her return, he brushed a wary hand across his eyes to make sure they did not deceive him, and moved unsteadily towards the table where he put down his bottle. The manner of his new reception of her was more that of a criticism of himself. The little hussy had caught him drunk again, and that way he knew his wits would never be a match for hers. The creeping years, along with an aggravated process of senility due to riotous and dissolute living had already thrown their filmy curtains over his mind, and the girl knew it, too. Hence her preference, when alternative allowed, to take her chance with him rather than with Don Juan. She as good as told him so sitting there in the middle of his bed, a smile on her lips. But where had she been, what powers were hers that she could evaporate as it were, and then return to life again?

His bottle safe on the table, he waddled nearer and stood glowering down, uncertain what to say and confounded by that confident smile of hers. Something surely had happened to give her this new lease on what he imagined had been totally destroyed—her self-confidence.

He reached out as if to pluck her as he would a reptile from his couch, then hurriedly changed his mind and let her stay there. His guardian Saint preserve him, she had a pistol! He saw it, a little gleaming affair tucked as might have lain a spit-adder between her small hands, a large, sparkling diamond engagement ring encircling one of her fingers—Lawrence Byron's gift.

"Father Pollito, I have come back to you," she said sweetly.

"I do not want you—vamos!" he snarled like a suspicious old bear, now afraid of her.

"But, Father Pollito, I trusted you. You are my sworn friend, and God's ambassador on earth. I still want you to be my friend, and I still want to trust you. It is only for one more night, Father Pollito. If you try to leave the room, believe me, good padre, I will kill you. I will kill anybody who goes out or comes in that door. Tomorrow somebody is coming to get me."

"Who is coming?" he gurgled in alarm.

"An army!"

He blinked like a frightened old bear.

"Poof! There is no army. What army, little imp of the lying women?"

"No matter—an army. But if you tell Don Juan, I will kill you anyway. You see, Father Pollito," she went on, striking a pose that would have made her famous on Broadway, "you two guys have made me sore!"

"Sore, my pobrecita?"

"Yes. I am getting sore. It is better to get sore than go crazy. And I can shoot. Do you want to see me shoot?"

"At what, my dove?"

"At you!"

"Madre di Dios, no, my flower. Do not shoot your poor padre," and he walled his eyes like a sheep's. "You look tired and very pale, my little one. What can your poor old friend bring you?"

"Some hot tea, with sugar in it, Father Pollito. And real cream. Not goat's milk. Are you going for the tea?"

THIS had never happened to Father Pollito before. He, the good saint of the wilderness, aimed at with a pistol! It was unheard of—sacreligious. Not even El Lobo would have pointed a pistol at him. No, nor a drunken cholo. Only this American girl would do a thing like that. And this was how she gave thanks for all he had done for her—and now commanding him to get her hot tea!

Forgetting to look sly and expectant, he leaned his bulk against the heavy table and murmured a lip-service curse against her. This young wanton in boy's clothes who had tempted him with her unaccountable beauty, beauty the like of which he had never seen before. But he would go get the hot tea, no more desirous than she to have Don Juan know she was there in his bed. He would get rid of her, but not by telling. It would be some other way he would get rid of her. The king of the Andes should have her back—yes, with his blessing.

He signified he would get the tea, and waddled out. He was gone a long time, and Charlotte grew uneasy, her heart fluttering again. He was back at last, however, edging in through the door as was his habit with the little steaming china pot of tea. He had gone to greater pains—made her toast!

"You see, my naughty little one," he gurgled. "Father Pollito had to boil the water, and also to bring you some toast—the coals of fire, my darling. I would but lovingly reprimand an erring child of God."

She drank all the tea and drank all of the toast.

"Yes, Father Pollito, I certainly have been an erring child," she agreed. "I have erred all around, but thanks for your helpful guidance, good padre. I should never have left New York, or let anybody separate me from the man I love. I won't ever again let anybody separate me from my heart's truest desire. For when we do, we pay. Years and years we pay for such a mistake, and the heart is never happy again. We never truly love but once, and that is forever. And . . . well, Father Pollito," she continued, lifting the cup of tea to her lips, "the erring girl

AN APPEAL TO DOG LOVERS

By Elizabeth P. Lawrence Emmons

IF you have ever nursed one of your pet dogs through an attack of distemper, I already have your interest and sympathy in my appeal for contributions to carry on the investigation now being made in England as to its cause and cure.

A pamphlet, giving a minute account of the scientific work done so far and results obtained with photographic illustrations of the distemper hospital and its surroundings, may be gotten from Charles H. Tyler, the secretary-treasurer of the American committee for this work.

A dog campaign worker

In writing this little article, it is merely my way of contributing in a small measure to this humane and world appealing plea for the necessary where-with-all to complete this line of medical research, terminating as we all hope and believe in knowledge that will prove the greatest blessing to our beloved animal world.

Quoting from the pamphlet above referred to, the article goes on to say: "The tedious but necessary preliminaries to this task appear to have been overcome, the laboratories and kennels are well equipped through the generosity of the subscribers to the Field Distemper fund and the work is being carried out under the best possible auspices with good chances of success—contributions have reached us from practically all over the world. Without such wide-spread support it would not have been possible to develop the work on a scale adequate for the purpose on the lines now indicated nor will it be possible to complete it without a continuance of such support."

If only each one of you who read this letter will send something to Mr. Tyler in the Ames building, Boston, Mass.—one dollar—anything you can afford, and ask all your neighbors who are dog owners to do likewise—it would be a very short time before a goodly sum was on hand.

My pet dog "Benny," whose picture you see here, collected several hundred dollars during the recent show at Mechanics hall, Boston, by sitting on a table for three days and evenings with a small box in front of him, in which children and grown-ups dropped their contributions, some five-cent pieces, some twenty dollar bills, but all done in a generous desire, a sympathetic spirit—to help lift the curse from the lives of the best friends we mortals have!

makes a toast. Here's to my true lover . . . and forever! And this, too, Father Pollito. If I had to go through another week of this, I would not shoot and miss, as did poor Girasol. I would shoot and kill!"

"What do you know of Girasol?"

"All. But still you would have married me to Don Juan, knowing as you do, too, of Girasol!"

"But, my dove, has not Father Pollito saved you from him? And what is the army that comes tomorrow?"

"Never mind, Father Pollito. An army is coming. For one with God is an army! Stop your plumpings and thumpings of yourself, please. What are you doing now?" she ended in alarm.

He was reared back against the table for support, standing as erect a his wabbly legs would let him, a lifted crucifix shaking and rocking in a fat hand above his head. Great gusty murmurings issued in gurgles from his throat. He looked as rotund and towering as a pedestaled Buddha with lightning in his fists. Charlotte unwound her legs and jumped out of the bed on the farthest side, afraid he would go on towering until he came crashing down on top of her. But when he started towards the door she stopped him with the leveled pistol.

"You cannot go, Father Pollito," she said in low steadiness. "I am fighting for my life and honor, and you must excuse me. The terrors and insults I have suffered at yours and Don Juan's hands in this house gives me the right, and if I come out alive and whole it will be because of nobody's efforts but mine—and God's. Your maledictions do not disturb me in the least. You must have been used to ignorance and foolish maidens. But I am neither ignorant, superstitious, or one of the foolish virgins. Sit down, Father Pollito."

That moment the unforeseen happened, and all the terror and fright she thought she had overcome returned with the suddenness of a clap of thunder.

"Pol-lee-to! Father Pol-lee-to!" came a drunken shout from the dark patio. "Where hide you your dirty carcass—Father Pol-lee-to!".

The room turned black to her for a moment, the pistol almost slipping from her palsied hand. She might have thought she was mistress of the situation, but the sound of that voice and scuff and jingle of spurred boots of the man who was more beast than human showed her just where she stood. She realized, too, that Father Pollito saw, the sly, expectant smile instantly back in his eyes.

"Go out to him," she quavered. "Push him away. Do not let him come in here. I will give you anything you want!"

He stood swaying, killing time, ogglng her triumphantly.

"Ah, my buttercup, you beg now again, your padre?"

"Yes, yes. Keep him out! Take him away," she asked frantically. "I would as soon a snake, a boa-constrictor, wrapped its coils around me —than his arms. The smell of his breath—his horrible kisses. For God's sake, get him away. Please, Father Pollito!"

Still he swayed and hesitated, his sly little prayer-look growing sweetish and more lustful. He reached for her pistol.

"No!"

"Is it I or the great Don Juan, my pobrecita?"

"You," she answered.

BUT she knew she lied. She would use the pistol first.

Father Pollito would have gone anyway. Her promise was nothing; but, exacted, it gave him a hope. Her fear of Don Juan was so overpowering she might now collapse, utterly, in the resistance of her sturdy moral fibre. Women of the wilderness did not have such moral fibre, or resistance. They yielded and fought afterwards. With many others, it was too small a matter altogether.

Father Pollito saw it that way, too. A woman had no other value, and was not supposed to have any other value—a female, and nothing more. All was savagery. His enslavement to drink was another of the savageries. Isolation did it. Christianity in such a country was nothing but a hierarchy. Freedom of the natives from illiteracy and debauchery was the last thing Father Pollito would have seen come to pass in South America, consorting with and assisting as he did men like the king of the Andes. Father Pollito was one of the grimest realities.

He waddled to the door and slyly edged himself out just as Don Juan's spurred heels clicked menacingly on the stone floor in front of it.

Charlotte, listened behind the door, tried to understand the words that passed between them, their Spanish rapid, like babbling water. She gleaned only enough to know Don Juan was in a beastly mood and making threats. The opportunity hers again, the instinct was to flee to the Roman pool; but she held back, wanting to know more. Between the shoutings and raspings of Don Juan she could catch now and then the softer gurglings of Father Pollito; but that was all. They might as well have been speaking Chinese. However, she could rightly suppose it all meant nothing good, and that the ebb-tide was sweeping her out on some new sea of peril. She was riding the hurricane. Yet she would face the issue with open eyes, beat it with open eyes—and with her pistol. She realized, too, she had enraged the padre beyond all amends, lifting as he had the crucifix above his head as if calling maledictions down on her for heresies she had spoken. He was not only a sensualist, but a fanatic besides. The fanatic could be as terrible to deal with, more terrible, than a mere amorous old bear.

She saw her mistake but did not regret it. She would not change matters if it meant surrender. And she would stay there in that room unless Don Juan came. In that case she would make her escape through the open window. What happened after that was too early to consider, unless it was the Roman pool, no other haven open to her, and that a slim one. Or the pistol.

The pistol she still held ready, still listening. "Gregorio," "Ollin," "Americano," "El Lobo," was all she got out of the babble. If she could have understood the substance of the matter it would have been that Don Juan had sent Gregorio to El Lobo's camp to ascertain if Charlotte had found her way back there. Gregorio had returned with the news she had not, but that Mr. Ollin was ill again. Don Juan was hoping the American would die; that he intended El Lobo should finish the job, and Father Pollito must absolve him of the crime. A mercy that Charlotte did not know what was being said. But she stood ready with her little pistol, listening, wanting to know, wanting to face the crisis and have done with it forever.

THE chatter subsided and became but a low hum at a far end of the patio. It was not until after midnight Father Pollito came edging in again as was his wont, sobered some, and with his same little sly and expectant look. He looked almost virtuous in the consciousness of her obligation to him, heaped up until it flowed over in a deluge of his gracious and most humane acts. And there was her promise!

Locking the door as he waddled in, he placed a thick palm above the thin flame of the brass lamp and blew it out. He was going to bed. Thump, thump, went his heavy shoes on the floor. "My pobrecita, little dear one," he gurgled in the dark, "help the poor padre from out his garment. Don Juan will not come, so be not afraid. Father Pollito is a more cunning man than the king of the Andes. And your army, little one, 'tis but a dream. I will take you to San Esteban and turn you over to a nice la-ady. Your padre will save your father and aunt as well, and you shall all go back home safe. Father Pollito will do all that, for he is a better man than the king of the Andes. But if anything should happen to Father Pollito—ah, my poor, pood pobrecita, how sad for you! If anyone should kill the padre!"

Nothing but her unfaltering faith in the something—God—and that Juan was surely coming next day would have induced her to do even that much for him. She helped him out of his garment, heard him roll over as might a big rhinoceros with a thunder and creaking of antique bed boards, and she stood there in the dark not moving for many minutes.

Little ringing sounds filled her ears so deep and still was the night, and that blackness enveloping all. Nothing but a murmur now and then of the wind in the mimosa trees, and that thing with her there in the dark, silent, waiting, the thing. Frightened, at the road's end as she was, she tilted back her head and laughed silently. A promise . . . what was it in a case like this? . . .

An old fool might think she was going to keep it, and that after a while she was coming, but sooner would she have severed herself, limb from limb. A long, low rejoicing murmur of the wind in the mimosa trees, and her words lifted in speech with the wind's soft dying—

"Father Pollito, if you even try to get up, or so much as speak, I will kill you!"

THE wind, for a moment hushed, went on murmuring again in the mimosa trees, happy. But each hour that slowly dragged to its end was as a thousand years to the girl who listened. At last the east was flushed with a far-away glow, and it was the morning of the eighth day.

Now she must not lose a minute. Father Pollito had not said a word, had hardly so much as moved in the bed, to eventually fall asleep as old age will, and she had played her last trump. She could not expect anything else from him—madness if she had. Nor would she dare to ever come back to that house. Juan must come—would come—or for her it was the end!

She stole out of the window and ran for the stables, another parcel of food purloined from the kitchen, and tea she brought to a boil over a paper fire in the stove. Five minutes, not longer it seemed to her, she was on the saddled and bridled Bolero again riding as on the first full sweep of the hurricane for the forest of rocks! Juan might already be waiting for her there—in the rocks! Anyway, there was but one road open to her now, the wild Pampas and its beasts, or Juan! If he did not come, she would try to make her way to El Lobo's camp and at least die in her father's and aunt's arms.

She looked back over her shoulder to see if she was being followed. She was! A bobbing figure on a horse as swift as hers, or almost. It was Gregorio.

"Bolero, you go!" she said, giving her horse a dig with the stirrups.

At the top of a rise she looked back a second time. Her pursuer was still following. She flashed by the lonely horse-breaking pens, where she diverged sharply from the beaten trail and executed a kind of flank movement through wild cactus thickets. The district was familiar to her now, and she knew where she was going—the rocks. They would be her hiding place, and she would not be driven out until Juan came.

She and Bolero swallowed up in the sea of rocks, she made straight for the great boulder behind which she had left her note for Juan, and from which point he had watched the horse-breaking contest. It would be her vantage point, too, where she would have an unobstructed view of the pens and her pursuer when he passed that point. And Juan had not come back yet, for there was her handkerchief still fluttering in the wind. Very despondently it seemed to flutter. But she did not let it give her the blues. He would come yet, riding in the clouds, fording great mountain chasms and deep rushing rivers at a leap. Never stopping, never wearying, he was on the way, a figure of speed, endurance and might.

So was Gregorio coming. But he did not pass by the horse pens. He was an Indian and knew his business. To Charlotte it was strange, unusual; rather not what she had expected. He ought to have passed the pens. For the feeling of security it gave her, she got back in the saddle again, nervous because Bolero was nervous, whirling suddenly as he could, snorting and looking wildly this way and that. If he whinnied as it looked he might with each horrible intake of wind through his quivering, dilated nostrils, she would faint. He did whinny, loud, shrilly; and there came an answering whinny not far off, or was it just the echo of Bolero's call? Then, without the possibility of a doubt, she caught the clear ring of a steel shoe on rocks. That did not fool her a bit. She gave her horse a slap across the quarters and started at a gallop in an opposite to that from which the sound had come and she had seen Bolero look. It was a good sign to go by, going always oppositely to directions he cocked his ears. Not that he did not for her benefit, but he was telling her just from what point of the compass approached her enemy. But there was another less agreeable feature. The horse her pursuer rode was a friend of Bolero's, and no doubt Gregorio had chosen him for that reason, for Bolero was determined to join his whinnying friend. He tried everything mean and nasty in the way of tricks to circumvent her in this desire. Several times he defied the bit and went a long way against the sharp jerks and pulls of her weakening arms. She was now down in a little valley and away from the forest of rocks, and less than a mile behind her appeared her pursuer, relentless, taking it easier than did she, it seemed. It was horrible, fiendish—a pursuer like that. "You go!" she said again to the animal under her that was trying to bring about her destruction, and lashed him. Bolero lifted his heels and bucked. That kept up she would not be able to stick; she would go flying off. Though she got him in a fast run again, and was back in the field of rocks, her pursuer lost, she began to think it was a losing fight. It was already lost, for that matter; had been from the beginning She would never get away. Just that horrible milling, going around and around, until she could go no longer, until she dropped. That horrible milling. She prayed that some time somebody would treat the king of the Andes the same way, torture him as she was now being tortured. Somebody who was able, and had been thinking of a sure way to do it. Yes, kill him, she cried to herself. God said vengeance was His; but was there somebody who would not wait for God? She thought of Juan again. He would do it—yes, Juan. She could not help wishing it, a fate like that for a man who had tortured her and had tried to break her spirit, grind her under his heel. Somebody must do it. Juan would do it!

A Thrilling Novel of South America

SHE did not then know how truthfully she spoke—that Juan would do it. Juan, who rode the clouds and forded great mountain chasms and deep rushing rivers at a leap. Unwearying, never stopping, figure of speed, endurance and might —and vengeance.

She was back like a hunted little fox where she had left her message for Juan. She had not had the time for a morsel of food, and she was weary and faint. The heartless Bolero jumped from under her just as she was trying to dismount, and she fell on the stones, unconscious. The beast dashed away.

It was there the grinning Gregorio came upon her, his long gold ear-rings swinging like the wattles of a new kind of beast, the curried mestizo with his stringy hair coarse as grass and a soul as dark as a cave of Erebus. He picked her up and swung her in the saddle with him and started back for the hacienda house, not seeing the letter she had left for Juan or the handkerchief that fluttered in the wind. She had lost. She had fought with all the strength that was in her, but she had lost. And Juan had not come!

She awoke to find herself in bed back in the room that had been hers, Gregorio sitting on the floor with his back against the door strumming a guitar. Thinking he saw her move he sprang to his feet lithe as a panther and came towards her, ready to call his master, and she shut her eyes and pretended she was still in a deep faint. He settled back on the floor against the door again, running fingers over the strings of the musical instrument, and watchful. Not for another hour did she so much as move an eye-lash, knowing that perhaps she would not be bothered until they thought she was conscious. If it meant she must in the face of Don Juan again, she never wanted to be conscious; she would lie there forever, or until she died. Nor had she given up hopes for Juan. She guessed it was still not yet more than early afternoon, and there was plenty of time for him to come. If he did not come she would kill herself before she would submit to her brutal conqueror. Or she would wait until night, and if she could evade her keepers, run for the Roman pool. She carefully moved a hand under the coverlet to feel of the pistol in her pocket. It was gone. They had taken it. If she had meant to use it, she had waited too long in the softness of her nature and civilized creeds. The creeds of the uncivilized had won. She heard the ancient clock strike four times, and she was reminded of the dreadful night when its chimes had sounded like a funeral toll—the night Pancho was killed, and the mad macaw filling the darkness with its eerie cries. What could she expect? Nothing, unless it was Juan who might yet come—or God. Nothing now she could do herself except go on pretending she was unconscious, that way delaying as long as possible the inevitable.

At five o'clock the impatient Don Juan staggered in, drunkenly, to look at her, jerking off the coverlet that was spread over her and hurling it across the room in his ferocity. She was playing 'possum, he cried, and picked her up and shook her as if she might have been a doll. "Caramba," he snarled. "She will keep it up forever. If wine will not wake her, pepper will. Bring me pepper! I will see if her will-power is stronger than red cayenne!" And he laughed. "Or will you come to of yourself, Carlotta? That Bolero should throw you is nothing—not for you, my dulce. You only play American 'possum, and I will play pepper to the 'possum!" A shout of savage laughter from Gregorio, who ran to get the pepper. The king of the Andes held her while the mestizo sprinkled the pepper. Still she would have fought them; against all the uneven odds would she have struggled to delay a fate that it seemed she could not escape. But the pepper defeated her. She was overcome by a paroxysm of sneezing. Opening her eyes streaming with water from the burning pepper, she cried, "You beasts—beasts! God —Somebody—Juan will punish you. You can kill me. I shall do nothing!"

"BUT, yes, my Carlotta, you will. You will marry me, and you will also tell me where you have been hiding all these days and nights. I will know. Even you, my fair one, cannot treat me like that, and be excused. I will conquer—crush you!"

"No, you will not conquer me," she answered in her defiance. "There are some who can never be conquered, Don Juan Savilla; and I am one of them. You can kill me, but that is all. Ask Father Pollito how I have been able to evade you, and perhaps honesty will overcome his cowardice. But I did it with my own brain, too—and I am not conquered, Don Juan Savilla! You, nor men like Pollito, can even conquer me!"

"Father Pol-lee-to!" cried the king of the Andes in suspicious rage. "Come here, Father Pol-lee-to!"

The old priest came waddling in hurriedly, a pale cast in his wily old face but looking as innocent as a lamb.

"Pol-lee-to, hear this mujer talk! What had you to do with her hiding from me? Names of Ten Saints, answer truthfully to save your life, Pol-lee-to!" And Father Pollito plumped and thumped himself vigorously, looked amazed and unbelieving. What was this trick somebody was trying to play on him—the good padre?

"I am a man of God," he gurgled. "Let no mortal, even Don Juan Savilla, king of the Andes, insult my calling. Nada-nada. I have done nothing unbecoming of a saint. She is an imp of the Lying Women. Don Juan, Father Pollito forgives you your erring ways and foul suspicions against the cloth. So much I forgive you that I will agree to the marriage and the holy bans. It is for you to say, Don Juan." And once again he looked pensive, very benign and sweet. He smiled pensively at Charlotte.

"Bueno, I believe you, Father Pollito," said the grandee. "We are bosom friends, and this country is ours. Mine and yours, Father Pollito. Go, Gregorio, and have a feast ready, and music. Chaca-chaca-chaca, what a foolish-talking girl is this that would scorn the hand and house and lands of Don Juan, king of the Andes!"

"Yes, indeed, Don Juan, what a foolish girl," gurgled Father Pollito agreeably. "She needs a master—one who can rule her, and be not too gentle in the ruling. But she does not deserve it—the name of the great Savilla." He plumped and thumped himself some more, his cheeks swelling like the jowls of a huge Cheshire cat. "And I would say, Don Juan, that the ceremony be rushed, for I go on with the traders' caravan tonight when it comes." And nobody but Charlotte knew how anxious he was to get away, wipe the dust of that wicked place from his feet forever, at least until the storm had passed and all this was forgotten history. Lastly, he smiled sweetly upon Charlotte, making incantations in the air with his fat fingers.

She did not return the challenge. It might have meant just more horror and spilling of blood. She only wanted Juan, the recalcitrant Juan, to come. He must come. She was praying it and asking it every minute.

She was still praying that he would come when the shadows of another on-coming night gathered thickly under the mimosa trees. And busy menials, chattering of the wedding that was to follow the fiesta, were lighting the lamps. Never had the house been so brilliantly lighted—not in a hundred years.

Charlotte watched the proceedings, knowing of no way to keep the twittering, oggling old women from dressing her up as a bride, Gregorio still standing guard at the door with banjo and carbine. She could not have reached the Roman pool even if she had wished to drown herself, and she had no idea of doing that. Juan had failed her, but as far as she was concerned there was no giving up. Not for an Ollin!

THE place began to teem with people. Even if Juan should come, what could he do against a noisy horde like that? She settled back in a sort of mental and physical apathy as she had seen her poor father do, and almost welcomed the stupor. She had misjudged her father. It was not and never had been cowardice on his part. He had just seen the situation in its true light. Hopeless—had been from the beginning—for all of them. No sensible way out, much less a miraculous one. And Juan was not coming, or he would have shown up before now. Her father said it was foolish for her to hope it. He had not even gone to send her message. He had just ridden away across the Pampas, the dirty little Indian!

She said it and thought she meant it all—for the time. She had given up the fight. But she would die before she would give herself up to that beast, Savilla. She would kill him. Girasol, proud daughter of the Incas, had failed in her efforts, but she would not. If she survived, she would yet strike back. Right now, however, nothing seemed so good as just to sink and sink in that mental stupor of hers—and forget.

She went that way to the festive table in white silk mantilla with sprays of orange blossoms the women had put on her head, sipping wine that had neither taste nor sting. She got up from the table in the same way, in a dream, wondering how it was she had the strength to walk, all her heroic efforts in a battle she so valiantly had fought seeming incredible in her present inertia of spirit and body.

Nor did she make any resistance when the smiling king of the Andes, regarding her now as his legal own, or in a few minutes would be, slipped an arm of hers through his and they began that wedding march of the Spaniards to the place where the benign Father Pollito waited in the patio with its rows of flaming torches and eager, curious faces of awe-struck servants and ignorant half-breed Indians. After a journey that seemed interminable they were standing in front of Father Pollito with his lifted book and crucifix, and the actual ceremony was about to begin. It did begin, the priest beginning to speak with a humming through his nose as many Latins do when they feel the importance of great words, and came to where the hands of the contracting parties were to be bound with the cord no earthly power was to sever, when he stopped. He stopped because the king of the Andes was not looking at him but over his shoulder at something else. So was Charlotte looking, her eyes shining with a sudden brightness like that of stars. Father Pollito turned to look also.

It was Juan. Yes, Juan, the Indian boy, tall and stalwart of stature like the king of the Andes himself, only younger, even more leonic of head and godlike in the lift of his wonderful shoulders. He had appeared out of the dark outer edge of the lighted patio, his white teeth flashing in a smile that did not dim, pistols as large as the one with which Don Juan had killed Pancho held low and menacingly in each hand, at the hips. He came slowly. Gregorio, swarthy, venomous, quick to dart, attempted to leap from view of those smiling eyes, and one of the guns, never lifted, shot a streak of red flame. Gregorio crumpled in the spot where he began his leap, and the boy came on in his slow, guarded step. Ten paces from the man who was his father, he stopped and shouted in Spanish, "Cuida! Down, priest. Out of the way!"

FATHER POLLITO was even more obliging than that. He carefully got down on his hands and knees and then stretched himself flat on his paunch. If any bullets were coming, he did not want to stop them in their flight—a death inappropriate for one so holy!

Don Juan, king of the Andes, at first not believing his own eyes, now turned ghastly pale under his marriage powder. The boy who was his own son was going to shoot him down where he stood. He made a move as if to dart as had Gregorio, but a sound of the boy's tongue like the rattle of a snake stopped him. The grandee for the first time in his life put his hands in the air, and kept them there. But, no, the boy was not going to kill him. This was not the time, or the way he had planned. That was to be later. He had come for the girl, and he was going to have her. He beckoned to Charlotte with a quick jerk of his handsome head, and she jumped over the prostrate body of Father Pollito to obey, not more than a second it seemed in reaching him. Holding her behind him, slowly he began the cautious retreat until the shadows again swallowed both him and Charlotte. They went through the room that had been hers and out the window near which, under the blackness of the mimosa trees, waited horses, his own and Bolero. He had gone to the stables and brought out Bolero while the eyes of watchers were blind with the excitement of the wedding. He had worked fast. He had carried the thing through, as only he could have carried it through, as possibly he was the only human being in South America who could finish what was yet before him to do. He swung Charlotte to her saddle, as lightly as ever had Don Juan, her terror and stupor vanished, leaped into his own, and they disappeared in the night.

It was useless and as much as death to follow them, and the king of the Andes knew it. All he could now do to express his feelings was to kick the prostrate old priest and shout curses. He soon desisted in that. Stirred afresh to the depths of his superstitious nature, the flow of his thoughts was too vehement for mere words and kicks. He was thinking of Girasol and her son—his son—come as a retributive angel of justice. God? There was something to the belief in God after all. He was under the curse of that God. And all because he had had Girasol murdered—all because she had died on her knees. . . .

He went staggering across the patio, knocking over scampering servants as he went, as if to escape fiends that followed him. In the seclusion of his rooms, he took drink after drink of fiery liquor that did not warm. "Father Pol-lee-to! Father Pol-lee-to!" he was soon shouting and screaming. "Where hide you your dirty carcass? Come, absolve my soul!"

CHAPTER 19.

THE body and mind both on the verge of collapse ask nothing more sometimes than just a reversement of the spinning wheel of ill-happening that would crush the natural instinct to live and recognize no thing that leads to death or surrender. The wheel had reversed for Charlotte, and she revived in a second to meet the new situation. Of bouyant temperament and vigorous of body, though "no bigger than a dime" as her father had said, she flashed from one extreme to another of inertia turned to alertness and despondency become fresh hope. It could not have happened too quickly for a girl like her to fail to raise to rise to the need. She could have kept up the mad ride all night.

They did continue the breakneck speed for thirty minutes or more, she but a yard's length behind him in the race, when Juan pulled rein and they stopped beneath a ghostly pile of sheltering stones that rose in crumbling columns high above them to breathe their horses. They were in the heart of the ruins of the City Incognito, which she had never gotten to see because her Aunt Rebecca had fallen from her horse and hurt her knee.

"Will we stay here the rest of the night, Juan?" she asked.

The boy jumped as if startled by the sound of her voice. Speech that moment was a desecration to him.

"Talk not, senorita. This is the city of the ancient glories—my people, and Girasol's, older than the Araucans and the Incas. The oldest city in the world! I see them sometimes, senorita, the pale people moving in the starlight. Many times!" It was as if he had forgotten everything else.

She looked about her in youthful awe.

"It is all right. I am not afraid with you, Juan."

His beautiful white teeth flashed in a smile. "Gracious," he said, and nothing else.

"You are not afraid Don Juan will catch us?"

His smile turned to an expression of scorn. He did not answer; and she made as if to dismount.

"No! I stop here just a minute ever' time. We go on to other end of Sacred City. Somebody."

"Somebody?" she asked, disappointedly. "But I do not want to meet any somebodys."

"Yes, somebody you want to meet," he insisted.

"You mean my father and aunt?" she cried. But he did not answer. "Oh, Juan!" she added joyously. "You have rescued my father and aunt, too!"

THEY drew out from the sheltering columns that once had supported the nave or facade of a temple as wonderful as any in Egypt, and walked their horses along a narrow clearing that once might have been a paved boulevard, or another Appian way. Tall cactus and quiniar trees now grew up between the carved and fallen stones scattered about like the discarded blocks she used to build toy houses with when she was a little girl. She felt creepy and very old, forgetting everything else that had happened that night as had the Indian boy at her side. Once he touched her and pointed at something slipping between the great gray stones—a panther, huge and shadowy, with eyes that burned like coals of fire in the dark. Yes, it could have been one of the very same wild beasts pagan emperors of Rome had turned loose in the arenas to devour the early Christians! The horses snorted and tried to run, but presently calming down again; and they went on.

It was all of a mile through the sombre stretch of those ghostly ruins, when they came upon other high columns of stone and crumbling walls, still intact in places. They passed under a high noble arch yet standing, and were in a faintly moonlit inclosure walled in on all sides. Near the center a smoldering fire burned, and she was frightened to see a man's figure spring up by the fire and come their way—not her father's at all. The man wore riding-breeches and leather puttees, and a slouch hat that covered his face. Half savage and half city man, it looked as if he had wandered out of some romantic tale and lost himself here; not lost either, but very much at home. He reached up to touch her, and she recognized the blur of his white hand.

"Charlotte!"

"Lawrence!" she sobbed hysterically for a few moments, wanting to fall in his arms. "How did you get here? It isn't you, Lawrence. You couldn't have gotten here!"

"But it is, Charlotte. I am here."

"But how did you do it? By airship? It's impossible!"

"No, it is not impossible. I came on the next ship."

"After you got my cable? But how—"

"No. The next one after you left. The very one, Charlotte. I was already in Porto Cadero when Juan came to send your message. I had to follow you. There was nothing else I wanted to do. Life was unbearable without you. And after all I had said. But I did not mean it, Charlotte. I was miserable. I had to come. Charlotte!" he cried again in a voice that broke, burying his face against her, and she wanting to kiss him—oh, anywhere, as he kissed her again and again. "Nobody ever truly loves but once, and anybody who has ever loved, knows it! I had to come! And it was all my fault, Charlotte!"

"Your fault?" she demanded indignantly. "No, both of us, Lawrence. We didn't either have the courage of something. But we have it now. Oh, I know you are brave. You look it tonight—as brave as Juan!"

The Indian boy heard in amazement, his habitual look of scorn turned to one of wonderment. And Charlotte went on arguing with Lawrence Byron, heatedly, without recess, sliding from the saddle and cuddling in his arms, telling him it was as much her fault. "Well, all right, then, for tonight you can have your way. But I am not going to have you abuse yourself for every wicked thing I do, too. And now the next thing I want to know is how you met Juan?"

"Easy. I tried to get you by wireless to tell you I was following on the next ship. And failing in that, I cabled to Porto Cadero. So when I arrived I naturally went to the telegraph office to see if my message had been delivered, and they hadn't even received it. Then I got mad and was saying things, when Juan came in. Then for the first few minutes I was more interested in him than in cursing out the people in charge of the telegraph office. He was such a wonderful looking lad, I thought. By George, the sort that kind of takes your breath. I was just standing there looking him over when one of the fellows in the telegraph office timidly asked me to read for them the message Juan had brought in. And, by George—I started to say 'By Harry,' like your father—it was your telegram to me! Yours! Think of it! Almost supernatural. And, well, here I am. And there's Juan. And—that's all."

"Yes, but father and Aunt Rebecca are still held prisoners in El Lobo's camp. We must rescue them. If anything should happen to them—has happened to them—" She broke down again, sobbing more hysterically than ever.

BUT it was not the sobbing of the girl that disturbed the calm Indian blood of Juan. It was the love-making. He had heard many savage women whine and shriek, and their blatant cries annoyed and harassed him to a point of fury. He had also witnessed their crude love-making, and that, too, had always disgusted him. But this was different. It was beautiful. It filled his lonely heart with a choking pain. He crept away, out of sight, and stood with his face lifted to the Andean stars, the half-wild, all-yearning songs of the common people, the gente, in his heart. How often, alone on the Pampas, or in the Andes, he had done that same thing, a cry of the soul that knew no words. Just a cry.

He had fallen in love with Lawrence Byron. The love of a man for a man, no matter the difference of blood that separated them. He saw in Lawrence Byron an ideal. He was liking Charlotte, too; but she was too weak physically, too feminine, to understand the things that a man thought. But to his great joy and appreciation Lawrence Byron understood the spirit of the mountains and plains. He had recited much poetry to him on that long four-day trip together from the cost, and through some of it he did not understand, he had been enchanted. Yes—at last—here was a man after his own heart. He could listen to him and learn, and then be what he had always wanted to be himself as he had tried to pray it and tell the stars, with no one to help him. No—not even Girasol!

He crept back towards the fire and watched the lovers again, no envy or jealousy in his heart; just that pained wonderment and new loneliness. He was not like other Indians, because he was also a Spaniard, a deeply romantic people. Sometimes he was very sad. For days and days he would be sad. Now he sat very still watching and listening.

Charlotte, nestled in Lawrence Byron's arms in the firelight, was telling him of the maidens that long, long ago met their lovers under the quiniar trees in the beautiful El Ciudad Incognito. "And, darling, here we are too, thousands of years later, making love as did they under the same quiniar trees, and within the walls of the same Enchanted City! Only I feel so small and unworthy. But I am brave, and so are you, and I shall never doubt it again. It is something I or you would never have known had we never left New York. Those of the cities never know it, a concentration and purpose only the wilderness, for all its savagery, teaches us. It makes the weak weaker, and the strong stronger. It is the survival not of the fittest physical, but the transcendancy of the soul. You could sing of it in poetry, and I can now forever live it in my heart. And we shall know God. Not a God of savagery, but the God of the New Testament, of Jesus, of the Revelations of John, the preachings of St. Paul and the Ninety-First Psalm of David. I have suffered, I have known terror, but I was not conquered. My spirit endureth. And I know love, too—love that will never die. I loved you then, but I love you even more now—a love that is clean and born of clean bitterness. You are precious, you are dear to me, you are my one and only lover! My father will and must and shall recognize you as that!"

Lawrence Byron's answer was even more beautiful and strange in the ears of the Indian boy. He was back in the fire-light with them. He rolled himself expertly in a blanket, but he only pretended sleep. He was still listening. The loneliness and indescribable pain was back in his heart when he heard Charlotte whisper, "I am afraid to even be a foot away from you, dear. If I sleep it must be where you are, in your arms. Keep me warm—hold me!" And the man wrapped his own blanket around her, and held her to his breast. It lifted the soul of Juan, the Little Wanderer, whose loving but lonely heart went out always like an empty cry to the stars.

HE was shaking them and telling them to get up long before the sun was risen, with a breakfast cooked and a tin cup of hot mate to drink between them, bitter and without sugar. He promised them something better at a house they would pass later, and to Lawrence Byron it had been a four days' wonder how they had gotten any food at all. "He is a magician," he told Charlotte, "plucking things out of the air almost—well, and a rabbit or two. You know how the slight-of-hand fellow does it at Proctor's—a great big corn-fed rabbit, loving the luxuries of stage life, hopping out of the plug hat and as if to say, 'I do this every night—and matinees.' That is Juan. I tell you he has been an inspiration to me. Wish I owned the Apulco mines. I'd stay, brush up in my engineering knowledge, and grow a body of endurance like his. But, think of it, civilization like ours would warp him. He is like everything else nature does, like honey straight from the bee, dew on the grass, ozone and power of living nothing but the Old Dame produces. He lives powerfully, if you know what I mean, Charlotte, like as I have always wanted to live; afraid of nothing. The spring of a panther, and a rifle aim that never misses. As for riding a horse—well, I am afraid he heard what you said about Rebecca falling from hers, and he will not have much of an opinion of her. I worship the boy, and a savage! We owe everything to him—our very lives. He is doing the generaling. Had me wait here last night while he went to get you. I wanted to go, but I saw he was right. Now what happened to the car? Juan thinks we should get hold of that if possible."

She told them the best she knew how, describing the country El Lobo had taken them through, and the old tumbled-down building in which the car had been left. Juan was in the saddle before she finished. "I know," he said. "Pronto—we go! Don Juan Savilla will not rest with the morning, be sure of that." He regarded Charlotte skeptically. "A hard ride, senorita, and terrible. But you be a man now—and not faint."

She was insulted. But it was no time to defend herself, for she realized the grim truth of the boy's words. She had been miraculously plucked from the paws of a human panther, but experiences as terrible, even more terrible, might yet be waiting for them all. Seeing the trouble in her eyes, Juan softened.

"He is the king of the Andes, senorita—comprende?" It was enough, he thought—just that. And it was. The boy might have known Don Juan longer, but who knew him better than did she? For all his outward gaiety, Lawrence Byron was as grim and sesious as he boy. Unshaven, looking like a Pampas vaquero himself, she could not ever have imagined him that way, uncomplaining, and something hard and indomitable in the new set of his face and shoulders. The immaculate, poetry-writing Lawrence Byron of New York! What would her father say? She forgot and did not care what her father would say or think when he leaned over in his saddle and kissed her hand, saying, "But don't let it flump you, Charlotte. We're together!"

Swinging along beside her now, with that always frank and reassuring smile of his, saying, "We're together!"

She told Juan she was going to be a man and not faint. But all the words in the English dictionary could not have told how terrible and utter was the exhaustion of it. To beat time and shorten miles Juan was leading them a pace that killed through a virgin wilderness gutted with deep arroyos and a jungle of underbrush that defied them at every step. She would not have said so, but she could have lain down and wept when they got out of it and there, in a clearing, surrounded by a grove of trees, was the old tumbled-down adobe building. This time Lawrence at the wheel, she did not wait to be coaxed to lie down in the back seat and try to sleep as they went along again down a real road, perhaps the same one she had driven up or down herself wtih her father and aunt, Juan leading the way with the horses.

ABOUT noon, diverging from the road a few miles, they came upon another mud hut in another grove of trees, a pack of vicious dogs running out to snarl and bark at them. It was a family of half-breed Indians of the low Araucan strain of the east slopes of the Andes, and treacherous and inhospitable they would have been had it not been for Juan. Of him they seemed to know, standing off and looking at him in his boyish handsomeness in admiring fear. The three hard-faced women and children, two in their teens but half-naked, set on the dogs with sticks, and meal tortillas, a kind of pancake baked on a plate or stone, huevos, that were feal hen eggs and beans known as frijoles, red with running pepper gravy, were cooked and set before them. The half-breeds had never seen Americans before, or people so white, but nevertheless most of their attention was given to Juan. It was as if he were another budding king of the Andes, but something more like fellowship in his superior poise and intellectual disdain. He had a heart. Some day, though it does not come in this story, he might indeed spring up as a leader, an insurgent, at the head of a cholo army; a self-el[illegible]sident, fiery and eloquent of tongue as he was fiery with the sword. Lawrence Byron had already seen it, something more surely destined than if he had alreday been born with a scepter in hand.

Down back of the mud hut they covered the car with a pile of hay and were off again on the horses. Yet for all the swiftness and dispatch of it Charlotte was despondent. It was then the first hour of afternoon, and surely the king of the Andes had not been idle. She ventured to say as much to Juan.

"He has a car, too, and perhaps already he has gone himself to El Lobo's."

"No, senorita. Not without Gregorio, his driver."

How could she have forgotten that.

"But was he dead, or pretending?"

"No, senorita—dead." The boy spoke with no emotion. She shivered at it and for a moment regarded him with estranged eyes. In her softness it stung her to think he could kill and speak of it so calmly. She looked at Lawrence Byron and was shocked to read in his eyes a defense. "He had to, Charlotte," he said as calmly, "or would we be together now? I do not think that even your father realized the dangers of the country, or that he yet knows how he must hold his own—if he holds his own? Perhaps I can help to show him. Guerra al cuchillo—war to the knife, is it not, Juan?"

"Si, senor!"

"But, Lawrence, I never want you that way. I have had enough of it."

"Not even to satisfy your father that a poet can be a fighter?"

"No! You satisfy me, and that is enough."

"Nor do I want to fight and kill, Charlotte. Only I am not blind. There is only one kind of poet for this country. There he is in all his lyrical splendor—Juan! You see, I am cursed with the same visions, except they have become so refined, civilized and intellectual, as your father puts it, I have become effeminate. Well, I am not that—only civilized. If I were rich, one of my greatest masterpieces in poetry would be that I would take this boy back to the United States with me, educate him to the hilt, and before he warped and became effeminate, send him back here. Perhaps I will anyway. Understand me, Juan?"

"Si, senor!"

SHE could not believe her own eyes and ears, this comradeship between the two. Had Lawrence changed? Was he not the same gentle and beautiful character? Fearless? Why had she ever doubted it? And now he was as hard as nails, and looked it. It was in the way he shouldered his rifle, or hugged it between his body and the horn of the saddle. And his face looked like a human scrubbing-brush with its mat of stubble. Through that stubble, unkempt and sometimes wolfish-looking, he could grin at her like a delighted boy! Men had such complex and contradictory selves; a gentleman under one set of circumstances, but not so much a gentleman under another set of circumstances. And what muscles he had! Why had he ever hidden them under a pair of tailored sleeves? Also he was smoking corn-shuck cigarettes like the lowest and commonest of the cholos—Lawrence Byron! What had he done with that beautiful gold and amber cigarette-holder she had given him? . . . But had he not explained the whole matter to her a few minutes before? You civilize man, set hmi down in the streets of New York, and he warps, becomes less than a man. But Lawrence was not civilized now. He was breathing down deep to the bottom of his ungs as ilf he liked such breathing—liked the country, the wilderness and the dangers of the wilderness. Offhandedly, he was telling her between puffs at a corn-shuck cigarette, that he was going to write "The Light of South America," and it would beat the "Light of Asia" if he did not change his mind and go back to being a mining-engineer. "But no you won't," said Charlotte, indignantly. "That is, not altogether will you go back to mining-engineering. I wouldn't be the wife of just an engineer, and I want you to shave every day!"

They were getting up in the highlands again, the cap-rocks rising in a majestic series of giant steps, some hundreds of feet high, ahead of them, and beyond them, in the pale-washed blue of the sky the serrated ranks and mighty bulwarks of the Andes. Juan and Lawrence were riding a little ahead of her, their horses rubbing stirrups, they talking in undertones. It was the first time he had excluded her from anything, and Charlotte was miserable. He was getting away from her. He was not the same man at all. It was the wilderness again, elevating him and lowering her as it did every woman. She whipped up her horse and edged in between them, saying:

"You must think I do not know how to face things. What are you talking about?"

Lawrence Byron looked surprised, then penitent.

"Juan was telling me what he thought was the best plan of action."

"Cannot I know, too?"

"It's for you, Charlotte. All for you. Only I didn't want to bother you with the fright of it all. Now we are together for always, you know we are—until death!" he ended enigmatically.

That made her forget everything else. Nothing else really mattered, and she was sorry if she had seemed complaining.

"Forgive me," she answered. "And give me a rifle, too. I am as good a shot as either of you!" and Juan's smile of disdain faded forever.

"You will aim, senorita?"

"Yes, to hit! You must not think, Juan, all females are alike. And I can beat either of you diving!"

Arriving at the place where they were to wait for Juan's return and guard the road in case the king of the Andes sent a messenger to El Lobo, Charlotte and Lawrence stood watching the boy until he and the three horses faded in the sun's haze. An exclamation escaped the lips of Lawrence Byron. "Savage, is he? No! Don't you see the greatness of him, Charlotte? Going alone like that to El Lobo's camp. With no consciousness of fear!"

"Do you think he will succeed—come back?"

"Did you hear him say he would not?"

"He did not say whether he would or not."

"That's it! He never thought that he wouldn't. Never thought last night that he would fail to rescue you—never occurred to him. Don't you see what I mean? Never thought of it!"

"Yes, and I see something else," she said, looking at him. "It has never occurred to you that you are afraid of anything, iether."

"Afraid?" and he returned her look blankly.

AND Juan was not afraid. The Americans, with the exception of Lawrence Byron for whom he had formed a violent fancy, a compadre that was genuine, meant nothing to him. But the king of the Andes had murdered his mother, and to thwart him he would be a friend to the Americans. Nothing was going to stop him in his scheme of righteous vengeance. He had not told even Lawrence Byron of the great resolve that burned in his breast like a coal of fire. But the Americans might be witnesses to it, and he hoped they would. They would see a duel with knives between him and the king of the Andes that for drama nothing in all the dark history of South America could equal. He saw it, held it there in his vision; Indian-like, he kept it constantly before his eyes like a picture, not to fade until it became a reality. When it was done, by his own hand and by his own might, Girasol, his mother, though he had seen little of her since he was ten and a little wanderer with the vaqueros on the Pampas, would be avenged—avenged as no other woman had been avenged for the ignominy and slight she had suffered at the hands of a tyrant and Spanish grandee.

He knew he was far ahead of any rider that the king of the Andes had sent to El Lobo. He would be on his way back with his other two charges, Mr. Ollin and his sister, before El Lobo even knew of what had taken place the night before at the hacienda. He was right, too, in his shrewd surmisal that the bandit chief and his picked men would be out on the trail of the traders' caravan, for the settlement was dark when he reached its outskirts, left the horses in a thicket of young madrono trees that flourished on the high slopes and swiftly approached the drunken line of mud huts, on foot. He knew the one the Ollins were held prisoners in by the rough draw board that barred the door on the outside. He slid this and stepped in, standing quiet for a few seconds.

"Who is that?" asked Aunt Rebecca, seeing but a shadow. Mr. Ollin was nervously trying to strike a match, weak and but a ghost of his old self. The intruder knocked the ember from his hand.

"I am Juan."

"Juan?" asked Mr. Ollin, not remembering.

"Son of Girasol. Friend, I save Charlotte. I come now for you. She waits."

"Oh, where—!" began Aunt Rebecca with her first round of gladness in days. It wa so sudden and unbelievable. Then it all came back in a rush to both of them—Juan, Charlotte's Indian fairy, and son of the king of the Andes. "Thank God!" added with Rebecca, Mr. Ollin still trying to shake himself out of his seven days' stupor and conceal if he could his utter cowedness by gently reprimanding his sister. "Hush, Becky. He wants us to make no noise. It is true, Juan—you are a friend?"

"Yes—come."

HE regained ten lost years of his life it seemed instantly, lifting his shoulders and venturing a faltering step towards the shadowy figure he saw before him. Almost supplicative was the hand he put out—the great James B. Ollin. The Indian in Juan did not answer that because it was a begging he never would have been guilty of himself. But he was youth, and the other was on the verge of sixty years. The trembling hand ouched him, patted his shoulder, and he was annoyed. The girl fainted and the father did this—sacra—what a people! He moved away, impatience in his action.

"Hurry. We lose no time—ride."

They were being saved, but Mr. Ollin was humiliated as never before in his life. For that matter, so was his proud sister. He did not know why the boy had drawn away from him, and yet he did know it was something the Andes and the Pampas had bred in him. It was scorn. Well, perhaps he had been guilty of too much feeling; but there was his daughter. He had a right. To cover his agitation, he turned, faintly rasping, on his sister again. "Becky, you piddle. He wants us to hurry. Didn't you understand? I am going to give this boy the check El Lobo refused." But it sounded not just the thing; he wished he had not said it; was relieved when Juan seemed not to have heard.

"Don't you go faint," he said fiercely to Aunt Rebecca. Then, as fiercely to Mr. Ollin, "And don't you talk so much, hombre. You are kittens."

If some young whippersnapper had spoken to him like that at any other time, the air would have been electrified. But not now. Mr. Ollin stiffened, but then smiled. He could even accept it gratefully. And in his taciturn way he knew the boy said no more than was expedient. Of Lawrence Byron he made no mention. But he thought of something that almost took his breath when they reached the horses in the clump of madronos. "And don' you la-ady, slide off a horse, save?"

Rebecca was furious in spite of herself.

"Who told you that—Charlotte?"

"No matter. I come save you. You stick—stick—on horse."

She descended some. Her heart was too full anyway.

"Yes, I will stick, Juan," was her humble promise, and she kept it. She stuck on by the skin of her teeth. Mr. Ollin did a little better, but now and then feeling of his heart when Juan guided them over narrow and treacherous ledges and sudden steep descents along the trail through the velvety darkness. As horses will on such a march, hey seemed to step away, stop and breathe and go on again in unison. It was towards morning when the three arivved at the sheltered lookout where Charlotte and Lawrence Byron, waited, wrapped again as they had been the night before in the same blanket, the only one they possessed.

That was the spectacle that greeted Mr. Ollin's eyes. His daughter crawling out of a blanket also inhabited by a man as bearded and fierce-looking as a bandit, and running to cry over him and her aunt whose astonishment was as silent and great as was his. No scene was more touching, of broken family ties being retied; but then Mr. Ollin with returning signs of his old asperity turned his attention again to a disreputable figure that still wore the blanket. So did Aunt Rebecca stare.

"Who is that, Charlotte?" he asked.

"Yes, who is it?" echoed the aunt. "A bandit?"

Just reunited, it seemed the Ollins as a family would become disunited again through internal alienations set up by themselves. But the girl was equal to the occasion, and no longer afraid to make her stand. First they had spoken of him as an educated ne'er-do-well, and now a bandit. Lawrence Byron's easy laugh did not dull the barb of the insult for her. She was furious.

"Bandit?" she exclaimed indignantly; and then she laughed, too. "Why, yes, he is, if looks count. But it's Lawrence, too. Darling, come forward please, and let them see."

Commanded, Lawrence Byron came forward grinning like an animated scrubbing-brush. He shook hands with Mr. Ollin and Aunt Rebecca, then mentally as in other ways they drew away from each other.

"How did you get here?" as last barked Mr. Ollin. "You couldn't this soon even if you got Charlotte's message." And Lawrence Byron had to tell it all over again, and more, ending with—

"And by the by, Mr. Ollin. Realizing the plight you were in, while in Porto Cadero I took the liberty of wiring to friends of yours in Wall street. There will be some action I hope. Do you approve?"

Mr. Ollin was cheered at heart, but did not say if it received his indorsement.

"Why don't you be your real self, father, and say that you are awfully glad?" said Charlotte. "Because we are not over our troubles yet, and if we die Lawrence has come to die with us."

"I haven't said what I thought, have I?" And Aunt Rebecca pinched Charlotte—

"Give him time," she said. "Tyrants must die by their own hands."

"But you are a wee bit charitable, aren't you, auntie?"

"Don't ask me my opinion of any man!"

JUAN who lived hard and terribly, but thought only from the soul, looked from one to the other and wondered. At last he had stepped to the side of Lawrence Byron. "We go," he said.

On the trip back to the place where the car was hidden under a pile of hay, begun at early dawn, Charlotte rode tandem with Lawrence, Aunt Rebecca tandem with Juan, Mr. Ollin plugging along alone on the horse that virtually was his future son-in-law's. The three hard-faced women, and this time, three hard-faced men summering perpetually as they did in cotton garments that in the United States would have passed for pajamas, gave them more tortillas, fried eggs, frijoles in red running pepper and black mate tea. While the hungry ones ate the men were rattling in Spanish to Juan to be off with his strange party. "Look," they said at once. "You are a noble young vaquero afer our own heart, but you are not the king of the Andes. He will kill us!" A boy in years, but the power to rule and intimidate was already his. He paid them no attention, flashing his white teeth in that remarkable smile that was never a yes or a no for an answer.

Mr. Ollin asked himself as perhaps did the half-breed Indians why this young Juan, unlike them in every way, lifted even a hand to save them. And there was no solution except a reason and motive so deep and terrible, so perservering and unalterable as a purpose that, unlike love or patriotism that can wane, it had nothing but revenge for a name. Nothing more beautiful than that, but yet it exalted him, forgetting all else in a passion that consumed. His mother avenged, Don Juan Savilla dead as he would see him die, the power of the spirit that possessed him might go on and put a tottering republic in his grasp. At the head of a ragged but victorious army, the idol and elected of the people, he could still have only one motive—Girasol! And a half-savage's, half-grandee's, reinstatement of himself, one in the wilderness, one in the capital. Only as yet he had not seen himself doing all that. Little by little was the vision to unfold until he saw. As the inspired see! And something else, as vital, as inspiring, had been the advent of the Americans in his life. With their show of culture and pride were they assisting him, bringing him out, as nothing else could, speeding his understanding of all that he would be himself. Getting ideas, wonderful and dazzling ideas that could give him the courage to say even to a priest, ouida! Then the swift action on action—ah, the glory of it! He was already waging a war that nothing but his death might bring to an end.

Lawrence Byron, dreamer of more civilized schools, was saying, admiringly and fearfully, "It must be guided, that's all—this genius! Guided—or it would be the rise of another despot!"

CHAPTER 20.

NOR was the king of the Andes idle for long. Juan's appearance at the wedding and his spectacular rescue of Charlotte had come like a thunderbolt, making him more of a hero among the natives. But Don Juan swore it would be a short-lived glory for the boy. Superstitious, still thinking of Girasol who had died on her knees, yet by morning he was a raging beast ready to commit any crime on the calendar. He would kill Juan as he had killed Pancho, and he would still be the indisputable lord of the wilderness. He would also get back the girl. And seeing how the wind was bowing, Father Pollito got astraddle his little blue-colored Spanish mule already burdened with a forty-pound saddle that had a high silver-mounted pommel on which he could rest his fat hands as on the altar top of a sacristy praying-box, and hit the trail, the animal's bell tinkling of the holy orders of its rider and beseeching a right of way. He was not waiting for the belated traders' caravan, but was going out to meet it, bless it, and anything or anybody else who felt the spiritual need of his benign smile.

Don Juan, thinking he knew just what Juan would do, had perhaps already accomplished, and knowing El Lobo would not be in his camp but on the trail of the traders' caravan, sent word to the bandit that if the Americans got safely out of the country his own head would pay the forfeit. He would have the soldiers come up and wipe him out. It was a proclamation not to be disregarded, and El Lobo cursed and never looked so afraid before in his vilainous life. "Kill Juan," read the message. "Get him, or die yourself." So the caravan proceeded on its journey unmolested, and with it Father Pollito.

El Lobo's vagabond band turned back upon a more hazardous errand, and dissensions rose among his own fold. Some of his men openly refused to have anything to do with Juan's murder, no matter what his breach of the country's etiquette. They threw dice to get out of it, wrangled and fought, and said bravo, bravo admiringly when the news came he had already slipped into camp and rescued Mr. Ollin and his sister.

A bandit chief was in a terrible predicament. He did not relish the idea of killing the boy either. Improbable it was he would even have the chance, or that his men would let him. "Look," he said, "he covers his path like a general. It runs four ways already—and where? Mother of God, does Don Juan think I have no soul? Amar y saber, no puede ser—to love and be wise is impossible. All for a girl he is this great fool!" It took a lot of whisky to support him in his trouble of mind. But they at last got under way to at least apprehend the Americans, knowing nothing of the fourth party, Lawrence Byron, as neither did the king of the Andes.

The hurricane veered in its course, the new theater of action taking place in the arid foot-hills somewhere in the silent heart of which was the intrepid Juan with his charges. First he moved as if bound for Apulco via the snow passes of the Andes, then diverged again eastward as if set for the lowlands of the "little rivers' country," marking the upper regions of the Amazon. Then he double-tracked for Porto Cadero straight as an arrow. Nothing short of the cleverest strategy—and who knows but that he imagined himself that, a great general maneuvering for position and point of vantage? He succeeded, the puzzled and almost gratified El Lobo going in rings a day behind him. The pride of his victory burned in young Juan's face.

THE Ollin car, however, was faring to no advantage in the awful trek. It was ready for the junk pile, the gas running low, and certain it was they would have to eventually discard it; but still it would turn a wheel, Lawrence Byron making it go through now and then with a last wheeze it stopped as if forever. But they did not dare stop—not even must that car stop. They kept going. If the halted, any moment the shadow of the king of the Andes might fall across their path. Juan did not say this, but Lawrence Byron and the Ollins knew it. The father and aunt were sick and weary, but neither did they want to stop. They lay back in the rear seat of the car, more dead than alive, seldom speaking, hardly knowing what was going on. Lawrence Byron did most of the talking, to cheer the older people. It was, or could have been, a funny, dust-smeared, beard-covered grin he bestowed on them.

The shadow of the king of the Andes was not far behind them then. Distrusting the sincerity of El Lobo's efforts, he set out himself with a handful of cholos to execute the order in person. He preferred somebody else killed the boy, but he could not take chances. Besides a rifle, he had with him the same huge pistol with which he had shot poor Pancho, and no one knew how many others. There was no telling how far this murderous mood would carry him, either. One thing certain: the boy must die. To let him go on living was a menace to his own safety and power in the country; it might even lead to another revolution. And God deliver him from an enemy of his own blood! Also, too late it was to attempt to gain the boy's confidence and love. Anyway, a Savilla's confidence was never won; and the boy was half Savilla. Overtures were out of the question. Juan would have rejected them with that characteristic smile of his and flash of his handsome teeth. Too long had he put off the truce, and now the devil was working for his destruction through his own son. But he must circumvent the devil, and kill the boy. Juan must not be permitted to hew a path of greatness for himself. He must not be allowed to even live another day.

In this and all-consuming desire of his, Don Juan almost forgot the Americans. It was now a feud between him and Juan, and the natives were getting excited over it and secretly throwing their support to the boy. Juan had known the tide would flow that way, and that he would become the central figure and hero of the arena. He had also known El Lobo and his cut-throats would likewise forget the Americans in this new and dramatic turn of affairs; and that they would not want to see him defeated. For even cut-throats love a fearless man. And if he killed the king of the Andes, quickly would all of them flock to his banner. He would accept them, but only temporarily. The hour would come when he would say there must be no brigandage in his country. He would set up laws of justice for the gente. He would be a despot, but a new kind of despot—a despot like Diaz of Mexico, welcoming the foreigners, promoting industries, holding down religious rule and offering education to all. These things he and Lawrence Byron had talked about. Men like James. B. Ollin were good for the country. He was but a boy, but he could see it. A poet from New York had convinced him. His soul was filled with a fierce and triumphant joy. Boastingly he could have told the Americans it was no longer they the king of the Andes wanted. It was he—Juan, the Little Wanderer. But he did not boast of it.

This then was the new situation which even Lawrence Byron or the Ollins had not thoroughly grasped. It was also God working in His more devious ways for the greatest good for the greatest number.

Night overtaking them. they struck camp on high ground in a thicket, the car hidden with them in the brush, Juan and Lawrence Byron taking turns at standing guard. They were on the march again before sunup, and with very little to eat. They went on for another half day, no signs of either Don Juan or El Lobo.

"Bueno," said Juan, the smile of a conqueror in his eyes. "We will make it first to the spring, where they, too, must come for water—and we shall hold the place!"

THEY made the spring ahead of their pursuers, as he said, filled the thermos bottles, watered the horses, and moved on, the tracks of the car and animals purposely left discernable in the dust to make it appear they were still in full flight towards Porto Cadero. A short distance beyond they turned from the road back into the brush, double-tracking again. They lay in ambush on higher ground almost above the spring, or water-hole, the car a mile away hidden in the same brush. Lawrence Byron was the first to understand and show his admiration. Safe from the enemy's fire, two men up there could almost put an army to flight. In a cul-de-sac like that, the enemy would have no alternative but to flee. He grew serious and looked at Charlotte.

"You see what it is going to be—and it is no time for theorizing. Stay with your father and aunt farther back in the rocks, and I will help Juan. We must shoot to hit. To shoot and not hit would be calamity."

Charlotte turned pale.

"But, Lawrence, it means you might get hit!"

"Certainly. But that is all in the game, Charlotte. However, I hadn't given it any consideration."

"I will stay with you. I want one of the rifles!"

Juan regarded her in pleased amazement. "Ah, senorita," he said; but shook his head. "We will go down to where they are, too. You cannot do that."

"Why can I not?" And Juan shrugged. Lawrence Byron ordered her back, but she followed with one of the heavy rifles. "It's together! You forget, Lawrence!" And he caught her in his arms and kissed her, saying no more. She won.

The waiting was torturing. But they went through an hour of it. talk desultory. Said Lawrence to Charlotte:

"We are to shoot for cholos. And I know what you can do with a rifle when you try, Charlotte. Juan claims the king of the Andes for himself, and will first shoot his horse from under him. Even Juan does not like the idea of killing some of the cholos, but—We will need two of their horses."

Charlotte was pale and trembling again. She was about to lose her courage at the thought of their actually killing people. But she got herself together, saying:

"But why kill Don Juan's horse. and let him escape?"

"He won't. But that's Juan's end of it. Don't try to understand it. Just wait. It's his wish, and I respect it. But if it is El Lobo's gang that comes first, we are not to shoot at all. Because he does not believe any of El Lobo's men would kill him, or us. They would probably ride on and never find us. So, you see, to only save ourselves, we have tried to hit upon the safest plan, and at the same time the most humane. It appeals to Juan—and to me. He killed Gregorio only when he had to. And he could have killed Don Juan at the same time, but did not."

"Why did you not kill him at the wedding, Juan?" she asked curiously.

But Juan did not say. Only that shrug, and "Some'time—perhaps this time. Quien save?"

BUT it did not turn out this way, for Juan changed the plans again. He thought of another way, one that appealed to him even more strongly. He saw what the girl suffered in the thought of taking human life, the lives of the cholos who really could not hlep themselves. Until now he had looked upon her in a kind of savage pity and disdain. she was too soft. Now he liked her for that softness. It was the way a woman should be—the way hereafter he wanted all women. He knew, too, that Lawrence Byron did not like the thought of killing people. And he was right. There should be no cholos killed. With him it would still be guerra al cuchillo, but single-handed, alone.

Alone, he had gone to the hacienda and rescued the girl, not for a moment doubting the success of his adventure. Now he would do the same thing. Go down alone to the spring and fight the battle himself, no matter how many against him.

Lawrence Byron received the suggestion as a personal insult. If he had seemed to hesitate at killing a few cholos, he did not waver any longer. The two got into an argument over it, Charlotte looking on with mixed emotions. But how much more she loved Lawrence for it, telling Juan he would not think of being left behind.

Juan won out after a compromise. He would go down to the spring alone and there hide. If it was Don Juan with a band of cholos, he would step out and cover them while they were around the spring drinking, their guns on their saddles as he knew would be the case. He would step out between them and the horses, and they would be at his mercy. So would the king of the Andes. However, if anything should happen, which Juan was not counting on, Lawrence Byron could shoot the king of the Andes from above. "Don't miss," was all Juan asked. "The trail to Porto Cadero you know—don't wait!"

That was not the way it really happened either, though Juan went down alone and hid himself by the spring. Left behind, Charlotte and Lawrence Byron watched him slipping down the brush-covered slope until he disappeared. Then Lawrence Byron struck the ground with the butt of his rifle. "Thunder, this is cowardly!" But Charlotte restrained him, and he waited. Next it was Don Juan and his armed cholos—eight of them. They came up the road and stopped at the spring, dismounting and leaving their guns on their saddles. They stood off until the king of the Andes quenched his own thirst, then all went down on their knees by the little limpid pool of desert water. A girl's heart bobbed up in her throat. But for a few agonizing moments nothing happened. No signs of Juan. "Thunder—" began Lawrence Byron, on the verge of shooting. Then they saw Juan materialize as if from the thin air. They saw the startled Don Juan make a motion as if to get his revolver, then instead elevate his hands above his head. Next the speechless, awe-struck cholos obediently were forming themselves in a line, all hands up.

"I can't keep out of it—I'm not the man!" and Lawrence Byron was on the way down, Charlotte behind him. "He has them covered, and I can get there!" A shower of loose gravel and stones heralding their arrival, they were on the scene, both with rifles ready.

Not waiting for instructions, Lawrence Byron jumped to gather guns from the saddles, Charlotte helping him. The guns stacked in a pile on the ground between them, they turned to see what Juan was doing.

THEIR hands still in the air it was evident the trembling natives were not thinking of making any sort of resistance. Doubtful if even that was their inclination. Juan was talking to them, and by their tense, attentive expressions, together with the look of rage and consternation on Don Juan's face, colorless now, they could well guess something dramatic and unusual was taking place, all because of what Juan was saying. Charlotte may have thought she had learned something of the ruthlessness, the passions and hates, the sins and strange sublimities of the people of the Andes and Pampas, mixed with their inordinate love of colors, rosary beads, images of saints, poetry, music, wails of misery and clatter and rhythm of dance songs—but now she was to see and learn more, a page some will say should be torn out of this story as too realistic, gruesome and terrible for print—of a father against son, son against father, of savage against grandee, grandee against savage, of the testing of endurance of pain and physical strength of which nothing but beasts are capable; of revenge made a religion, of the genius and fearlessness of a boy pitted against the cunning and devilry of a man famous for his valor in war, cruelty in the administration of wilderness law, success with women, and who with his landed power, wealth and two-hemisphere education had made himself the king of the Andes from a time when he was no older, or not much older, than this boy, his own son, who now challenged him with all the fearlessness and eloquence of another Savilla, all the indomitable courage and natural ferocity of a son of the Incas—only the page cannot be torn out: it must stay.

There they stood facing each other, enemies unto death, but in face and form as much alike as twins. They had the same lustrous black eyes and wavy raven hair, with the lovelock in front. The same slightly beaked noses with the quivering, sensitive nostrils. The same slender hands and feet and lithe, pantherlike bodies, matched as two dazzling black diamonds. Juan, menacing the same kind of long-barreled pistol with which Don Juan had killed Pancho, was speaking. Don Juan's revolver, deadly and of unique pattern, lay in the bottom of the limpid pool of water where it had been knocked from his hand by a bullet from Juan's, a feat that in itself was enough to cause the natives to fall down in worship.

"I am Juan, Girasol's son," he was saying to the cringing line of cholos. "At heart you are my friends, and I am your friend. For I, too, am of the gente. But Don Juan Savilla, king of the Andes he calls himself, is not your true friend. He is a great man in the Andes and on the Pampas, but Juan, Girasol's son, does not fear him. He killed my mother, and now he would kill me. And he would kill the Americanos, which is not right. You came to help him because you were made to come. But Juan, Girasol's son, will not kill any of you for that, because you cannot defy such a cruel master. But I, son of Girasol, can defy him — Look!" Flashing two knives from the sash at his waist, he sent one ringing over the rocks to the feet of the pale king of the Andes. "Look! Hombres, amigos, friends! Let him take the dare. It is Juan's and the king of the Andes' fight. Not yours!" and the eyes of the boy burned into the eyes of the man. "If he kills me you shall never taste the wine of freemen's liberty! But if I should kill him, the beloved patria is yours. I am your leader and friend!"

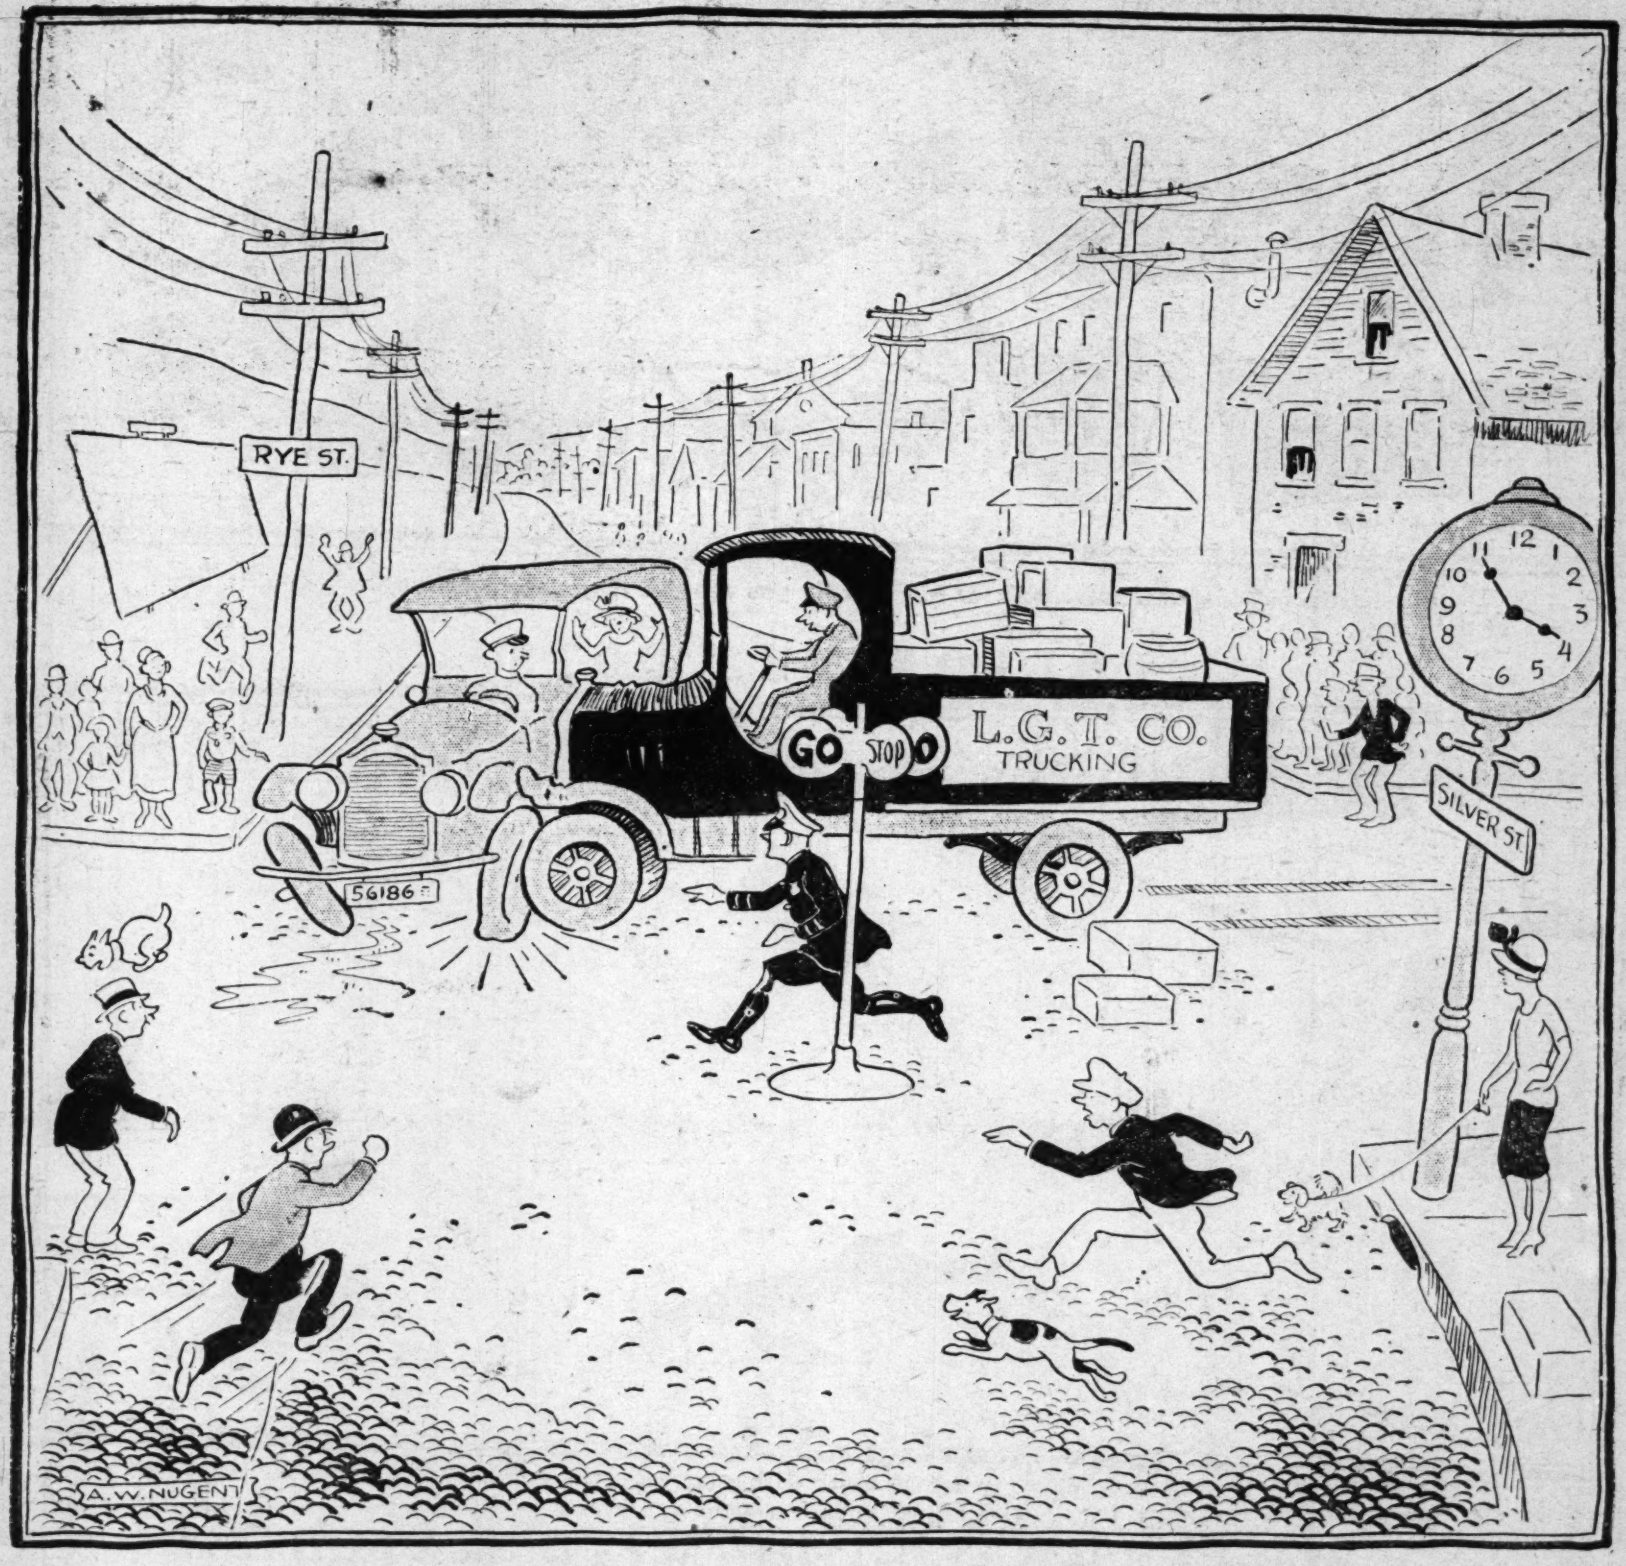
ARE YOU A GOOD REPORTER?



Try this test and see how accurate and thorough you are in reporting the facts that you see. Hang up this page on the wall and take a good look at it. There is obviously an automobile accident happening. When you have looked for thirty seconds, see if you can answer these questions:

What sort of car was struck by the truck?

How many people were in it?

What time was it when the accident happened?

At what corner did it occur?

Which had the right of way, the truck or the car?

Is there any evidence that the truck or the car tried to stop before the smash occurred?

To what company did the truck belong?

What was the number of the car?

If you can write fairly accurate answers to these questions, you may congratulate yourself upon your power of orderly observation.

All of the above objects can be defined in words of five letters. When the words have been rightly guessed and written one below the other in their proper order, their initials will spell the name of a Canadian city.

LIGHTING THE BOULEVARD

A Puzzle by Sam Loyd

After the trustees of a small township had voted an appropriation to provide for a fixed number of electric light poles to skirt the main highway through their bailiwick, the Ways and Means Committee made a report to the effect that if the poles were set 440 yards apart, as had been suggested, they would need three more poles, whereas if they were erected three-quarters of a mile apart there would be three poles left over.

There were the usual divergences of opinion that are so familiar to all small town meetings, and after listening to the individual view of each trustee, the chairman decided to settle the matter himself.

"Go ahead and use the poles provided for," he ordered; "have them an equal distance apart and see that you use all of them."

If the chairman's orders were carried out, and the extreme poles stood on the town's boundary lines, what was the distance between poles?

HOW TO SELL A USED CAR

By SAM LOYD

A heady fellow in the "used car" line sold me one of his mechanical has-beens for $100. Then when the fellow who bought it found he couldn't get it out of the garage, he sold it back to the dealer for $80. Ten minutes later the dealer sold it again for $90. The second buyer towed it away, but the dealer expects him back later on with a proposition.

Now, in the mean time, who can figure out just how much profit the dealer made on that car—as far as we can tell from the above data?

When the facts were given to a representative group of automobile dealers, they mentally separated into three factions, with three different answers to the puzzling question. What is your conclusion?

Let us assume that each stick is an inch long. Then in the first figure—a square—we see how the twelve sticks may be arranged to inclose 9 square inches. In the second figure, the twelve sticks are arranged to inclose 8 square inches. In the third figure, they are made to inclose 7 square inches. In the fourth figure 6 square inches are inclosed.

Finally, in the fifth formation, only 5 square inches are inclosed.

Now comes the puzzling question: How can the 12 match sticks be arranged in a continuous fence, 12 match sticks in length, so that the inclosed area shall be equal to 4 square inches, assuming that each stick is one inch in length?

It is a perfectly fair problem, without trick of any sort, and no measuring instruments are necessary other than what measuring may be done with the sticks themselves.

SUNDAY MAY 17th, 1925

"THE PATH OF GLORY LEADS BUT TO THE GRAVE—"

and it was in glory—glory of doing their duty—that six Atlanta firemen lost their lives in the Jass warehouse fire on Decatur street and were honored in death by the south's greatest city when public services were held last Sunday in the city auditorium. This impressive picture of the services was made by Kenneth Rogers, Constitution staff photographer, as a grieving, reverent crowd of representative citizens prayed in silent tribute to the heroism of the men whose bodies lay quietly in the row of flower-decked caskets.

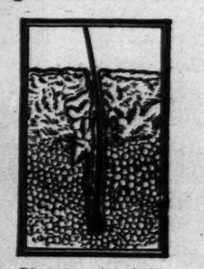
Amazing relief from the Embarrassment of gray hair
Now You Can Restore Natural Youthful Color by Replacing the Missing Pigment
How often have you been unfairly penalized by the gray in your hair? How often have you seen the admiring glances of men turn to another woman—no older—no more entertaining than yourself—yet infinitely more youthful and alluring because of the wonderful coloring of her hair?
No longer need you feel embarrassed or worried on account of your gray hair!
Fashionable society women who spend their winters in Florida have used for years a formula of a famous beauty specialist, Mrs. K. M. Lea. This formula gives remarkable results! It penetrates the scalp. It replaces the missing pigment in the tiny cells of the hair and restores its youthful, natural color.
Now Mrs. Lea offers you this formula, known as Graynix.
A Scalp Food
Graynix penetrates the scalp, and stimulates the roots of the hair. It is a real scalp food. Your hair takes on new life and lustre. Its growth is promoted. Dandruff and itching is stopped. Falling hair is checked.
Restores Natural Shade
Graynix is a clean, colorless liquid. It combines with elements already in your hair—supplying pigment which restores the natural, youthful shade. It does not stain. Unlike other preparations, there is no inconvenience of daily combing! No brushing! No waiting for weeks until you can wash or shampoo your hair.
Satisfaction Guaranteed
Mrs. Lea positively guarantees that you will be pleased with Graynix. In all her experience she has never had a single complaint. On the contrary, hundreds of women have expressed their appreciation of the remarkable improvement in their appearance from the use of Graynix.
If you use Graynix according to instructions and are not completely satisfied, your druggist will cheerfully refund the purchase price.
Accept a Present from Mrs. Lea
In order for you to convince yourself about Graynix, your druggist has been instructed to give you a generous sample bottle absolutely free. Apply as directed upon a few locks of hair. Within a week you will notice remarkable results. And remember, a complete treatment restores every strand of hair to its natural youthful color. Price, $1.25 per bottle at leading druggists.
The Graynix Company
Tampa, Florida



Pigment — the coloring matter in your hair—comes from the hair bulb in the scalp. Graynix penetrates deep below the surface replacing the missing pigment at its source.

"Mother, see Margie's bright blue Middy"
"My white middies look so shabby. Won't you dye them the pretty colors like Margie's mother does hers? She says it's so easy with Sunset."
The colorful possibilities of Sunset-dyeing are a wonderful help in keeping girls' and boys' school clothes fresh and good-looking. Neat attractive clothes increase self-respect.
Sunset's brighter colors make a welcome change in little girls' middies, skirts, dresses and outerwear. The children are pleased, and you are saved the worry and expense of new things for them.
Sunset Navy Blue and Dark Brown are fine for little boys' heavy clothes. These deep, rich colors will cover evenly all lighter shades. Sunset-dyeing freshens the texture and adds to its life.
SUNSET
Soap Dyes
It's a delight to dye with Sunset's fast colors. They dye all fabrics in one dye bath, clean as they dye, do not stain hands or harm utensils. Ask to see Color Card in drug, department and general stores, also for free folder of Sunset recipes of fashionable "Season's Colors."

Mayonnaise—

So easy to make that a man can do it!

Few things are easier to make than good mayonnaise.

Wesson Oil and a fresh egg—beaten together and seasoned to taste—and you have a mayonnaise you'll be proud of!

Quickest results are obtained if the oil and egg are not too cold. The ordinary temperature of your kitchen is just right.

Break the egg in a bowl—

Add about a tablespoonful of Wesson Oil.

Beat vigorously with an egg beater or a fork—until the oil and egg are thoroughly mixed. How long will that take? Perhaps while you count fifty—not as fast as you can count but as fast as you can beat.

Add another tablespoonful of oil and beat again—vigorously. Two tablespoonfuls and beat again. Two or three more and beat again.

Your mayonnaise will begin to thicken a little.

Then add Wesson Oil four or five tablespoonfuls at a time, beating well after each addition—until your mayonnaise is as thick and stiff as you want it. The more oil you beat into it the thicker your mayonnaise will be—about two cupfuls is the usual amount. [Never add more than a quarter cupful of oil at any one time.]

After your mayonnaise is made, add seasoning. Mix a half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful each of sugar and mustard, a generous pinch each of paprika and red pepper—add a tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar and stir until the salt and sugar are dissolved—then pour into the mayonnaise and beat well.

With Wesson Oil Mayonnaise as a base, you can make many other delicious salad dressings in a very few minutes.

A convenient method used by many women who like to vary their salads each day is to make a pint of Wesson Oil Mayonnaise, cover it tightly in a fruit jar and put it in the refrigerator where it will keep and at the end of the week be as fresh and good as the day it was made. Then from day to day as a different kind of dressing is desired a portion of the plain Mayonnaise is mixed with the desired ingredients to make the fancier dressing. One day you can make Russian Dressing, the next Thousand Island, and so on throughout the week. There are many variations of Wesson Oil Mayonnaise. If you would like to have the recipes for some of these, write to the Wesson Oil People, Savannah, Georgia, asking for the booklet "Salad Dressings."

Crystal Bath Is Different

Some alcohols are denatured with chemicals that are positively injurious to the skin.

Crystal Bath is different! It contains 95 per cent grain alcohol and, among other healthful ingredients, one best known to Skin Specialists for cleansing and beautifying the skin.

BEAUTY Depends On Clean HEALTHY SKIN

No longer is it necessary to dread unpowdered moments. There's never embarrassment if you have used Crystal Bath—no greasy, dust-clogged pores, no blackheads or pimples, no shiny nose.

Crystal Bath Cleanses, Refreshes and Beautifies Your Skin

If you wish to see an instant improvement in your loveliness make this simple test:

Go over your face, neck and hands with a soft cloth that has been saturated in Crystal Bath Alcohol. Notice the dust, grease and impurities that come off on the cloth. You will then know that Crystal Bath cleanses your skin more thoroughly than any soap, cream or lotion.

Crystal Bath also reduces enlarged pores. Its antiseptic and cleansing properties remove blackheads, pimples and skin irritations. It gently bestirs the tiny capillaries, induces blood circulation and brings the glow of health and beauty to your skin.

JIM'S BEEN IN HARD LUCK, LATELY-

YEA BO! I'LL SAY.

SOCKED A GUY AND BUSTED A KNUCKLE-

YEP.- AND- RHEUMATISM.

HAD A COUPLA BARKING MOLARS.

YEP. AND BUMPED HIS KOKO A HARD BUMP.

I THINK HE'LL BE ENGAGED TO THAT JANE OF HIS BEFORE LONG.

WHAT MAKES YOU THINK SO?

BECAUSE HE SEEMS TO BE IN FOR NOTHING ELSE BUT HARD LUCK.

MOON MULLINS.

WHY YOU IDIOT! THAT PORTRAIT IS PRICELESS!!

SAY HE KNOWS WHAT HE'S DOIN', JUDGE- YOU OUGHTA SEE TH' SWELL MOUSTACHES HE DRAWS ON TH' LADIES IN TH TOOTH PASTE ADS.

YOUNG MAN - I AM JUDGE PIERPONT BELCHER AND I'M GIVING A PARTY AT MY TOWN HOUSE TO-NIGHT- DO YOU KNOW A PROFESSIONAL ACTOR I COULD GET TO COME IN AND GIVE ME A FEW CRITICISMS ON AN ACT I HAVE WORKED UP FOR THE ENTERTAINMENT OF MY GUESTS? I WILL PAY HIM $10.

WELL, I USETA BE ON TH' STAGE, MYSELF.

SURE TELL HIM ABOUT TH' TIME THEY THROWED EGGS AT YOU IN PEORY, MOON.

OH BOY! AS HUNGRY AS I AM, IF I ONY HAD A STUMMICK AS BIG AS MR BELCHER'S - WHAT I COULD DO TO THIS LAY-OUT.

BY TH' WAY, WHERE DID MY KID BROTHER GO TO, MR. BELCHER?

OH I TOLD HIM TO GO IN THE DINING ROOM AND GET SOMETHING TO EAT.

PIERPONT!

EXCUSE ME JUST A MINUTE, MR. MULLINS- I WILL RETURN IMMEDIATELY AND REHEARSE MY ACT FOR YOU.

LOOK! THE SANDWICHES, THE PICKLES, THE CAKE, EVEN THE ICE-CREAM - SOMEBODY'S EVEN BEEN INTO IT.

WELL, DON'T ACCUSE THAT LITTLE BOY HE COULDN'T HAVE EATEN A THIRD OF ALL THAT. THIS PUNCH GOES IN THE OTHER ROOM.

WHERE'S YOUR MANNER'S AT, KAYO? WHY DIDN'T YOU TAKE OFF YOUR HAT WHEN YOU SEEN THAT LADY??

I COULDN'T SEE - I HAD IT FULL OF SANDWICHES AN' THINGS

ALL RIGHT, MR. MULLINS- I WILL START MY ACT IN A MINUTE, NOW.

TAKE YOUR TIME, JUDGE. TAKE YOUR TIME.

SWELL!

GREAT!

CLAP! CLAP! CLAP!

ATTA BOY! JUDGE- ATTA BOY!!

WELL?

YOUR ACT'S A WOW JUDGE! NOW WHAT COMES NEXT?

SAY, MOON - I DON'T THINK YOU HAVE SO MUCH FUN AS I DO WHEN YOU GO AROUND THEM SWELL PEOPLE'S PLACES-

WELL, UNTIL I GOT KICKED OUT I THINK I HAD AS GOOD A TIME AS YOU DID AT JUDGE BELCHER'S THIS AFTERNOON, KAYO.

THEN HOW COME YOU AIN'T GOT TH' STUMMICK ACHE TONIGHT?

GASOLINE ALLEY

OOH LOOKIE! WAIT MAYBE SKEEX GET SOME.

NICE-A BLOON ASKA DA POP.

QUICK, UNCA WALT! TEN CENTS-BLOON MAN!

WELL, I'LL SEE IF WE HAVE A DIME ON US.

SKEEX WANT NICE YELLOW ONE-YA, THAT ONE!

NOW REMEMBER, IF YOU LET GO OF THE STRING IT WILL GO ON UP AND YOU'LL LOSE IT. I'LL TIE A LOOP FOR YOUR FINGER.

WON'T IT LOOK FUNNY TO SEE PAL GOIN' UP IN THE AIR!

HE AIN'T GOIN' UP!

ATTABOY PAL EAT 'EM UP!

NO PAL, DON'T RUN AWAY WITH SKEEX BLOON.

WELL, THERE IT GOES!

NUDDA BLOON, UNCA WALT. PAL LET GO OF STRING!

ROSES FRAGRANT POSIES - BY INK

I JUST SAW TOM AND LEARNED THAT YOU BOUGHT ME SOME FLOWERS -

NOW, WHAT'S THE IDEA? DID YOU THINK I DIED?

NO, NO, - AUSTEN,

IT WAS THIS WAY, - I WAS BROKE, WANTED TO SEND POSIES TO MY SWEETIE, -

YOUR FRIEND THE FLORIST FIXED ME UP A NICE BUNCH. - THEN I SAID TO HIM —

"I'M BUYING THESE FOR AUSTEN, CHARGE THEM TO HIS ACCOUNT."
